

FARMING

The Biggest Business in the United States

And it is the only big business that has not been thoroughly organized during the past few years. Because all other business is organized and the farmer is not, the interests of the farmer have not been protected as their importance deserves. There is but one way by which the farmer may come into his own, and that way is—

ORGANIZATION

Organization needs you and you need organization, Mr. Farmer. Every farmer is entitled to three things in his business:

- Cost of Production, if he produces economically.
- Stability of Markets, over which he now has little control.
- A Reasonable Margin of Profit, which all other business expects and gets.

These things cannot be secured by each farmer acting individually. They must be secured through a well-financed organization. The Farm Bureau has three parts in its organization to get these three things the farmers want.

Watch Papers for Details and Places of Public Meetings

The Douglas County Farm Bureau helps solve all local problems of production, distribution, home economics, and better farm life generally.

The Oregon State Farm Bureau is the state-wide voice of the farmer bureau members in legislation, economics, marketing, industrial and allied interests.

The American Farm Bureau Federation is the masterful organization which represents you, Mr. Farmer, in the seats of the mighty at Washington, in all State Capitals, and wherever regulatory and administrative commissions are sitting.

Membership in the Douglas County Farm Bureau entitles you to all the benefits of three links of the perfected plan. The membership fee is $5.00 a year, for a term of years, with a provision which permits withdrawal after one year.

The drive in eight communities starts Monday, February 14th, 1921, and continues one week. Membership men will call upon you at your own farm to see you and make you membership, as well as to explain the full details of the Farm Bureau work from County to Nation. Be ready for them when they call. They are, every one, just plain farmers like yourself—Farm Bureau members in their home counties. Get into this most perfect organization that is really doing big things now. Watch papers for dates and places of meetings. The campaign is under the direction of the

HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

BY IDAH MCGLONE GIBSON

Mamie's Matrimonial Ideas.

I did not dream that this was to be my last interview with Jerry for many a year. When I learned that he had left town I wrote him in care of his father. My letter was returned saying, "Mr. Hathaway is out of town indefinitely and has left no address."

Jimmie Callahan and Mamie hurried their marriage arrangements as soon as they learned that I knew about their engagement. I wrote a letter to Jim saying, "Don't you think that you are rather stingy not to let me congratulate you and Mamie? I know, dear Jim, that you are going to be very happy and as I told you I think Mamie is the only girl I know that is good enough for you."

Mamie came to see me that night and we arranged about the wedding. The dear girl wanted a white dress and a veil and although it was the last thing I would want, I could understand why Mamie Riley wanted to make her wedding something distinct and set apart in her life. I persuaded her to let me furnish her entire trousseau and thanks to Dad I spared no expense.

I put in that outfit all the dainty underthings that every girl wants no matter what her circumstances or station. Pink satin corsets, embroidered with blue forget-me-nots, pink and blue and lavender and pale green nightgowns with the rest of the set to match. Quantities of handwork and embroidery. Silk stockings "enough to stock a store"—said Mamie handling them delightedly, negligees and housecoats which made her lovelier than ever.

"How can I ever thank you, Ann? If a girl can not keep her man when she has all these beautiful clothes she does not deserve him," was Mamie's comment as we stood for a moment in the store while the saleswoman had gone to find something more to tempt us.

"Don't tell me that it is not great to be rich," was her next remark as she held a much beruffled petticoat up to herself in a way that allowed her silken clad ankles and satin slippers to make the greatest impression.

"I never did take much stock in that foolishness that riches do not bring happiness."

"People are not happy Ann, because of their poverty; they are happy in spite of it. That's because human nature is so constituted that given a modicum of comfort it will rise to the buoyant heights of imagination."

"Why, Mamie, you are positively poetical."

"Yes, I thought it was pretty good for a girl who has only gone through grammar school," said Mamie with a laugh.

"Are you going to keep up your music, dear?" I asked.

"Why of course I am," said Mamie surprised. "I never entered my mind that I was not going to keep on with that, and I am sure it did not enter Jim's."

"Jim is a pretty sensible boy, Mamie, but I am not so sure that he won't find having a wife away every night at the theater rather trying. You see you will want to sleep late in the mornings, and Jim will have to be at his work at nine o'clock. How will you arrange that?"

"Oh, we have arranged that already. Jim and I have talked the matter over very seriously and we are going to be one of those modern wedded couples that have our own separate establishments."

"What do you mean, my dear?" I asked in astonishment.

"Just what I say," she answered. "I am going to keep my flat with mother, or rather mother and I are going to move into a better one and Jim is going to take an apartment across the hall of the same building and then we will not disturb each other with the routine of our workaday lives. Jim said that he had always thought many marriages were unsuccessful because husbands and wives were always under one another's feet. And he knew that with an actress wife he would be disturbed many nights by his late return from the theater, while I would probably be disturbed by his getting up early. Consequently we have obtained that by separate apartments near enough for us to see each other many times a day, and far enough apart to keep all discord and strife out of our love."

"Well, my dear, I shall look upon your experiment with great interest, and I tell you truly, Mamie, that I never thought it possible that either you or Jim would be so unconventional."

"We are not unconventional. We are only pioneers," said Mamie, as she twisted her head to get another glimpse in the mirror of her charming self.

BENSON SCHOOL NOTES

The Benson Parent Teacher Association held their annual meeting on last Thursday and had about forty in attendance.

Miss Ruth Wilcox played a piano solo, Professor McKnight of the high school gave a talk on the school, and Miss Viola Willett gave two readings. One was an Italian dialect and the other she recited as she played at the piano. Miss Laughlin talked on books that children should and should not read. She said such books as "Treasure Island" and the Alger books should not be read because there was nothing in them that the children might get that would help them. She also said that in magazines as "The Red Book," "The Green Book," and "Top Notch" and "Cosmopolitan" there was something once in a while that would help them but very little.

The program was completed by two songs by the sixth grade.

Professor Gastin is improving and expects to resume his duties tomorrow.

James Crenshaw, a local boy scout and an eighth grade pupil left this morning for San Diego, California, where he will reside.

GLENDALE NEWS NOTES

The play given by amateur actors last Friday at the auditorium in this city entitled "The Frozen Trail" drew an immense crowd and the performers all proved to be "professionals," there never was the smallest omission in the long program of a hesitation in expression. Each of the performers did especial credit to the performers did especial credit to the theaters. Glendale en masse is certainly very proud of our home talent.

The Glendale orchestra rendered most entrancing music with Mrs. G. N. Hickey at the piano. Edward Throne of Anchor, excelled in a cornet solo and responded to a very hearty encore. J. L. Campbell of the Glendale news staged the play with his usual success, and also was manager of the entertainment. The proceeds of the play will be used to put a memorial in our cemetery to Our Father Heroes, who made the supreme sacrifice in the late world war. Our home talent will give another entertainment in the near future for the same purpose and we all will do this small part in honoring our sacred dead, no matter where their hallowed bodies may have found sepulture.

Isaac Weaver, pioneer resident of South Myrtle Creek who now resides at Myrtle Creek visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Strader in this city. Mrs. Strader is Mr. Weaver's daughter. We were honored by a nice visit with Mr. Weaver, Mrs. Strader and the latter's son and daughter whom we are glad to claim as residents of our city. Mr. Strader is in the employ of the Lyttel-Lervan company. We certainly appreciate the kindly greetings of our pioneer friends.

Rev. Dr. Louis Albert Banks gave a lecture at Olive church on Wednesday evening. The church was crowded and the people speak in the most enthusiastic manner of the lecture. Dr. Banks certainly carries his audience right with him. He held the attention of all the children and the young people who were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ramey are again residents of this city.

L. F. Lozier of Medford is taking orders in marble and granite work here this week.

L. B. Miller and his mother, Mrs. S. R. Miller of Anchor valley were looking after business and greeting old friends in this city last week.

Mrs. Rogers of the Overland restaurant is doing an excellent business. She is an experienced hotel keeper.

It is with profound regret that we note the going away of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Kellogg and we hope they may again return to our city.

W. C. Brown, better known as "Billy" has returned to this city and Mrs. Brown and son Kenneth, will arrive soon. In their return we are claiming our own and we all extend them a cordial welcome home.

Prosperity is in evidence in our city and valley. We note that the Widow Preferred to Meet Death at Home.

"For many years I suffered from stomach trouble. All the doctors said I would have to go to a hospital and be operated on for gall stones or I would not live much longer. I told them I preferred to meet death at home. One day I picked up an advertisement of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and since taking a course of it more than a year ago, have not had a single pain in my stomach and a good appetite and can eat anything." It is a simple harmless remedy that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments including appendicitis.
