Leonard Stands Alone In His Class

By Henry L. Farrell.
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Many a moon will all around before Benny Leonard is forced to vacate the lightweight throne room.

In fact, New Yorkers believe that through lack of good foes to conquer Benny will be forced eventually to mingle with the welterweights of John Jack McAuliffe as a retired undefeated champion.

When the champion recently disposed of Ritchie Mitchell, the classy Milwaukee contender he swept to one side the last and only dangerous contender in the class.

Mitchell is far superior to Willie Jackson and Lew Tander, the vocal champions, and he is more courageous inasmuch as he agreed to meet Leonard for a sum less than one-half of what the "most logical contenders" wanted. Mitchell is good enough to be within a hair's breadth of the championship. In any other day but Leonard's, he would be the king of the class.

So, in knocking out Mitchell, Benny Leonard proved his greatness. A veteran of nine years experience at twenty-five years of age, Leonard is the opinion of many of the old timers, the peer of Joe Gans, who was considered the greatest of all of the lightweights.

A great boxer, a smart and very crafty general and a hard hitter, the champion possesses all the "class" befitting of his rank. He showed that a wise head rests on his shoulders in the Mitchell bout when after having knocked the Milwaukee boy down three times he was felled for a full count by a desperate wild swing of the boy.

The champion's pride was hurt, he was amazed at finding himself on the floor for the first time since he won the title. A less crafty boxer would have jumped to his feet with a smile to show that it was an accident something. Freddy Welsh did that in his fight with Leonard and he lost the fight.

Perhaps Leonard thought of that when he went down. At any rate he went down for the count, and after he came up, recovered. After the bout the champion denied that it was a fluke fall. "I went down before an awful wallop and it taught me something," he said. "I never do go to thinking that you are too good. Misjudgment of Mitchell's ability might have cost me the title. Confidence is all right, but too much confidence is dangerous. I'll never be caught the same way in any other fight."

FEELS JOY OF LIVING ONCE MORE, SHE SAYS

Miss Cogan Declares Tanlac Overcome All Her Troubles And She Thinks It's Just Wonderful.

"I used to think all the statements about Tanlac were exaggerated but I know different now for I have used the medicine myself with wonderful results," said Miss Grace Cogan, the popular cashier of the Hanner hotel, 241 Third street, Pasco, Idaho.

"Before I took Tanlac, I had been in terribly poor health for three long years. I was all run down, had no appetite, was as nervous as I could be and so far as restful sleep was concerned, I would have been almost as well off if I had never gone to bed at all.

"I had constant headaches and pains in my stomach, and I was so nervous I was just a diag to go to bed. I took a bottle of Tanlac, and I feel like a new man. I have a good appetite and I have a joy in living once more, for my strength and energy have come back to me. I could hardly have believed any medicine could have done me so much good in so short a time."

Tanlac is sold in Roseburg by W. F. Chapman; in Dissoville by Thos. Hatfield and by leading druggists everywhere.

Movie Closeups
Mac Murray, the pretty film actress who has scored recently in "On With the Dance," and the "Right to Love," made an unexpected debut into motion pictures. She was formerly a stage dancer, and was featured in the Ziegfeld Follies of 1915. Her act opened with the showing of a few feet of film, in which Miss Murray was depicted running down the aisle of the theatre to the stage. At this point the curtain was lifted and disclosed the dancer in person standing before the footlights in identically the same costume that she wore on the screen.

Charles Ray's version of "45 Minutes from Broadway" (the George M. Cohan classic which he has adapted to the screen) is being kept close to the original form which had such tremendous success during 12 years on the stage. The wide popularity of the original Cohan play and the star's recognition of its value in the form known to a vast public, has convinced its producers that the biggest success would attend the screen version following closely to the lines of the popular stage piece. "45 Minutes from Broadway" is the first of the star's new productions to be presented by Arthur S. Kane, for First National Release. It will be shown at the Antlers theatre for the last time tonight.

The sponsor's of Mr. Ray's initial picture stressed the point that a too greatly altered photoplay adaptation of the Cohan play was contrary to the country wide value of this well known comedy drama.

"Black Beauty" known and loved for forty years in every part of the world where books are read, has come to life. The wonderful horse, whose autobiography was recorded by Anna Sewall, to delight many millions of readers in every civilized country on the globe, is to be seen in action. His life, through all of its changing phases of playful outdoor early pleasures and trials and tears, his contact with the lives of other horses and of human beings, his hardships, dangers and triumphs—all these are unfolded in the motion picture screen.

Several months were required in the making of Black Beauty, days and days of patient work having been spent by Director David Smith on the horse sequence alone. This was met with a particular regard to the players adaptability to a certain "role," it is headed by Jean Paige, who, as Jessie Gordon, has the best role of her career. Elaborate sets were built and far away locations were visited in order that the background might be just as described by Anna Sewall. The costumes are the same as are described by the author. In a word, Black Beauty, as presented on the screen in "Black Beauty" come to life.
