

HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

BY IDAH MCGLONE GIBSON

Jerome Guesses Ann's Secret.

It spoke well for Jerry's understanding of the eternal feminine that he did not return immediately to the subject of love or of the money he had loaned me. It was my own stupidity that reopened that subject.

Instead, he said with a return to banter: "Well, I suppose you will quit being the 'poor working girl' now and join the idle rich. I shall expect the society column to fairly reek with the descriptions of your clothes, of the way you do your hair, and of your escapades."

"I am all through with escapades. I left them behind when I left the check room of your restaurant."

"I should never have allowed you to go in there. I have never forgiven myself."

"There speaks the arrogance of the male. You, Jerry Hathaway, had no right even to talk about allowing or not allowing me to do anything. Why is it every man wants to protect the woman he is fond of?"

I knew I had made a mistake the moment I said said these words, and was doubly sure of it when Jerry exclaimed: "Then you know I love you. At first I felt that Jim had the first claim upon your love and Jim, you know, is my friend. But Jim has found in Mamie—bless her dear, honest heart—someone who fulfills all his requirements, and she will make him very happy. He told me this morning that they were going to be married very soon, and that was what brought me here."

"To tell me that Jim and Mamie were to be married?" I asked stupidly, trying to be flippant.

"No, Ann dear, I came to ask you to marry me. I am not sure but that your father would not want to look higher than Jerry Hathaway, but, Ann, I have been a pretty decent fellow as fellows go. I have plenty of money, and I would try to make you very happy. I truly and sincerely love you. In all my life I have never told another woman what I have just told you. I have been sentimental enough, if you call it that, to keep those words sacred for the woman I love."

"Oh, I am sorry, Jerry, very sorry," Jerry held up his hand. "Don't say it, Ann. Give me another chance. I'll wait for you until I am old and toothless if necessary."

I smiled, and even Jerry grinned at his promise.

"I mean it," he said stoutly. "I love you and—"

"I don't doubt you, Jerry dear, at all, but—"

"It can never be?" interrupted Jerry. "I should have known it the moment I saw you this afternoon. Is there anyone else, Ann?"

"You have no right to ask that, Jerry, but I am going to answer you. Yes."

"It isn't Jim, is it? Surely, it isn't Jim?"

"No, it isn't Jim," I said a little wearily.

Jerry clasped both my hands and gazed long and searchingly into my face. He found the answer, for he exclaimed:

"Oh, Ann! Ann! I know what a fool I have been, but not so great as he, Ann, not so great as he. I have not been foolish enough to pick up the piece of glass and let the jewel that I might have had drop from my hand."

"Stop, Jerry, stop. I will not have you say that. You have no right to even guess who—"

"Yes, I have, Ann. I have the right of a man who loves you."

His words kindled me into defending Ken, and I said: "Jerry, you have no reason for thinking that the man knew, and I have no reason for hoping that he will ever know."

"Ann," said Jerry, "why should you and I be unhappy because another has made a great mistake?"

"That's it, Jerry, that's it. One of the great lessons of life is that not only do we have to pay for our own mistakes, but often we must do that much harder thing, pay to the fullest for the mistakes of others."

EVERGREEN GRANGE MEETS.

Evergreen Grange No. 468 held a very interesting meeting Saturday night at their hall near Green.

After the usual routine of business had been disposed of a debate occupied the lecture hour. "Resolved, that the people of thirty years ago were happier than at the present time." Many points were brought out, some good and some laughable. The judges decided in favor of the affirmative.

If I remember right, the people of thirty years ago had the same selfish desires and ambitions as today, same pleasures and same sorrows. People are much as they always have been.

Human nature does not change. The thing that he tried to impress on the minds of the people over and over again is that "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth," but "Doing unto others as you wish to be done by." A sunny disposition in a home, scattering cheer and sunshine along life's pathway, can secure more happiness than all the wealth of the world.

Q&A

About Batteries

Q.—Is there really any difference in batteries?

A.—Yes, but there are really only two kinds of batteries. Those with wood separators and those with Threaded Rubber Insulation.

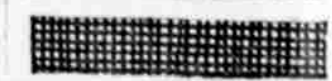

Q.—Is Threaded Rubber Insulation the only feature that puts the Willard Threaded Rubber Battery ahead of the ordinary automobile battery?

A.—By no means. The Willard Threaded Rubber Battery has all the improvements that have grown out of Willard's years of specialization in building starting, lighting and ignition batteries. Ask us about it.

HISTORIC HOUSE IN MARKET

Shakespeare Hotel at Stratford-on-Avon Recently Put Up at Auction in London.

On Thanksgiving day there was offered at auction in London the Shakespeare hotel at Stratford-on-Avon, a beautiful specimen of fourteenth century architecture, which for years has been the main resort of Americans and other tourists to Stratford-on-Avon.

The history of Stratford-on-Avon may be traced back for a period of 1,000 years, and as the birthplace of the great poet it has become a classic center visited annually by some 50,000 people. The Guild house, where Shakespeare was born; Shottery, where he courted Anne Hathaway; Charlotte Park, once the seat of Sir Thomas Lucy, whose displeasure Shakespeare incurred by stealing his deer; the Shakespeare Memorial theater, on the banks of the Avon, and Shakespeare's monument, are all places worthy of visiting in the old market town of Stratford-on-Avon.

The Shakespeare hotel, situated in the center of the town and close to the Shakespeare Memorial Theater, was erected in the fourteenth century, and has been in the hands of the late Mr. Justice family since 1870. A few doors from the Shakespeare hotel is the Harvard house, which was the early home of the Harvard family, founders of Harvard university.

MUST PAY TRIBUTE TO ART

Not in Admiration, But in Current Coin, is the Edict of the French Authorities.

After all these years of luxurious idleness the Venus de Milo must become a wage earner. The authorities of France have so decreed. And not only Venus, but Mona Lisa and all the other celebrities gathered in the Louvre, and in the Luxembourg and other galleries as well. For the flat has gone forth recently that hereafter those who have been accustomed to visit the museums of Paris day after day, finding their treasures free as air, must pay an admission fee. If you want to go to admire Venus in her crimson velvet seclusion you must pay for the privilege. To be sure, she is worth any price, you must admit. And when you go into the Salon Carré of the Louvre and stop to meditate about what the enigmatical Mona Lisa is meditating, you must pay for that, too. Not a separate admission for each department. No, they are all banded together in one big union, as it were, all those priceless treasures of each museum, and hereafter they will earn their keep.

Rafts May Cross Pacific.

Swedish lumbermen are on this coast investigating the possibility of rafting lumber from British Columbia to Europe. Lumber rafts of large size, called rafautes, have been successfully towed from Sweden to Great Britain, says the Scientific American. The Ocean Rafter Syndicate of London, England, has sent William Olsson of Stockholm, an experienced rafaute builder, here to investigate the possibility of adapting that method to British Columbia timber exports.

The rafautes are made of square timbers. Mr. Olsson, though expressing nothing definite, believes that the tremendous timbers of the British Columbia forests will make possible the construction and successful operation of rafautes far larger than the rafts now shipped out of the Baltic. Swedish structures carry 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 feet each. It is proposed that the British Columbia rafts will contain 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 feet.

Rothschild's Best Tip.

In 1871 a friend approached Baron Rothschild, the great financier, who was a firm believer in the maxim "Buy when everybody else is selling and sell when others are buying," and asked what the banker considered a first-class investment.

"Buy French rentes," said Rothschild; "you can get them cheaply now." French bonds were then selling at 63.

"But the streets of Paris are running with blood," objected his friend. "That's the reason you can buy them cheaply," replied the money baron.

A quarter of a century later in 1896 those bonds were selling at 105 and were considered as perhaps the most conservative investment in the world.

Flier's Good Work.

For revealing details hidden from horizontal observation, the value of the "bird's-eye" view was demonstrated anew in a look not long ago. The attention of a five-striving about near the Molineux was caught by various visions of smoke arising from apparently deserted engines, and closer inspection revealed a number of automobiles hidden in the brush, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. When the alarm was given with a companion and made a landing, a large copper still was discovered, attended by four men and fed with corn from a wagon.

The Matrimonial Kind.

"The men's wear department is two doors to the left, 427," said the officious bookkeeper. "We are having a special sale of collars today."

"I don't want any collars," said the book-keeping man, who was waiting for his wife. "I've been wearing a pretty shirt with one for twenty years."

"The same collar, sir?"

"The same. A preacher put it on me."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Just add water It's ready

It's so economical to use Fisher's Pancake Flour—
Economical in time—you just add cold water and there's a big bowlful of batter ready for the griddle.
Economical in cost—this combination of the choicest buckwheat, wheat, corn and rice contains even the sweet powdered milk to save you adding fresh milk.
You would use five pints of milk to mix a package of ordinary pancake flour.
Fisher's Pancake Flour costs you about 5c more for the package and is mixed with cold water.
That's economy worth while.

Once you know the Fisher quality in Fisher's Pancake Flour you'll want to try Fisher's Blend Flour, Fisher's Rolled Oats and Fisher's Granulated Wheat Berries. Your dealer will supply you gladly.

WHY USE COAL OR WOOD?

The Oliver Oil-Gas Burner makes any stove or range a gas stove. Doesn't change your stove, simply fits in a firebox, cracks and bakes better than coal or wood. The oil is fed by gravity pressure. This is far superior to air pressure, more reliable and absolutely safe. Will demonstrate at your own home. F. C. Mann, 1371 Winchester St. Phone 129-R.
