SEN. HARDING HIS SHIP

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—By direct order of President Wilson, Secretary of the Navy has placed the presidential yacht Albatross at the disposal of President Harding today to complete his trip from Panama to Washington. Secretary sent a radiogram to President Harding on the steamer Passaic to Norfolk, informing him that the Mayflower would be at Hampton Roads Saturday, when the President's departure for Europe. Pastores is due there, and that President Wilson would be happy to have Senator Harding use the vessel for passage to Washington.

Daughter is Born—

A baby daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. F. Westphal on December 2.

AIRSHIPS TO BE ESCORT
NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Dec. 1.—Thirty airplanes from Langley field will greet President-elect Harding, when he enters the Virginia capes Saturday morning, according to an announcement made here today.

The machines will act as escort of honor for Mr. Harding who will land at Old Point and later visit at Norfolk and Newport News.

Two Small Girls. Attacked Near Salem

SALEM, Dec. 2.—An attack upon an eight-year-old daughter of W. L. Bailey, residing north of Salem, was reported Tuesday evening by Mr. Bailey and Will Rickman of Claxton. The attack, as related by the little girl and a neighbor boy, six years of age, occurred near the Hayesville church as the children were on their way home from school.

The little girl, who is declared by physicians to have been unharmed, was seized by a strange man and carried away from the road. The stranger ordered the boy to keep quiet and to remain near the road, the report stated.

An immediate search was made by residents of the district, but the man, described as being about five feet, ten inches in height and clad in a dark suit, gray overcoat and dark green hat, made good his escape. The description given of the man corresponds to the description given of the stranger who is reported to have attacked a little girl in the Salem Heights district Tuesday morning. Sheriff Needham's office is investigating both occurrences.

*Millions Travel
Beneath the Ground*

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—More than half New York City's "six million" travel on subways and elevated lines, but Chicago still sticks largely to surface cars, while London passengers divide their patronage almost equally between busser, trolleys and rapid transit system.

Figures revealing these statistics of travel in three of the world's largest cities were presented by experts at a gathering here of transportation authorities who are meeting monthly to discuss New York's great transportation problems.

It was shown that 6,750,000 persons live in the metropolitan district within a twenty mile radius of Fifth avenue and Thirty-fourth street.

About 2,300,000 of them live on Manhattan Island and another 2,000,000 flock into Lower Manhattan every week day. Fifty-four per cent of these ride subways and elevated lines, 35 per cent patronize surface cars, ferries haul 5 per cent, commutation steam trains 4 per cent, and 2 per cent travel in busses.

In Chicago surface cars carry 73 per cent of the city's passenger traffic, rapid transit lines get 21 per cent and the other 6 per cent travel by bus, street cars, trolleys, etc.

in suburban steam trains. In London the ratios are 33 per cent in busses, 27 per cent in surface cars, and 40 per cent in rapid transit trains.

Manhattan Island's population averages 163 persons per acre, and Brooklyn has 46, while the average for the 572 square miles of habitable territory embraced in the metropolitan district is 21 persons per acre. This is compared with 16 per acre in London, 20 in corporate Chicago, 20 for Detroit and 23 for Cleveland.

It was predicted by one of the engineers that the five boroughs of New York will grow to 9,000,000 in population by 1945, and by that time the city would need 48 subway and elevated tracks running north and south on Manhattan Island.
