HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

BY IDAH MCGLONE GIBSON

At the Hospital.

I did not stop longer than to hurl the words, "Wait for me," at the taxi driver and rushed into the hospital.

"Can you tell me how Mr. Kenneth Halsey is?" I inquired.

"He is conscious," answered a nurse. "I have just come from his room."

"Is his father with him? Is the son able to talk?"

"I left him talking with his father," she answered.

"Did— I commenced, and then I thought how ridiculous it was for me to ask questions of the nurse when she had probably left the room so that Kenneth and his father could talk."

"Will you take me to them?"

She hesitated a moment, and then asked:

"Are you his wife?"

I looked at her in surprise and I answered, "No."

"I can hardly take anyone up there now. I have orders against it."

"But I have important messages for Mr. Halsey, Sr. However, they will probably have to wait until he has finished talking to his son. Will you let him know I am here?"

"With pleasure, Miss," I gave her my name and she hurried away.

I drew a long sigh of relief. It was something to know that Kenneth was still alive and conscious. I even had to smile a little as I thought of the nurse asking me if I were his wife.

"Poor chap," I said to myself. "It will probably be many a day before he has a wife." I felt sure that after this terrible experience and after noting how heartbroken his father was over it, he would probably defer to his father's wishes.

Presently a white-robed nurse came to me and said:

"Mr. Halsey sent me to say that he would be down presently. My patient sent you his love, and begged me to let him see you for a moment. However, the doctors said that his interview with his father would be about all he could stand now."

"Do you think he has a chance?" I asked tremblingly.

"I am not allowed to pass opinions," she began, and then noting my downcast face, she said:

"Yes, my dear, I do think he has some chance. Every minute that he stays conscious is that much in his favor."

"Oh, I wish I could see him."

"You wouldn't want to see him, my dear," said Mr. Halsey who had just then come up. "The poor boy looks as though he were dying, and his eyes are sunken, and he breathes with great effort. Drops of perspiration stand all over his forehead and his lips are blue."

I must have looked as though I were going to faint, for the nurse threw her arms around me, and said:

"I have seen patients look worse than that Mr. Halsey and recover."

"I hope so, I sincerely hope so," exclaimed Ken's father with a groan.

"Haven't you any hope?" I asked.

"I don't know, my dear. I am all broken up. I know that something has happened to Ken that I think is worse than death."

"What do you mean? His mind isn't affected is it?"

"No, but I think that consciousness has brought him great remorse and mental agony."

"Did he injure someone?"

"No, my dear. He only broke my heart."

"Dear Mr. Halsey, please tell me what you mean. I cannot stand being left in the dark any longer."

"Didn't I tell you?" asked Ken's father in surprise.

"Then I noticed that the poor man was so distraught that he thought he had told me of the terrible thing that weighed on his mind."

"Kenneth married Grace Cameron sometime between the hours of 12 and 4 this morning."

Tomorrow—Mr. Halsey's Story.

GLENDALE NEWS.

After 48 hours rain, we regret to say, it is raining. Cow creek is rising, and we may be facing a snow storm.

Our city is peaceful and prosperity is in evidence, the general health very good, and everybody busy.

We heard with deep regret that Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Coates, lately of this city, who were living at Mt. Hebron, Calif., met the awful sorrow of having their home burned on Monday and their five-month-old son perished in the fire. They have the sympathy of all in their sorrow.

The bazaar given by the Ladies' Aid of Olivet church will be held on the 29th inst. at the Economy store, commencing at 11 a. m. A fine line of ready-to-wear articles will be on sale, also a cooked food sale, and contributions of groceries and fruits will be placed on sale.

Mrs. M. Anspoker, president of the Ladies' Aid, entertained the ladies of the purchasing and cutting committees at her home on Wednesday, as follows: First committee, Mrs. J. E. Clark, Mrs. G. C. Hickok, Mrs. F. R. Miller; second committee, Mrs. J. W. Johnson, Mrs. Lillie Jones, Mrs. M. C. Webb.

Special music at Olivet church last Sunday drew a large congregation. Also Pastor Webb delivered a splendid sermon. Music on the piano, Mrs. Guy C. Hickok; music on the violin, Mrs. Kellogg, and the church choir.

The Ladies' Aid of the Lutheran church were entertained at the home of Mrs. Cunningham, and a delicious luncheon was served by the hostess. Many new names were added to the society.

E. F. Hayes is at home again, and while his hand is improving, he informed us he would have to go to Salem again for further treatment.

A. J. Snodgrass, a well known resident of this city, who lately went to Medford, is very seriously ill there. His wife and family are all with him, and we hope to soon be able to note his recovery.

D. W. Johnson, of Mt. Ruben, has spent two weeks visiting friends in this city.

FUNERAL SUNDAY

The funeral of the late A. G. Young will be held on Sunday at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The funeral will be held at the home and interment will take place in the Oakland cemetery. A number of people from this city will attend.

Mrs. Louis Albert Banks left this morning for Portland, where she expects to visit for a few days.

ENGLAND HAS A NEW CLASS

"New Poor" is the Problem There Now—Humdrumness of Life is Their Tragedy.

England has no nouveau riche—the "new poor" is the class most referred to in England today, according to Miss Clarissa Spencer who has just returned from London as representative of the overseas department of the Y. W. C. A. In addition to England Miss Spencer visited European countries to further the work of the Y. W. C. A. in explaining their peoples one to the other through the medium of their women.

"Not starvation, nor homelessness, but the humdrumness of life is the tragedy of a great portion of English young women," Miss Spencer says. "Young men are few."

"For most of the girls who had been engaged to be married and for many who had just married at the opening of the war, life now holds little but the long years ahead. Some of them, of course, will marry. But many more will brave the endless succession of days, each the same color as the last."

Few English girls are idle. Most of them earn their living now. What has struck Miss Spencer so forcibly is that work, food and shelter become meaningless to the vast number of England's girls who no longer look ahead to homes of their own.

Miss Spencer believes that not so many English girls are coming to this country as are going to England's own colonies.

TELESCOPIC CAMERA IN ANDES

Largest Photographic Apparatus in the World Has 24-inch Lens.

The South American station of Harvard university's observatory, tucked away in the Peruvian Andes, near the city of Arequipa, in the old Inca empire, boasts of the largest photographic apparatus in the world. It is a huge telescopic camera with a 24-inch lens which has been of great aid to science in its observations of the southern skies.

The station was founded 90 years ago, and is located near the base of the famous Andean volcano, Misti. The Arequipuan Indians, descendants of the Inca civilization, frequently speak of themselves as the sons and daughters of old Misti. It is said the Indians in the surrounding country still worship the mountain with such reverence, regarding it as the source of earthquakes which often are felt in the region. The volcano erupted seven years ago.

Superstitions in regard to the mountain date back to prehistoric times. The ruins of the ancient pagan temples, a writer says, have been found in the crater of the volcano, and even today near the top may be seen a great iron cross, placed there in 1477, when a party of Spanish priests exorcised and pleaded with it not to erupt again and destroy their cities.

The clear atmosphere of the Arequipa region is said to have afforded an excellent site for an observing station.

German "Booby Traps."

At the start of the reconstruction work in the devastated coal region about Lens, France, the French were taught by several disasters that the retreating Germans, before flooding mines, had concealed along the walls numbered "booby traps," says Popular Mechanics. Consequently, in order that the divers, charged with preliminary inspections, may "look before they leap," the government recently purchased from England an interesting apparatus for submarine photography. Lowered down the flooded shaft, this apparatus illuminates a ten-foot zone; then, as switches are pressed at the mouth of the shaft, it photographs simultaneously each of the four walls.

The Best Thing He Did.

A melancholy looking man entered the establishment of a photographer. "I should like to have a picture of myself weeping beside my wife's grave," he explained.

"I fear I have not the necessary accessories here," said the photographer. Then he added, facetiously, "Couldn't we arrange to have the portrait made at the grave itself?"

"No," said the man; "that's in New York state. It would be too expensive to go there. Just you fix up some kind of a grave here in the shop. I could weep on that. It's no trouble for me to weep anywhere."—Everybody's Magazine.

Washing Machine Activity.

Next to the automobile manufacturers, the makers of washing machines are now the greatest consumers of copper. The utility companies, which in normal times are large users of copper, cannot buy much now because they can't get the money. But washing machines are being turned out by thousands. In an effort to meet the shortage of labor, and copper enters largely into the construction of most of the washing machines.

Postmaster Finds Action Necessary

It is rumored that a prominent Melrose farmer is preparing to file a very voluminous complaint with the post office department and accompany the complaint with a claim for damages, and thereby hang a tale. It appears that yesterday the local postmaster and a number of his friends went duck hunting. It was a wet, disagreeable day, but fine for ducks, and the local government representative is known to be a bear for ducks. The party had reached a favorite place for duck shooting and "Loole" in the lead was pushing his way through a wet patch of bushes when suddenly his nostrils were assailed by a very pungent odor. He stopped suddenly, then directly in his path and not more than ten feet away, he caught sight of a small animal with a striped back, evidently in a fighting humor and clearing the decks for action. As is well known, "Loole" is not built for speed, and quickly realizing his predicament he threw his pump gun to his shoulder and fired the contents of the magazine in the general direction of the threatened danger with the rapidity of a machine gun in action. With the "kitty" as full of holes as a Swiss cheese, the postmaster sent to the forward side and gingerly approached, only to find that the animal was fast in a trap set by a Melrose farmer. As fur bearing animals of this variety are worth from $5 to $25, it is possible that the postmaster will find the expenses of his trip soaring high, and in the bargain he got no ducks.

HOLDING CHEMICAL TRADE

Statistics Show That United States Has Been Able to Hold High Mark Set During War.

Official statistics for the fiscal year 1920 demonstrate that this country has been able to keep its trade in chemical and allied products very near the high mark set during the war, despite the loss of markets for purely war supplies and despite the pressing demands that must be met in the domestic market.

Such is the conclusion reached by O. P. Hopkins, a well-known statistician, writing in the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.

"In almost all lines except munitions," he writes, "the exports in 1920 exceeded in value those of 1918, a fact that can be explained in some cases, perhaps, by rising prices, but which nevertheless warrants the assertion that the position has not been weakened. These exports, which very greatly exceed those of the last normal pre-war year, are made up almost entirely of manufactured products.

"Imports have more than held their own and comprise raw and partly manufactured products required for further advancement by American chemical manufacturers."

Slayer's Pal Held Not Guilty

PORTLAND, Nov. 19.—Husted A. Walters, soldier-highwayman, who shot and killed Patrolman Jerome Palmer in a revolver duel at Sixth and Gilman streets late Wednesday night, was charged with first degree murder in a complaint issued yesterday by Deputy District Attorney Deleh.

John A. Tillman, 17-year-old soldier, who was Walters' companion in crime, was formally charged with highway robbery. After a full investigation Mr. Deleh announced that a murder charge against the youthful soldier would not be filed. Both were held in the city jail without bonds.

What appeared to be conclusive evidence that Tillman was an unwilling accomplice of Walters in the three daring hold-ups on Portland streets Wednesday night was produced by Mr. Deleh following examinations of the two highwaymen and their victims.

Sea Lion Leather.

Large numbers of sea lions on the British Columbia coast which destroy annually vast quantities of fish food may be slaughtered and their hides placed on the world's leather market, if a proposition which comes from Premier Oliver and has the approval of many experienced fishermen, is carried out. The sea lion weighs from 2,000 to 2,500 pounds, the hides being nearly an inch thick. These hides make a tough and durable rough leather such as is used in workmen's gloves and in saddles. It is stated that these animals will eat 50 pounds of fish in a day. Four hunters recently killed several hundred sea lions in one day in Charlotte Islands—Scientific American.
