HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

BY IDAH McGLONE GIBSON

Dinner for Three.

Mr. Halsey finally decided to go with Grace and Kenneth. When they had gone Jimmy Callahan turned to me and remarked: "Well, Ann, I guess we are in for some thrills now that Grace is back."

"What have you been doing today, Ann?" asked Jimmy. And then of course I had to tell Jimmy all that had happened. And Jimmy, dear, loyal Jimmy wrung my hand till my fingers ached.

"I knew it would come out all right, Ann, I knew it," bubbled Jimmy. And then he added as his face clouded, "You won't be working much longer, Ann."

"Why, your father is a rich man now." And as if that were sufficient explanation the subject was dropped. Jimmy was pensive for a moment, and then he said brightening, "Well, Ann, let's get to work."

We were soon absorbed in the day's work. I showed Jimmy some ideas I had on the business, and he complimented me highly on them. I had had to make a careful survey of the business to get it straightened out in my mind and understand it. While Ken had been away and Mr. Halsey was awaiting his return much of the work had gotten badly disorganized, and Jimmy and I were really enjoying straightening it out.

Late in the afternoon in came Jerome Hathaway, saying: "Aren't you folks ever going to play any more? I have a new car down at the curb, and I want you to go to the shore with me for dinner."

"Jerry," I said, "that's music to mine ears." While Jimmy put in with a smile, "And I'll go with you, Jerry, to see that you don't make love to Ann."

"Jimmy," retorted Jerry, "our thoughts travel in the same channel. I declined a good job today, because if I took it I wouldn't be able to drop in here unexpectedly to see that you weren't cutting me out of Ann's affections."

"Oh, you big sillies, stop your jollying," I exclaimed as I got into the car and Jimmy squeezed in beside me. As we drove off I caught a glimpse of Ken and his father driving up, but Jerry got away before they were near enough to speak to us.

I was very glad to go out with my two friends, for I was too excited over the day's events to keep still. As we winged along Jimmy told of my good fortune to Jerry—that is, he told Jerry that my father was coming home and was rich. Jerry almost drove the car into a telegraph pole while he grabbed my hands to congratulate me.

"Ann," he said, "you'll be the most sought after girl in town, but I know you won't forget your old friends of the 'I-knew-her-when club.' Will you? Between the three of us, Ann, I hope that with your father's money you'll be able to set Grace a fast pace in the social world. Jimmy and I will help you. He will be your social secretary and I'll be your gentleman-in-waiting," laughed Jerry.

"Waiting for what?" questioned Jimmy. "Never you mind what I am waiting for, Jim, old man, but you might as well know that if I don't get it I'll wait just the same."

We drew up to one of the smart shore restaurants. I had not thought to change my office frock, which was quite new and well tailored, but I was surprised to find all the women dining there in evening dress.

"Perhaps we had better go to a simpler place, Jerry," I said, but as I spoke I stopped short, for coming through the door was Grace and that awful Sellers.

For a moment Grace looked rather abashed, and then she came forward and said, "I'm glad you're here, Ann. Ken was busy and told me he would come along later. Now we'll just join your party."

Jerry walked over to Sellers. I don't know what he said, but the man, with a mumbled excuse, disappeared.

Movie Closeups

With the towering California redwoods as a background, William Russell provides beauty for one eye and thrills for the heart in "The Man who Dared," a new William Fox drama written by Julius G. Furthman, which opens tonight at the Liberty theatre.

The story is that of big Jim Kane, a lumberjack boss who falls in love with the girl upon whom the sheriff has set his heart. The sheriff is a powerful figure, but before the play is over, finds that it is very un-healthy to be at war with big Jim Kane. As for the girl—well she is played by pretty Eileen Perry, a new comer with Fox, who has become a star; who possesses a charming face and figure, winsome Irish grace of manner and real ability to portray emotion.

Something must be said about the setting, which is superb, and reflects great credit upon the photographer, Clyde de Vinna, and the director, Emmett J. Flynn. The supporting cast contains well known names, such as Frank Brownlee, Fred Warren and Lon Puff.

There is a strong appeal in Marshall Neilan's mite-a-minute, melodrama of newspaper life, "Go and Get It" for overseas men who have or are returning to civil life in the adventures of Kirk Connelly. During the war, Connelly's duties—much against his will—was to cook. But he found time between meals to do some real hero stuff and get wounded. On his return to private life, he gets a job on the editorial staff of a big newspaper in the hope of becoming a reporter. But to his great disgust the managing editor sets him to writing cooking recipes. But, fortunately, for this young veteran this condition does not last long. He is eventually assigned to a story, and it leads to one of the most amazing assignments a reporter ever had fall to his lot. And the ex-cook book editor acquits himself in a most creditable manner and gets the big story and a "scoop." The picture shows at the Majestic theatre for the last time tonight.

IN YE OLDEN TIME

Hoop skirts were worn by those who first asked the druggist for, and insisted on having, the genuine Golden Medical Discovery put up by Dr. Pierce over fifty years ago. Dress has changed very much since then! But Dr. Pierce's medicines contain the same dependable ingredients. They are standard today just as they were fifty years ago.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the stomach and blood cannot be surpassed by any remedy today.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak women has never been equalled for the distressing complaints incident to womanhood. What others say: "I suffered from nervous prostration for several years, trying various remedies furnished by the doctor. At last I tried Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, together with Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, at the advice of a friend who had used it and had been cured, and my recovery was prompt and permanent."—ROSE FAULKNER, 232 South Grand Avenue.

Do Your Share to Relieve Suffering

Once upon a time a man asked a question. It was this: "Am I my brother's keeper?" From that time until the day of his death he wore upon his forehead the ignominious mark of unfaithfulness to his God and to his fellow man.

Douglas County has never yet asked Cain's question, nor worn his mark. She has always risen to the occasion when there was a duty to perform. She has always shouldered her share of every burden of world suffering where charity was needed. Today she is urged to aid 470 little children in central Europe. This is her quota of the 3,500,000 of them that are literally freezing and starving to death.

If we do not feed and clothe them, they will die, and this is the plain, unvarnished truth. They belong to us just as truly as though they were our own flesh and blood. We cannot evade the responsibility, try as we may. It is strictly up to each and every one of us good, red-blooded American citizens of Douglas County to send our contribution to Senator B. L. Eddy at Roseburg, and do it at once. Each child will next require $10 to keep it alive until next harvest. This means one meal a day. Think of it—one meal a day. Turn the tables and imagine your warm, well fed little ones subsisting on one meal in 24 hours and dressed in tatters. These poor little things are not responsible for their condition. They did not cause the war and its horrors. They did not even ask to be born, and yet they will surely die of cold and starvation unless we save them. Surely there does not exist a man or woman in Douglas county so lost to every sense of tenderness and sympathy that they will go to their own well filled Christmas dinner tables without contributing to the fund for these poor, starving wretches.

"Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it unto me." Any bank in the city or county will accept your gift and forward it to Senator Eddy.

Mothers' Pension Is Being Favored

Forty out of the 48 states now have adopted some form of Mothers' Pension, according to the facts made public today by the Annual Report of the Chief of the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor. They have recognized the principle that children should not be taken from their mothers because of poverty alone. The rapid extension of the Mother's Pension movement indicates the general belief of the country in the paramount value of home life and a mother's care.

However, although large grants have been made in many of our states, the amounts in general are far too small. The increased cost of living has not been met and the full purpose of the law has not been attained. Some of the states are now making careful studies of increased costs so that allowances may respond to the higher prices. The systems of allowances vary widely in the different states. So do the amounts of the allowances and the methods of supervision. The Children's Bureau points out the necessity of making a careful investigation of the methods in use in all, so that the country may be given the benefit of all the experience which has been gained through the operation of the laws.
