HER DAUGHTER HIS SON.

BY IDAH McGLONE GIBSON

Mr. Halsey's Story.

"Don't, don't, child. Don't look like that."

The words came as though from like that."

The words came as though from a long way off, and for a moment I could not understand that it was Kenneth's father who was speaking to me. I only remembered what he had told me about Kenneth's and Grace's marriage.

"How do you know he is married?" I asked. "Did he tell you?"

"No, but when Grace brought time to the hospital this morning, between her hysterical outbursts she said Kenneth was her husband and Jimmie Callahan, who was early on the scene, having been sent for by one of the physicians who knew he was Kenneth's friend, received two or three telephone messages from Mrs. Camoron, the evil genins of this affair, saying that Grace was dying and calling for her husband. She pretended to Jimmie that she was heartbroken over Grace's marriage to Kenneth and she had found that they were legally married last night. Jim told me privately that the could not revent a note of triumph from were legally married last fight. Jim told me privately that the could not prevent a note of triumph from creeping into her voice. It was only three weeks ago that she came to me and asked me if I knew what Ken-neth's intentions were in regard to Grace. She said that he was keepmeth's intentions were in regard to Grace. She said that he was keeping all the other young men from her daughter and she wanted to break it up if Kenneth were not serious. I told her very frankly that as far as I was concerned I would be very glad if Grace would break it off, as I did not think they had anything in common, and that as far as I was concerned nothing would please me more than if she would advise her daughter to that effect. She left me much creatfallen, and I am quite sure that it was made up between mother and daughter—those precious birds of a feather—to come to me with that story to sound me out, and last night's episode is the result of that interview."

of that interview

of that interview."

"Surely you do not think that they had anything to do with this poisoning?" he interrupted.

"No, I would not go as far as to say that, but I am quite sure they planned to get Ken to go through a marriage ceremony, sometime, when he was partly under the influence of liquor. Oh, my dear, my dear, I feel that I am the one most to blame for all this, because I have always thought that every young man must."

thought that every young man must sow a crop of wild eats."
"Would it not have been better, dear Mr. Hulsey, if, instead of rather encouraging Ken to 'sow his wild outs,' you had explained to him that there is a difference between real love and an infatuation of the moient—an emotion which is alway eightened by any kind of intox

'I feel now, my dear, as though ought to rush home and destroy very bottle of wine in the cellar. I sever thought If would come to his."

Well, Mr. Halsey, we will have to make the best of it and do what we can for them," I said coldly.

"The best we can do right now." he said with a sigh, "is to send someone out to the Camerons house and find out just how much of her talk out Grace's dying is camouflage. He looked at me expectantly, but !

id not offer to go. At last he said hinost timidly: "Do you think you could sacrifice ourself in this matter for me.

Why, of course I could, Mr. Hal-

"Why, of course I could, Mr. Halsey, but I would not call it a sacriflee. You know I would gladly do anything I can for you or Ken."

"Yes, I know, Ann, I know. I hate to ask this of you, but I have no one else to send. Jimmie Callahan was so abrupt with Mrs. Camgroun this morning that when he went to the house she refused to see him.
I cannot go myself, because the doctor has said they have slight hone. tor has said they have slight hope for Ken, so I must be here every moment."
