So he took an inch of Purola and a like amount from four other shaving creams and worked up a lather from each. He put the results on separate glass slabs.

Here are the comparative volumes of lather at the end of one minute:

Then he went farther and found out that Purola gives 150 times its volume in lather and that there are 150 shaves in every tube.

He also found out Purola will work up a lather quicker than any ordinary shaving cream.

He believes Purola is the quickest, most economical and most satisfying shaving cream made.

So do we! So will you!

WHALE IS CHAMPION JUMPER

Mammal Easily Holds All Records When It Comes to a Question of High Leaping.

If you were asked the question "What animal can jump the highest?" you would in all likelihood, guess wrong. It is the whale!

Oh, yes, the whale is a mammal, not a fish, and he can jump out of the water to a height of 25 feet with the greatest ease. This is about twice as high as the tiger, who can manage about 12 1/2 feet to 13 feet. A dog has been known to clear 10 feet, and the horse follows next with 7 feet 8 1/2 inches.

Man's record high jump was made in 1914 by a Californian, who reached 6 feet 7 1/2 inches. In 1913, the tremendous height of 5 feet 5 1/2 inches was attained for the standing high jump, though in 1892 a man reached 6 feet, with weights, at this jump.

As regards the long jump, without weights, the record, 24 feet 11 1/2 inches, was made in 1901, and it has now stood for nearly twenty years.

The longest jump backwards, with weights, is 12 feet 11 inches, and the holder of this record also holds that of the standing long jump, without weights, with 12 feet 1 1/2 inches.

Of animals, one might expect the kangaroo to hold the record, but he can only manage 15 feet—ten less than man—though, talking of long jumps, how about the grasshopper? He can jump 200 times his own length.

GAUDY COSTUME HIS FOIBLE

Marshal Murat, Napoleon's Famous Cavalry Leader, Seemingly Had Craze for "Fine Feathers."

Marshal Murat was the dandy among Napoleon's generals. One Paris tailor said that in some years he had made as much as 100,000 francs' worth of suits, overcoats and uniforms for Murat. He liked to invent new and fantastic uniforms, he strutted about to a suit of sky-blue overalls covered all over with gold spangles, and he decorated his bushy with aligrettes. On the occasion of his triumphant entry into Warsaw when he supposed he would be made king of Poland, he wore an impossible looking uniform, red leather boots, tunic of cloth of gold, sword belt blazing with diamonds, and a great bushy of fur decked out with costly plumes. On this occasion Napoleon lost his temper and testily exclaimed to his general: "Go and put on your proper uniform; you look like a clown." But the emperor was not misled by Murat's love of finery, for it is recorded that he once said of him: "You may smile at my dandified marshal, but you will not notice that when columns are shot down today, Murat's gaudy plume will be dancing in the hottest of the fight. Let a hero have one folly, gentlemen."

HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

BY IDAH MCGLOE GIBSON

Guests of Jerry Hathaway.

We met Jerry at the restaurant and it was just at the fashionable lunch hour. The young men and Mamie were in their element, but I confess I felt a little self-conscious. A number of people came to our table to ask about Ken. After one of the fashionable young matrons had done this, and acknowledged smilingly an introduction to Mamie and me, Mamie remarked as she left: "Say it isn't so hard to break into society nowadays, is it? Just get in on some sensational racket and you're there. Who'd imagine I was the check girl at this restaurant a few days ago, when today I was introduced to a woman who probably never gave me a glance as checker, Miss Henrietta Hilton of the Frivolity theater is something else again as Mamie Riley, hat checker. The chorus business is looking up."

"Don't think, Mamie," said Jimmie, winking at me, "that Mrs. Benson came over to see you. She wanted to hear about Ken. She probably won't recognize you in the third row the next time she goes to the theater."

"I'm in the first row, if you please, and anyway, Jimmie, you can't take away my pride in dining with the son of the proprietor of this place."

"I don't suppose you remember refusing that privilege many times when you were a check girl, do you?" asked Jerry smiling appreciatively.

"I knew better than to go to lunch with you then, Jerry Hathaway, and I wouldn't be with you today if I had, and you know it. I've got a little sense and I know that while you are a good fellow and I like you, you are your father's son and have a man's idea about the girls in your employ."

"Am I as dangerous as all that? You flatter me, Miss Riley."

"You're not at all dangerous to me—but to my reputation."

"You don't mean to tell me you're going to take a little thing like a reputation on the stage with you. It's a great detriment to a musical comedy career, you know," grinned Jerry, thoroughly enjoying the repartee.

I felt they were keeping up this joking to make me forget everything that happened since I left home after mother's death, and I was surprised to find how well they were succeeding. It is a very wise disposition of nature that intense griefs are also short lived.

I had taken Mamie's advice and closed the book. Ken and Grace seemed far away just then, even when I greeted Mr. Halsey, who came in just as we were having coffee, and graciously seated himself beside me.

He seemed much disappointed when I told him what I had decided to do, but when he heard that Mamie was going away, he insisted that I should take a small furnished apartment which belonged to him, near his home.

"I'm not going to let you out of my reach, Ann," he said. "I shall be very lonely without Ken and I want you and your young friends to come to me very often."

"That will be fine, sir," said Jimmie. "Jerry and I will be glad to come, I'm sure, but Mamie is going on the road soon and you can only have her occasionally."

"They will be occasions of rare pleasure," said Mr. Halsey with old-fashioned courtesy.

"Do you think that Grace and Ken will be well enough to leave tomorrow?" asked Jim abruptly.

"Hardly. It will probably be some weeks before Ken recovers sufficiently to travel, but he is getting better every minute. When I left, Ann, he was asking for you."

Tomorrow—Ken's Father.

Spruce and Hemlock.

It is not difficult to distinguish between spruce and hemlock in the forest, when one learns to notice the following points: The spruce has stiff pointed leaves (or short needles), its bark scales are never bright red, and the cones—smaller than those of the pines—hang down on the branches. The hemlock, on the other hand, has soft flat needles, often two-ranked, that is, growing on two sides of the stem, so that the sprig has a flattened appearance; hemlock bark scales look red, when broken off, and the slanting little cones stand erect on their branches, falling apart soon after ripening, so that no old cones long remain on or under the trees where they grew. Lumber from the two trees may be distinguished by remembering that that of the spruce is white in color, while hemlock wood retains its faint reddish tint.

What Chance Did Dad Have?

"Dad, I lost my commutation ticket today. It slipped out the car window. Will you please give me money enough to get a ten-ride ticket? There are only five more working days in the month, so I'll need only the ten rides. Now, dad, you can't ask me to take it out of my allowances. It simply can't be done. Anyhow, one of your old corporations declared a dividend recently, and I didn't have to ask you for any money for two weeks. That saved you $50, and the ticket is only $10. Why, dad, you are $25 ahead at that! You're making money off your own son! You can't do that! It isn't being done this year. . . . I knew you would feel as I do about it. Thank you, dad."—Indianaapolis News.

Emperor's Splendid Tomb.

The body of Napoleon III lies in a tomb in the church of St. Michael at Farnborough, England. This chapel was built by ex-Empress Eugenie as a memorial to her husband. In the crypt also is placed the tomb of her son, the Prince Imperial, who was killed while fighting with the English army in Zululand. The church is a magnificent building of white stone, and stands on the brow of a hill. It is surmounted by a tower and pinnacled with dozens of small shafts. The empress used to visit the chapel daily. Ten priests were constantly employed by her to say masses for the dead.
