Purola Shaving Cream

HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

BY IDA H. MCGILVER GIBSON

Mrs. Cameron's Pretense

Sometimes I wonder if women are not the braver sex. On the way to the Cameron home I could not get out of my mind the look of intense relief that I saw on Mr. Halsey's face when I told him I would call on Grace, altho we both realized that Grace and her mother were awaiting Mr. Halsey's next move. And yet not so much courage on my part as a kindness of mind and heart. I seemed another personality other than Ann Whitson, as I thought in part of the last two days events. I had refused proposals of marriage from two desirable young men, only to find out afterwards that the one man I really might have married, was wedded to an old rival.

As I sat thinking of myself in a detached and impersonal way, I said to myself, inwardly:

"Later I shall feel sad about this but just now my only emotion is that of curiosity as to what I shall see when I reach Grace Cameron's home. I did not have long to indulge in this introspection, however, for the taxi driver drove rapidly. It seemed strange to think that the Camerons had been living in the same city with me some months and I had not even known it. As I rang the doorbell, I wondered idly just what I should have done, had I known it.

A trim maid took my card and I noticed that the house was decorated in a way that showed more money than taste. Nouveau art struggled with the ghosts of Louis XV and yet neither seemed to have benefited. I had hardly time to wonder at my fantastic thoughts at such a tragic moment of my life, before the maid returned and said:

"Miss Cameron will see you, Miss."

I followed her into a black and white boudoir. Mrs. Cameron rose and rushed toward me. I thought she was going to throw her arms around my neck, and I drew back.

"Oh, Ann, Ann, my dear child! Have you heard about my poor little girl? We have had the doctor and nurse with her all day."

"Did she drink some of the poisoned liquor too?" I asked brutally.

"Of course not." And then she stopped, for she realized that she by her inference, acknowledged that Grace had intempered. Kenneth into drinking heavily, while she, herself, kept up the pretense of doing likewise.

"Well, what is the matter with her, then?" I asked.

"Why, don't you know? Kenneth Halsey swept my poor little girl off her feet last night and insisted upon her marrying him. You know they have been sweethearts since they could talk, and last night he declared that he could live without her no longer. Oh, why was I not with her? I could have prevented all this; but she, poor child, was helpless. At last she gave in to his importunities and early this morning Kenneth awakened a justice of the peace and they were married."

"Where did Ken get the license," I asked.

"For a moment Mrs. Cameron was embarrassed, and then said: 'I do not know. Kenneth must have had it. I only know that when Grace came home in an almost delirious condition, she handed me her marriage certificate and then muttered something hysterically, over and over, I finally gathered from her the fact that she had married Kenneth and that he was at the hospital, dying.'

Mrs. Cameron thrust the marriage certificate into my hand. She seemed to want me to know that the deed was legally done. I laid it on the table without looking at it, and asked:

"May I see Grace?"

DEAR PETEY:

Winston-Salem, N. C. Monday

Bet you a house and lot you'd stay in W-S a month if you ever got to know folks here like I have. Between business and Reynolds factories and a bully time—well my date book has been bubbling over! And, I'm still running into facts that would stagger even your imagination, old football, with all your kick!

Pete, take it straight from government figures direct to you, that every work day in the week R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. buys from our "Uncle Sam" enough revenue stamps to pay for a duplicate of the handsome new Winston-Salem post office building! Ever hear of such a thing?

And, if you want to get an eyefull of an army of more than 15,000 people, be down in the Reynolds factory district when the whistles blow! Never saw such a cigarette fring-up time in my life!

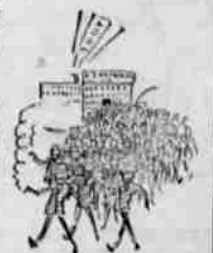

Peter, everytime you light a Camel in the future, call back on what I've slipped you about Camels—absolutely, the greatest cigarette at any price—for quality, for refreshing flavor, for mellow mild body, for freedom from any unpleasant cigarette aftertaste or odor! It's worth the busiest smoker's time to compare Camels with any cigarette in the world! Camels are simply a revelation! You know that.

I'll open my eyes in Atlanta tomorrow! In the meantime here's a wad of best wishes I have in stock!

Yours

When news was brought to the studio that Houdini, the famous handcuff king, was coming to the "The Grim Game," his Paramount-Afterart picture which will be shown at the Antlers theatre on Friday evening, all the other stars lesser lights working there, began to plan several entertainments for Houdini, the center of attraction. They produced shackles and they but he walked out of them as he possessed the feature of the fourth dimension. Houdini led the enthusiastic group to the Los Angeles railroad yards, where he permitted himself to be tied to the tracks and escaped by the approaching engine could be seen. Cecil B. DeMille suggested that he be tied to a plank and to the busy teeth of a buzz saw. Houdini agreed, and cheated the saw by cutting himself in a twinkling. Houdini's famous self liberator saved the greatest stunts for the picture "The Grim Game" is said to be full of sensational episodes out-thrill anything ever before seen on the stage or screen. Ann Dvorak is the leading woman and a new cast helps Houdini develop a thrilling mystery story written by Arthur Reeve of "Craig Kennedy"

LETTER FOR WOMEN

A Woman Whose Serious Ill Was Overcome by Lydia E. Ham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss E. E. E. first took Lydia E. Ham's Vegetable Compound for a complete nervous breakdown following the birth of my oldest child. I got up too soon which caused serious female trouble. I was so weak that I was not able to be on my feet but very little and could not do my housework at all. I had a bad pain in my left side and it pain terribly if I stepped off a curb. One day one of your books was thrown in the yard and I read it. There were so many things that I wanted to try it and my husband wanted to buy it and I got it. I took it and got me a bottle. It was so good that I felt relief after the first dose, so I kept on until I had my bottles and by that time I was well as I could wish. About a week I gave birth to a ten pound baby and my health has been fine. If you have trouble of any kind I give you my medicine for I give you the praise for my good health. I can't—Mrs. E. E. SHAY, KANAS.

Fake "Josses" for Travelers.

Canton and Amoy supply travelers and curio dealers with quantities of hideous idols known in the trade as "josses." They are fakes pure and simple, having no relation to any oriental religion. Ingenious designers have produced a great variety of hobbobias—such, for example, as the "hunger god," with the face of a tiger and ferocious fangs.

Most of them are of clay, turned out from wooden or metal molds, dipped in molten glass and allowed to cool. A fairly expert Chinese workman can make 100 in a day at a cost of 3 cents apiece. The European or American tourist pays $5.

Real josses may be worth a lot of money, especially if carved out of jade. This is a material greatly prized in the orient, and a jade idol 15 inches high, and as many centuries old, has been known to sell for $10,000 in Canton.

White and Red Roses Blended.

The most interesting combination of roses is that of the union of the white rose of York with the red rose of Lancaster after the long struggle between those two factions when the red rose might have represented the blood that was shed and the other one the condition of the people bled white by the wars. To cement the peace Henry of Lancaster wedded pretty Elizabeth of York and a clever gardener of old England blended the two roses and made a new one, striped red and white. We have it in this country where it is still called the York and Lancaster, though not every beholder realizes the story held in its fragrant petals.

The Cockade.

The cockade, an ornament or knot of ribbon or rosette of leather, was originally worn as a military or naval decoration or as the badge of a political party. Cockades made of ribbons of the national colors were worn by soldiers of the national wars of the eighteenth century. In England after the expulsion of the Stuart dynasty the white cockade became the badge of the adherents of the exiled house in opposition to the orange of Nassau and the black of Hanover. From the hats of the military it passed to those of the civil servants of the crown. Then as heralds changed the use of the distinction was confined to servants. The black cockade on the hats of officers' servants was introduced by George I.

Heredity.

"So that clever woman player's father was a dentist? That accounts for it."

"Accounts for what?"

"Her good bridge work."
