Yoncalla Attracts Much Attention

The Tucson, Arizona, Star has the following to say concerning the feminine government of Yoncalla.

"The hand that rocks the cradle rules the town of Yoncalla, Oregon. Up yonder in Yoncalla is being tried the whimsical experiment in matriarchal government—we thank the Associated Press for the discovery of that government, or rather a new application of it. Strictly speaking, a matriarchy is a state or stage of social evolution in which descent is reckoned only along the female line all children belonging to the mother's mother's social and political importance, making her the head of the clan. Such a system increases the family and the guardian of religious rites and traditions. Hence, says our trusty reference book, with many writers, matriarchy means not only descent through the female line, but rulership by women of gynococracy. Patriarchy, in its narrow sense of reckoning descent, is found among many peoples, but whether it ever existed in a broader sense of gynococratic domination is disputed. The Amazons exist only in legendary tradition of the Greeks. They were, according to legend, a nation of female warriors who were fabled to have cut off their right breasts in order to facilitate the use of the bow and were the original man-haters, expelling them from their country, or holding them in subjugation, after the whimsical manner of the female of the species.

Although the new matriarchy of Yoncalla would not have been installed until January 1, the old patriarchal regime has resigned in a body, and the gynococratic regime has been inducted into the administration. After the manner of men, the ex-patriarchs will probably meet at the corner grocery every day to gleefully anticipate the failure of the matriarchy. They will stand on the sidelines and criticize and find fault, and they will rush home early on the days when the matriarchal assembly meets and assume an injured air because dinner is late, on lodge night at that. In the parlance of the patriarchal partisans, the men of Yoncalla are preparing a gorgeous "raspberry" for the matriarchy—and just for that we hope that the first act of the city mothers will be to raid the corner grocery and put the whittling, fault-finding, quid-chewing Yoncallous ex-patriarchs to work on the city chain gang as vagrants.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

PASSES ON LEGAL MATTERS

Robert A. Adams, Judge Advocate, Rose From Rank of Private to That of Major.

Robert A. Adams, recently appointed national judge advocate of the American Legion by the national executive committee, rose from the rank of a private in the Eighty-fourth division at Camp Taylor to that of major during his army career. Mr. Adams went overseas with the Thirty-first heavy artillery brigade and served in the Aime-Marne, Oise-Aisne and Argonne-Meuse offensives. After the cessation of hostilities he was assigned to duty in the Judge Advocate General's office at G. H. Q. He served fourteen months in the A. E. F.

When Legion officials at National headquarters at Indianapolis decided early in January that it was necessary to enlist the services of a legal advisor to thrash out the knotty problems of eligibility, interpretation of statutes affecting the Legion and other legal matters, Mr. Adams was appointed to fill the position. His appointment to the new position came as a result of efficient service as legal advisor after an amendment was made to the Legion constitution at the Cleveland convention, which authorized the creation of the office of national judge advocate.

Mr. Adams has practiced law since 1916 and is associated with a prominent Indianapolis law firm. He is a graduate of Washington and Jefferson college, and also attended Harvard law school. He is twenty-nine years old. The duties of the office consist in the supervision of the legal department of the Legion, the employment of counsel in law suits in which the Legion is involved, interpretation of legal questions, and the adjustment of questions of eligibility.

TO BUILD WOMEN'S AUXILIARY

Legion Administrative Machinery to Be Used in Safely Launching the Branch Organization.

Assurance that the administrative machinery of the American Legion will be used without stint in an effort to build up the Women's auxiliary, has been given by National Commander F. W. Galbraith, Jr. It is expected that the auxiliary will take charge of its own destinies next spring, with the holding of the first national convention of the women's units.

"All doubts and misgivings in regard to the future of the Women's auxiliary of the American Legion were removed, and a system of orderly expansion in state departments and a national organization was provided for by the Cleveland convention," announced Mr. Galbraith.

"We propose to offer the aid of our organization in building up the auxiliary, but we are not going to meddle with its policies so long as our recognized ideals and purposes are carried out. The Cleveland convention voted to let the women swim without water wings. It authorized state executive committees of the Legion to call state conventions and to establish department organizations of the auxiliary, killing the rule which made necessary the establishment of a total of units equivalent to 50 per cent of the number of posts in the department."

MAILED IN GROWTH OF LEGION

Rev. John W. Inzer, National Chaplain, Long Identified With Activities of Veterans' Organization.

As national chaplain for the ensuing year the American Legion has in Rev. John W. Inzer, pastor of the First Baptist church of Chattanooga, Tenn., a man identified with the activities of the veterans' organization since its inception. Dr. Inzer not only was one of the men who initiated the formation of the Legion, but during the early days of its growth, aided the work by traveling over the country and making addresses as a member of the national executive committee.

Dr. Inzer, who was born in Hamilton county, Texas, January 6, 1890, entered the ministry at the age of nineteen, his first pastorate being in Birmingham, Ala. He volunteered his services as chaplain in the army after the war broke out and served with the Fourteenth Infantry in the Northwest and at Camp Dodge, Iowa, where he was senior chaplain for three months. After the armistice he moved to Camp Grant, Ill., where he served until March, 1919. He married Miss Marie Smith of Alabama in December, 1918.
