NEW YORK NEWS LETTER

NEW YORK, Feb. 22—A cow kicked over a lamp and Chicago was visited by a never to be forgotten fire. The other night on her way home from a movie, a New York woman paid 65 cents for a pumpkin pie and fifteen of the largest women's organizations of the city have delved into the baking industry with a determination to thresh things out very thoroughly and completely.

thoroughly and completely.

The purchaser of the pic, informed Mrs. Louis Weizmiller deputy commissioner of markets, of the extortionate price of 65 cents. Mrs. Weizmiller interviewed the baker, He explained that the supper after the movie habit was the cause of his high prices. "People have got to stopping in regularly to get food for the after the picture suppers at their homes," he said "That means that I have to keep my fires going all the evening and pay my bakers and the clerks overtime rates to stay here. That pumpkin pie cost me 60 cents." It seemed plausible, but Mrs. Weizmiller decided that it was a good time to get the women interested in the whole proposition. So five big baking companies are to prepare the data and answer the questions for an aroused womankind.

The toy ballon men of the city are sold out. And their merchandise is not in the hands of children either. Serious business men and haushty chauffeurs are making the down town route look like a carnival these days with brightly-colored balloons tied to either end of their wind-chields. The motorists explain the outburst of color as a "slient protest" against the price of gasoline, which refused to take a drop similar to that of other commodities, liut the that of other commodities. But the balloon men tell yo uthat it is just an excuse for suppressed childish ness to crop out in grownips that have to find some excuse for it every time they give way to it.

"It is time for us to stop using printer's ink defining boundaries an use it in finding markets abroad," said Julius H. Reiter, president of the Credit Guide Banker's Commer chal Association, and publisher of the Credit Guide, at a dinner of the association held the other night in the Pennsylvania hotel. "There are markets all over the world for the American goods," he said. "And; there are factories and workmen all throughout this country capable. there are factories and workmen all throughout this country capable of making the goods for these markets. Now then, if we want to be prosperous, if we want our labor employed, at good wages, and our retail men and manufacturers and the rest of us, enjoying the fruits of general prosperity, we must do it. We must get out and find these markets, and sell them. We can do it as well as any other country, and we must do it, because when our factories are as any other country, and we must do it, because when our factories are as any other country.

HER DAUGHTER HIS SON.

BY IDAH McGLONE GIBSON

Old Friends.

After reading Ken's letter, not-win-tranding its underlying tragedy, I think I was happier than I ever had n in my life.

It was worth walting for all these It was worth waiting for all these years—Ken's love, Ken's worship.

There are people who call worship and adoration very cold passions, but, being cold, they hast. They never burn to ashes on your heart but instead they are the two, unquenchable lighted lamps which help you along your dark ways.

When did the know?

Poor Grace! What did she know? What could she know, being the daughter of her mother, of a love like Ken's and mine? And because she did not know it she fought against it. She judged everything freen the standpoint of sex and, poor child, she did not even know that true love between the sexes is the true love between the sexes is the basis of spiritual, as well as phys-ical, life. She only knew sex as something that had been beating gainst humanity through the cen turies, something to be beckened and regulated by maints and sinners, something which probably now seems to her to be the great surging tide of human suffering. I, on the other hand, knew after reading Ken's letter, after going back thru the long years that though we were separated he has always been a part of me. I also know that the love of a man for a woman can make a very beautiful thing of humanity.

I was almost willing to say the my story was ended with Ken's let er and yet even while that thought was vaguely running through my brain, I learned as I read that letter that it wasn't youth that I wanted, but it was love, the love that should be the heritage of every woman.

Unconsciously my hands strayed through the great pile of letters on my bed. There were three or four from Mamie and Jim, and oh, how nappy it made me to read them.

In the last one Mamie confided to ne, that a child was coming to coe. ete their happiness. I could just e Marrie as a mother, and I wanted to come back from across the world just to be around when Mamie re-tiscovered herself through motherinscovered herself through mother-bood. I want to look into her eyes as she holds her baby in her arms with that ineffable look upon her are that has been on every woman's are since Mary raised the Christ-child to her breast and knew she held the world in her arms.

I think I had began to be just a little envious of Jim and Mamio's completeness, when I spied among ny letters, the handwriting of Jerry completoness, when I spied among ny letters, the handwriting of Jerry Hathaway—Jerry, who had disappeared to entirely out of my life after I definitely refused him.

"Can this be Jerry?" I asked myself as I read his long letter telling ne that he was pursuing in India tudies in the esoteric. Think of lerry Hathaway—laughwe, flirting rresponsible Jerry—dealing with he secrets of the Yoga! Teuly you an care for a man very much and to cin love you greatly and yet you an be strangers!

I think Jerry's letter, which howed me that he was quite as increased and satisfied with his new billosophy as he had been in the sursuit of many other fada, computed me greatly, for whatever any ne may say, I do not believe that WATER "CURES" OLD BELIEF In Both Ancient and Modern Days Fountains Have Been Considered Pools of Healing.

When you drink mineral water de you do it because you believe in its curative properties or because you are supersitious? Or both?

Extraordinary virtue has been at-tributed to the waters of pools and streams by nearly all peoples of all times. Among the modern Greeks to day we find the remnants of the old pelief that the water from the Grotto of Macedonia would cure all these who drank if they entered the cave with a lamp or torch in one hand and a pitcher in the other, filled the pitcher and left some scrap of clothing be-hind, going silently and not turning back from "being scared by the noises that ensued." And not only in Greece, but in England, there are many spot where the bushes around a certain pool will be hung thick with shreds of clothing left by those who came to be tured.

According to modern Greeks the tion of the Nereids, and the virtue of the water depends upon it being drunk in silence and with appropriate sacri-fice. Old Church of England canons dating back to 1102 forbid the wor-ship of wells without the bishop's permission, attributing the custom to beathenishness and a survival of the could of the fountain as a symbol of the source of life. It was pointed out then that the naming of wells was as old as the days of the Patriarchs; that Abraham and Issue are both quoken of in the Bible as having done , but that worshipping them was a

How to Know Poetry.

We literates have been taught to send poetry, and taught also that it is highly commendable to enjoy it. In order to know what kind of poetry sught to be especially enjoyed, we read other books, written by critics. In order to understand what the poetry hat ought to be admired means, we read other books by professional read other books by professional grammarians. By the time we have inished this preparatory reading, we are somewhat confused. We are in oubt as to what poetry actually is, and how it differs from prose. In this predicament we fall back on the printer. If every line begins with a capfial letter, we assume that it is po-ctry.—Samuel McChord Crothers in the Atlantic Monthly.
