Sutherland Plant Making Lime Spray

Loyal V. Emery, manager of the Sutherland plant of the Oregon Growers' Co-operative association, reports that the plant is now manufacturing sprays of lime and sulphur liquid and is shipping it in car lots to growers especially in the southern part of the state. He reports that the capacity of the plant is about 35 barrels a day and that it will continue in operation for several months.

During the past season the Sutherland plant shipped 14 cars of prunes, 20 cars of packed apples, seven cars of celled apples and three cars of pears. This is the record of the first season for the plant since owned by the Oregon Growers' Co-operative association.

During the past week or so, Mr. Emery has signed up more than 100 acres with the association.

Annual Meeting Be Held Tonight

The members of the Christian church will hold their annual meeting tonight at the church parlors. Reports of the year from all the organizations will be given and the pastor will make his annual report, which he says will be by far the best report he has submitted to the church as its minister. Officers will be elected for the ensuing year, and this will be followed by a social hour. This has been a most prosperous year for this congregation and the members are rejoicing in the good work.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank those who so kindly assisted in the funeral of our son and brother, Leroy Jones, and for the beautiful flowers. They will be gratefully remembered.

MRS. C. W. JONES AND FAMILY.

Quaker Minister Is Grateful to Tanlac

REV. PARKER MOON, Carthage, Missouri.

Nearly everybody in southwest Missouri either knows or has heard of the Rev. Parker Moon, who for a full century has devoted his life and talents to Sunday schools and organization work for the Society of Friends or Quakers. He resides at 628 Howard Ave., Carthage, Mo.

"Uncle Parker" as he is more familiarly known, came from fine old rugged Quaker stock, and there is not a better known or more highly respected citizen in that part of the state. In referring to his remarkable restoration to health by Tanlac, he said:

"About five years ago I suffered a general breakdown. My principal trouble was nervous indigestion. My appetite was very poor and my food seldom agreed with me and I had to live on a very restricted diet. I suffered a great deal from dizzy spells and headaches; I had severe pains across the small of my back and was badly constipated most of the time. I was not able to attend to my duties. In fact, I was so weak and run down I was not able to attend my duties. This condition made me very nervous and I could not sleep at night. Frequently I would lie awake most of the night and was in that condition more or less for five years. My physician said he could not do anything for me and suggested a change of climate. I then moved to Texas and went back and forth three times but did not get the relief I had hoped for. Finally, I got so bad off I was not able to get around with any degree of comfort. I was also told that I had heart trouble.

"I had read about Tanlac and, as it had been very highly recommended to me, I decided to try it. I got a bottle and had taken only a few doses until I could notice a marked improvement in my condition. I noticed especially that I was not troubled any more with sour stomach after eating, which was a great relief.

"I kept on taking Tanlac until I fully regained my health. My appetite is splendid, I enjoy my meals and I do not find it necessary now to take any laxative medicines of any kind. I can sleep much better and am not nearly so nervous.

"I take great pleasure in recommending Tanlac to anyone who needs a good system builder or who suffers with stomach trouble. I have recommended Tanlac to a great many of my friends and am pleased to be able to reach others by giving this statement for publication."

Tanlac is sold in Roseburg by W. F. Chapman, in Dixonville by Thos. Hatfield and by leading druggists everywhere.

AND CUPID FLED, SHRIEKING

Truly, as Many Have Averred, Romance Today Has Fallen From Its Once High Estate.

They were young and it was evening, and the moon was shining. And they were young.

He was facing her, silhouetted against the silvery light of the moon. Every line of his stalwart, manly figure stood plainly outlined before her.

He looked into her lovely dark eyes. Their liquid depths fascinated him, enthralled him.

He leaned forward.

"Darling, I love you!" he breathed passionately into her tiny ear. She gazed at him passively.

"You are beautiful, wonderful, lovely!" he cried, as the moonlight illuminated her classic features.

Her glance rested upon him as he stood out clearly in the pale light.

"Will you marry me, be my wife?" he asked, with bated breath and eyes shining. Hidden fires glowed in their burning depths.

And still her gaze was upon him. He leaned forward a little farther, waiting for her answer, eagerly, fearfully.

"Will you marry me, precious one?" he asked again, his burning glance upon her scarlet lips.

She opened her mouth to speak. Pearly teeth gleamed in the silvery light.

"Ah! You are going to say 'yes,'" he muttered, passionately, taking hold of her tiny, fly-like hands. "You are going to say something."

He leaned closer, his head outlined clearly against the pale moonlight.

"I was going to say, why don't you wear a rubber band around your head, to train your ears not to stick out?" (The end of a perfect evening.)—Detroit Free Press.

BEE KEEPING IS GOOD INVESTMENT

Every Orchardist and Farmer Will Find Busy Little Workers Profitable.

POLLINIZATION AGENTS

Experience of Growers Shows That Bees Are Great Aid to Producing Heavy Yields of Orchard Products.

Why is it that, when traveling through the farming sections of the Northwest, one so seldom sees in orchard or dooryard little rows of beehives which are so common through the eastern states and in many sections of the middle west? Is it because the western farmers do not recognize the value of the bees in their relation to the fruit crops and in their equally important function of furnishing a delicious and healthful item for the table, or is it because they are under the impression that there is something complicated and mysterious connected with the handling and care of the bees? We venture to believe that if the average farmer could once be introduced to the delightful pastime of beekeeping, could be shown how easily they are handled and could be convinced that they are not vicious little villains, always ready and anxious to puncture the innocent bystander, the number of beehives throughout the country would be multiplied past counting, the quantity of fruit marketed from year to year enormously increased and the annual grocery bill materially reduced by the amount of honey to be sold or consumed.

Experiments conducted by the national department of agriculture have demonstrated the fact that if bees are excluded from the blossoms of nearly all kinds of fruit trees there will be no crop, the distribution of the pollen by the wind and being of such limited extent as to have little appreciable effect. On the other hand, orchardists and farmers who have a reasonable number of colonies of bees located in, or near, the orchard find their trees loaded to the breaking point nearly every season, and they also find that, in addition to the increased quantity, the quality is greatly improved.

The writer once visited a prune grower of the upper Willamette valley who has about twenty colonies of bees on a long bench, about the middle of his 15-acre orchard. This grower stated that his tonnage per acre was about one-third greater than that of any other grower in his section, partly because of the better pollination of the blossoms and partly because of the larger size of the prunes, and that he considered the work of the bees in the orchard to be much more valuable than the crop of honey which he harvested every fall.

Many of the best professional beekeepers of the country get their start from studying and manipulating the few colonies inherited or bought on the farm, practical experience proving to them that, taking into account the time, the space occupied and the investment, the bees were the most profitable single item on the place. To double the number of colonies, spring count, and at the same time secure a crop of honey equal to the value of the entire plant, bees and equipment, is not at all an unusual experience.

At the present time, due probably to the high prices of honey, there is an unusual demand for bees and queens, and the farmer-beekeeper who finds his colonies increasing to a point where he finds himself unable to give up the necessary time to their care will find no difficulty in disposing of his surplus at prices which will compare favorably with those of the best products of pasture or stable. Due to this almost unlimited and at the present time wholly unsatisfied demand for bees, a comparatively new line of business has been developed in the south, that of supplying bees by the pound, shipment made by express or parcel post. The bees are shaken into a small, compact shipping case lined with wire cloth, in which a sufficient amount of food has been placed to last them through to destination, safe arrival being usually guaranteed.

To such an extent has the business of furnishing queen bees grown that they now pass through the mails in such numbers as to require special rules for their handling and they are mailed not only to all parts of the United States, but to foreign countries as well, shipments having been made to Australia and the Philippines. Southern California is developing this branch of the bee business for the benefit of the coast, single breeders turning out many thousands during each season. These are sold either direct to the individual beekeeper or through a dealer, the Portland Seed company, of Portland, having handled more than 250 queens the past season in supplying their territory. While there are a number of breeds, or strains, of bees to be found throughout the northwest, the breeding of queens is confined almost exclusively to Italians.

It is not likely that the farmer who has decided to make a side line of bee culture will find it necessary or desirable to undertake the somewhat complicated work of raising queens, either for his own use or for market, to acquire a working knowledge of the various methods by which queens are introduced to colonies which have become queenless from any cause and of the relation of the ac-

Kidnap Chinese From Legation.

Kang-Shih-to, formerly treasurer of the Anfu club, who since the recent downfall of that alleged pro-Japanese organization has been in hiding in the Russian legation and for whose arrest a reward of $10,000 was offered by the Chinese government, has just been the victim of a coup on the part of Chinese servants employed in the legation, according to a dispatch from Peking, China. They entered Kang's bedroom in the early hours of the morning, bound him, wrapped him in a bed quilt and hoisted him over the legation wall. Accomplices delivered him into the hands of the squad of gendarmes which had been waiting for weeks for an opportunity to capture him and other refugees supposed to have hidden in foreign legations.

How Lightning Kills.

Numbers of cases of death by lightning have failed to reveal any direct effect of the passage of an electric current through the human body. The evidence indicates that death was caused entirely by shock. The result is psychological rather than physical, the shock inducing heart failure or other organic disturbances.

Sometimes strokes have been fatal to a mother holding the child in her arms was unharmed. Persons under the influence of a drug or intoxicated seem to escape. This seems to indicate that the psychological element is an important consideration.—Popular Science Monthly.
