Wind Wrecks School At Orchard Valley

Considerable damage was done by the high wind of Tuesday in the southern part of the county. The new school at Orchard Valley, near Canyonville, was torn off its foundations and badly twisted. It was carried for about half its width across the foundation and one corner dropped about eight feet and another was dropped about four. The building is so badly damaged that it will probably be necessary to rebuild. Another queer accident was caused by the wind at the Canyonville bridge about a mile north of Canyonville on the Pacific Highway, where about 100 feet of the siding on the up river side of the bridge was torn off without damaging the floor or roof or the opposite side. The bride is covered and crosses the Umpqua river. The lumber was dropped into the river and was lost.

Movie Closeups

Thomas Meighan, who played the hardened crook in "The Miracle Man" and is seen in "The Prince Chap" at the Majestic theatre for the last time tonight in an entirely different role has a warm spot in his heart for children Meighan's associates at the Lasky studios were well aware of this. Nevertheless they were considerably surprised recently when Meighan came racing into the studio with a pretty, flaxen-haired little girl of about four years on his shoulder, and announced breathlessly:

"Folks, meet Miss Peaches Jackson, my new leading lady."

And Peaches had to dimple and smile and hide her face against his shoulder, though the introduction was perfectly accurate, since it required three leading ladies to portray the heroine of "The Prince Chap". The action of the picture shows the heroine at the ages of four eight and eighteen. The other two leading ladies were May Giraeci and Lila Lee.

"The Prince Chap" is the first of the William DeMille productions and a paramount Arteraft picture.

Will Rogers of the "Illiterate Digest" fame plays "Cupid" in the play "Cupid the Cowpuncher" which is being shown at the Antlers for the last time tonight "Cupid the Cowpuncher" shows familiar scenes in the wild and wooly west, amusing, pathetic and true to life. A gang of humorous cowboys supply fun and thrills aplenty, and of course, there is the "prettiest girl", and an unusual touch is given by the winning of the girl by the "ugliest man" who is, of course, none other than Will Rogers.

Shirley Mason, whose next picture tentatively named "Wing Toy" a William Fox production, will be released late in January, got some interesting Chinese costumes and local in making the picture. Miss Mason delved into oriental facts and fancies to help with her character. In other words she "studied in" the part.

This brought her in contact with the motion picture industry in China and she learned that the Chinese are making what passes for a motion picture. Also she discovered that the Chinese theatres where the films are shown do not have seats.

When she inquired the reason for this she was informed that it was to prevent the patrons from remaining all day Some of the stories take a whole day or more to show, like the stage plays shown there—which run into weeks—and the management would make no money if they kept one audience all day.

So they tire their audiences out by making them stand.
