Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over thirty years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

Movie Closeups

Huckleberry Finn, Tom Sawyer and their inimitable friends have reached the screen at last.

As real, as fresh, as appealingly human today as when Mark Twain—his eye a'twinkle,—called them out of his heart and wrote them down forever in the world's greatest romance of youth.

Freckle-faced Huck Finn, Tom Sawyer with his marvelous plans, "Pap" Finn and his jug of rum, the seedy old rapscallions, the "King" and the "Duke"; Black Jim and sweet-faced Mary Jane.

Now in this irresistible photoplay, they live before your very eyes—with all their charm, their escapades, their loving, laughable ways.

A tale of the other days on the Mississippi—teeming with a hundred immortal adventures—Mellowed with much laughter—Softened by a few tears.

Mark Twain's immortal boy hero is the leading figure in an elaborate motion picture version of his adventures, which will be shown for three days at the Majestic theatre, commencing tonight.

The cinema "Huckleberry Finn" is declared to follow the text of the original faithfully, taking up the story when Huck and Tom Sawyer discover the robbers treasure in the cave, and following the adventures of Huck through the efforts of the widow Douglas to reform him, to his abduction by his no-account father, and subsequent encounters with the broken down actors, "Duke" and the "King". As far as possible the inimitable humor of Mark Twain has been retained and it is said to be a production of which the great humorist, were he living, would approve.

The role of Huck Finn is handled by Lewis Sargent, a boy actor of unusual talent. Gordon Griffith plays Tom Sawyer and the other performers in the large cast are said to be thoroughly proficient. William D. Taylor, who also directed the two previous Mark Twain pictures, "Tom Sawyer" and "Huck and Tom" handled the screening. This is a Paramount Artcraft feature that no admirer of the works of Samuel Clemens can afford to miss.

Wallace Reid, the handsome screen star is very lucky. He has been able to make play out of his work, because the starring roles have called upon him to do exactly the things that he enjoys doing. Take "Excuse My Dust". In that speedy protoplay, Wallie had the role of a speed-demon auto salesman. Now, if there is anything Mr. Reid is keen about in out of hours, it is dashing about in a fast racing car.

Then came "The Dancin' Fool" which will be at the Antlers for the last time tonight. In this picture he comes east as a rule to New York, and becomes a sensation as a cabaret dancer. Again the breezy player was right in his element. He likes jazz music and he loves to dance. With attractive Bebe Daniels as a partner, he practiced long hours at the studio stage at a series of unique dances, that, it is claimed will prove sensational when shown on the silversheet.

"The Dancin' Fool" was adapted by Claire Kennedy from Henry Payson Dowst's well known magazine story by the same name. Sam Wood directed the film and it is a Paramount-Artcraft feature.

HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

BY IDAH McGLONE GIBSON

A Forgery.

Ken looked so anxious that I said: "I am afraid that you are working too hard Ken. I wish you would take the rest cure that I have tried with such success."

He shook his head, rather wearily "I can't do that, just now," he said. Then his eyes wandered idly over the statement and checks before me. "Fixing up dad's personal account, Ann? Do you know, I have never known a man who hated to do things for himself and do them for his business as much as dad. He will stay up all night looking for a few cents that his bookkeeper had overlooked, and lay aside a bank statement with a sigh that does not tally with his check book. Indeed, I have known him to take the bank's figures instead of his own rather than take up and go over and check his returned checks and stubs.

"I caught my breath sharply. I wondered if Ken had counted on me being away and his father not looking over his check when he presented that check and then I hated myself for suspecting him.

"You are coming out to dine with us soon, Ann, just as soon as you are well enough. Grace will have to cut some of her engagements and we will have a family party. I would like to have a quiet evening at home once more."

"I'll be glad to come, Kenneth any time you ask me." With that he left, after asking again where his father could be found.

As soon as the door closed my thoughts traveled all over our conversation about his father's personal account. I strove to visualize even Ken's features. Had he been driven to this terrible pass. I was almost sure that the signature on that check would not have passed the cashier's window had it been presented by anyone except Mr. Halsey, myself or Ken.

The name of Ken's wife popped into my head unexpectedly. Could she have done this thing? I dismissed that thought as soon as possible for I wanted to be fair to Grace. I did not dare tell this to Mr. Halsey and I knew he would question me about the thousand dollar discrepancy. If I did not tell him now, how could I in the future if I found that someone I did not suspect had done the deed. I must have money—but how to obtain it—and then I happened to think of the blessed thousand I had in the bank, the money that Jerry had found when I had so foolishly lost it. On an impulse I took a taxi down to my bank and checked out a thousand dollars. This I took over and deposited to Mr. Halsey's account, tearing up the deposit slips.

I also relied on Mr. Halsey not looking over his next statement, as I would be there to take care of it. Sure enough, when I had returned I hardly had time to put away the forged check in my own private drawer, when Mr. Halsey made his appearance and said: "Well, Ann, did you find it?"

"Yes, there was an error in the addition and in two checks. I went over to the bank and they made it right."

"Well, you have done enough for one day. I am going to take you to luncheon."

"Sorry, but the doctor's orders are that I must not commit any diseretions, such as going to luncheons at public places. I am to eat quietly in my little room at the hotel that Miss Mamie has picked out for me. I expect she will telephone me very soon where it is."

"I can tell you Ann. it is at the Queens."

"But I cannot afford that, Mr. Halsey." I protested as my spent thousand and doctor's bills rose before my eyes.

"Ann, did it ever occur to you that you are the daughter of Robert Carleton? You are one of the richest girls in the city. When Bob comes back I shall lose you. Indeed, I only let you come into the office today because your doctor said it would be good for you."

"Why did he do that Mr. Halsey?"

"He said you were too apt to think about yourself, too much inclined to introspection and analysis. But I could not look Bob in the face, if when he comes, he finds you trying to earn your living when you might have everything you want by just the asking for it."

"The thing I want, Mr. Halsey, is just to stay here with you. Neither of us can tell what my father's coming will bring. You must remember that he does not know I exist. He may feel that a grown up daughter is a nuisance."

"Mr. Halsey laughed and said: "Well, we're going to charge up hospital and board bills to him in the future. The salary that I pay you goes for pin money."

With that he slipped his check book in his pocket and we went down to his car. I found when we reached the hotel that I had a suite of rooms to which my nurse was already installed. Mamie was there also, and as she kissed me, she said:

"Mercy, who would have thought that both of us 'check girls' would have been blessed by the fairies in this manner?"

Mamie stayed to luncheon with me and I asked her what she knew about Grace.

"Well, if you want the truth Ann I'll tell you that Mrs. Grace Halsey has gotten the reputation of sending her husband on the road to financial ruin. Unless Mr. Halsey puts up for his son, he will be on the rocks soon. Grace's accounts at the stores are fabulous. I, myself, saw her buy a five thousand dollar ermine coat at a store the day before yesterday. And only last week, a friend of mine was present at Brown's, which you know is a fashionable gambling club, and saw her lose a thousand dollars."
