Dry Goods and Furnishings

HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

BY IDA H. McGLONE GIBSON

The Way of the Transgressor.

I knew that Grace had come to ask something of me, and I was impatiently waiting to find out what it was, as, under the circumstances, I could think of nothing I could give her.

She did not leave me long in doubt as to her mission. "Ann, I want to borrow some money from you," and from the abrupt way she spoke I knew that she felt humiliated to ask the favor.

"I have very little in my purse," I said, purposely misunderstanding her request, "but you are welcome to what I have."

"Oh, I don't want a small amount," she said. "I am in need of a large sum of money quickly and I don't know where to get it unless you lend it to me."

"How much do you want?"

"A thousand dollars," she said.

"I haven't that much money," I answered, and I had hard work to keep my voice from trembling, as I knew now what was coming. Grace had become frightened and she had conceived the idea of returning the thousand dollars to her father-in-law secretly. "Surely you can ask Ken for it," I added, for I wanted to know if he knew about the check.

"He is the last person I can ask. Ken would want to know why I wanted it, and I could not tell him. But I must have it—I must," she muttered.

"Is it as pressing as that, Grace? I haven't the money, and I am sorry, very sorry. Truly I am. If I had it I would give it to you. Tell me your trouble; perhaps we can fix it some way. Surely you have no creditor who would not wait a little while longer on Mrs. Kenneth Halsey, knowing the money your family has."

Grace was tearing her delicate handkerchief into shreds, utterly unconscious of what she was doing. "My creditor doesn't know that I owe him, but I shall be utterly undone if I do not get the money before the bank closes today," were the words that came through her tense lips, as though she was unconsciously speaking hidden thoughts aloud.

"But my dear Grace, I haven't the money. I can't help you unless you tell me why it is that your creditor is so insistent."

"I think that I will try and pawn some of my jewels," she said, and then she hesitated. "No, I dare not do that, for soon the town would be agog with gossip over it. My only hope lies in keeping this thing absolutely away from the straining ears of society, especially society unages of the newspapers."

Do you know, Ann, when Mr. Halsey gets his statements from the bank?" she asked suddenly. "This is the third of the month and I got nine this morning. Has he received his?"

"Mr. Halsey got his statements and cancelled checks on the first day of the month," I answered quietly. "Usually these checks come to me, but as I have been ill I was not in the office, and he opened the letter and looked at the amount he had in the bank, and found a discrepancy of a thousand dollars between the amount he had in the bank and his check book stubs." Purposely I hesitated a moment.

Grace seemed to fairly shrivel in her chair for a moment. She looked like an old, worn woman. "Ann, Ann," she cried, "what did he do, what did he do? Answer me quickly."

"Knowing that I was coming down the next day he bundled his checks and his statement and check book back into the envelope for me to find the error. He hates the details of his personal affairs and always gets rid of them if he can."

"Then it is all right, it is all right!" she exclaimed.

"It is not all right, Grace. I found the error. A check for which there was no stub in Mr. Halsey's check book and a signature which was a forgery."

"What did you do? What did you do? Did you tell him?"

"I haven't yet."

"Do you intend to do so?"

"I have not made up my mind."

Tomorrow—Grace Halsey's Confession.

Movie Closeups

One of the most interesting casts secured this season will surround Clara Kimball Young in her next big production, "Eyes of Youth" to be shown at the Antlers theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The cast that has been selected from the very highest ranks of the stage and screen, is exceptional and there is hardly a bit in the production that is not being played by an artist of star qualities.

Miss Young is playing the role of Gina Ashling, which was created in the New York production, one of the most sensational successes of the present season, by Marjorie Rambeau a prominent playwright.

One of the really big parts of the play is that of Paolo Salvo, the Italian impresario, who inveigles Gina into accompanying him to Europe for an operatic career. The distinguished actor, William Courtleigh, has been secured for this role, while Gareth Hughes will play the role of Kenneth Ashling, the brother, and Edmund Lowe, a favorite of both the stage and screen in New York and throughout the country, is playing the part of Peter, the suitor. The mysterious and particularly colorful character of the Hindu Yogi, that weaves itself through the play, giving an air of the mysteries of the Orient, will be created by Vincent Serrano, and Pauline Stark, recently appearing in Norman Kerry's "Soldier of Fortune," will play the role of Rith, Gina's younger sister.

Sam Southern, Ralph Lewis and Milton Sills have the other featured characters of the production and there will be twenty or more bits and small character parts to be taken care of.

"The Yellow Typhoon" one of the most daring criminal stories to be shown in this city for some time, will be the feature of the Majestic theatre bill for the last time tonight. Beautiful Anita Stewart takes a dual role, first as the Yellow Typhoon an unscrupulous and internationally known crook, and later as the twin sister of the Yellow Typhoon, who is a secret service agent, relentlessly hunting her sister down. Some exceptionally good photography is seen at the close of the picture when the two sisters are clasped in each others arms. Anita Stewart does some of the best work of her career in the picture.

LOOKING GLASS NEWS.

Roy Erickson left Saturday for Portland, where he will re-enter the Behnke-Walker business college. Roy expects to graduate in about four months more.

Rev. Mrs. Jones, of Dillard, preached a very logical sermon in the local church Sunday. Patience—living her theme—contending that real happiness must come to a large extent from living a life of service to others; from the desire to contribute something worth while to the world's achievements; from a desire to do good and to exercise this power. It is time, therefore, to take stock of ourselves; to become retrospective; to determine whether we are getting the best out of life that our circumstances permit, and to face the coming years with renewed courage and a firm resolution that whatever may be in store for us we will keep our eyes steadfastly fixed on the uplifting forces.

Glen Brenner was visiting friends in the valley Wednesday.

Edgar Anderson, of Ione, Oregon, visited T. W. Morgan and family this week. Mr. Anderson was delighted with the mild climate and stated that they were enjoying a foot of snow at home.

Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Stokes visited Roseburg Sunday, accompanied by Representative A. H. Marsh, who will go on to Salem to take up his duties as representative from Douglas county.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. George March was the scene of a most delightful surprise party on Friday night, given in honor of A. H. Marsh, representative-elect from this valley. Friends came from all directions until the spacious rooms were overflowing with good cheer and happiness. The young people enjoyed themselves with games and music, while the older ones enjoyed themselves in social converse. Those enjoying the splendid hospitality of the host and hostess were A. H. Marsh and family, W. J. Morgan and family, R. B. Montgomery and family, H. P. Stokes, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Jones, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Heard, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. H. G.
