HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

BY IDAH McGLONE GIBSON

A Loss at Cards.

Well, you see," said Mamie when ked her to tell me about Grace's bling loss, "that night as Simbling and I sat in a restaurant, e came in with a crowd of young le. Simington tried to put on a f dog with me, although I think he was rather put out to be with me."

Was Ken with the party?" I d.

My dear, he is seldom with the es that his wife affects. But e cares little whether her hus- is with her or not. What she e is admiration, and in her er- coat, her blond hair making a n aureole about her face, she ily got it. Truly, Ann, I think she was the most exquisitely tiful creature I ever saw in my She turned the head of every in the room in her direction, made every woman look com- place."

Yes, she is very lovely," I said a sigh. "I wish that her soul as beautiful as her body."

What a lot of guff people write t beauty," said Mamie, who, beIrish, could not help but philoso- about every object under the especially when she had a listen- "I have never yet believed that shine through eyes or that the which are most beautiful are made so because of the hearts in. Some of the finest looking that I have ever known in my were regular fiends, ruthless, h, egotistical, and utterly with- moral sense—and I believe there are women of the same e. I don't know Grace Cameron y very well, Ann, but the little know of her and the way that treating that splendid husband rs makes me think that she be- to that class. And yet, she is of the most beautiful women I have ever seen," Mamie re- d.

sometimes think, Mamie," I "that such women have a genius uty, and like all such geniuses consider themselves above and d the common herd—that they not to be judged by the same dards.

But we have wandered quite away my question, Mamie," I said. ave a very particular reason for ing to know just exactly how e lost that thousand dollars."

Well, that is what I was getting said Mamie. "As Grace passed Harry Simington said to me, 'It cost something to keep that an. They tell me, though, that husband's father is probably the hiest man in town. Have you met her?' I answered, 'No, but have a very dear friend who has intimate with her since childd.'

'A man friend?' asked Simington ingly.

'No,' I answered, 'I never had a friend. I do not think that any can be a real friend to any womPlato and his philosophy has r interested me. My friend is Whitson Carleton.'

'Miss Carleton, Miss Carleton. I think I ever met her. Is she the show?'

'No, Mr. Simington. Miss Carlehas been ill ever since you have in the city. Her father and Mr. y's father are very intimate ds, and Mr. Carleton is perhaps wealthier than Mr. Halsey. But is not a young woman who cares ociety, and just before her nerbreakdown she was private secry to Kenneth Halsey's father.'

'Well, if Mrs. Kenneth Halsey up her stride it may be posthat Mr. Carleton will be asked ome to the rescue of his friend Halsey.'

'What do you mean?' I asked.

'I mean that I don't think that a millionaire could pay the debts Mrs. Halsey, Junior, seems to be racting. Why, she lost a thoudollars on the turn of a card at Villa without the batting of an sh.'

'Did she pay?' I asked immedi-

'I did not see her do so,' he said, I know that Sellers, with whom made the wager, said that he the money the next day.'" Mamie, do you know what date was?" I demanded excitedly.

No, but I will ask Simington the time I see him."

Do that, Mamie, but I don't want to act as though it was anything ve than idle curiosity on your . But I am extremely anxious to w the exact date of this transaction. Do you think that it was while I was ill?"

"Yes, I am sure of it. It was some time last month."

What a good friend Mamie is. She never asked me why I wanted to know or showed any curiosity whatever. Someone has said that friendship could be defined as the interest that lasts, but I would define it as harmonic understanding that accepts without question. Believing this, I was able to question further.

"Do you mean to tell me, Mamie, that Grace still has anything to do with that man Sellers?"

FORMER RESIDENT MARRIED.

RIDGEFIELD, Wash., Dec. 28.—Miss Helen Clara Custard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Custard, of Sara, and Thomas E. Luster, also of Sara, were married Wednesday at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. C. C. Curtis, of the Vancouver Christian church, officiating. Miss Margaret Custard attended her sister and Thomas Todd of Portland was best man. Philip Custard, a brother of the bride, received the cake with hidden ring, and his fiance, Miss Lona Bryant, found the thimble. Mrs. Luster taught school in this county for several years. Luster is employed as engineer by the Southern Pacific.

Mr. Luster is well known in Roseburg and formerly resided here while employed as engineer on the local division of the Southern Pacific.

Movie Closeups

Once more Charles Ray has demonstrated in the delineation of so-called rube characters that he is by far the peer of motion picture stars.

This time he proves his superior talent as a portrayer of "hick" parts in a delightful celluloid version of Sol Smith Russell's great stage hit "Peacefu Valley" which is the attraction at the Antlers theatre for the last time tonight.

Ray takes the part of Hosiah Howe, a hard working farmer lad of happy disposition, with a widowed mother and little sister to provide for. It is no exaggeration to say that in this role he has contributed to the screen a character that ranks as one of the most noteworthy achievements of the silent drama.

The photoplay is filled with humor and pathos, with a spirit of optimism predominating. It is one of those clean cut, wholesome cinema productions that never fail to leave an audience thoroughly refreshed.

In the leading feminine role opposite Ray is Ann May, and other members of the company prominent in the cast supporting Charles Ray are Harry Myers, Lincoln Steadman, Walter Perkins, William Courtright, Vincent C. Hamilton, Jesse Herring, Ann May, Lydia Knott, Charlotte Pierce, Melba Lorraine and Ida Lewis. Jerome Storm assisted by Harry Decker, directed the big production.

Mark Twain's immortal boy hero, "Huckleberry Finn" was a regular guy. So is Lewis Sargent, the talented boy actor who plays the part of Huck in the film version of the famous novel, which is entertaining throngs at the Majestic this week. Moreover, he proved it to the satisfaction of every boy in Los Angeles recently.

One of the newspapers in that city has equipped a swimming hole especially for boys and every day it is crowded with a splashing shouting, mob of youngsters. Young Sargent by reason of the fact that he plays the part of Huck Finn in the Paramount-Artcraft picture, was invited to be the guest of honor at a "Huck Finn day" at the swimming hole.

Did he accept? You bet.

He spent over two hours with the boys ,taught them new stunts in the water, did a few dives that went one better than any they had ever tried and gave them some inside stories of picture production. To top it off, he arranged some races and gave prizes to the winners.

Lewis, freckle-faced, and red haired, is every inch a "boy's boy" and it is little wonder that he is just naturally a success as Huck Finn.

The picture will show at the Majestic until Saturday.
