Alicia Hammerly A Woman Who Wouldn't Remarry

By Idah McGlone Gibson
The Hotel Writer

Getting Settled.

Mother Hammerly came back to the bed where I was shaking with nervousness, and I told her of my feeling about cats. She could not understand it and, although she did not say anything, I knew that she thought I was a very foolish and affected little piece of femininity.

"Why Tommy won't hurt you," she said. "Hal is very fond of him. He's been in the habit of climbing that tree and coming up every night to sleep in Hal's room. I hope you will grow to like Tommy, my dear Alicia, for when Hallet is in the house the cat is always in his lap."

"But I can't get used to him," I explained. "If you should put a cat in my lap, I am quite sure that I would die."

"Don't be silly. They don't hurt you," she remarked coldly, and with that she left me down to luncheon and she did not call me. I found some milk chocolate in my dressing bag and nibbled upon it.

About three in the afternoon my trunks came and Mother Hammerly preceded the expressman upstairs. We could get only one of them into the bedroom and when I suggested that the other two be put for a little while in the guest room, she said: "Well, I expect we will have to, but I hate to have my spare room lumbered up."

I did not have a cent with which to tip the expressman and so I said to her: "Will you please give the expressman fifty cents for me? When Hal comes, he will return it to you."

With a great deal of disapprobation she went down stairs and came back with fifty cents in her hand. The expressman was in the other room unloading my trunks. "I never tip anyone," she said. "These men are paid for doing this work and why should we add more than they deserve?"

I did not answer. I was too discouraged to enter into any discussion.

I tried to unpack my clothes but there was not room in the closet and in the dresser for even the contents of my wardrobe trunk. Finally, after I had spilled its contents all over the bed and chairs and cluttered up the floor with shoes and hats, I simply sat down amidst the chaos, utterly despairing. I do not think I could have stood it much longer if

Hal had not come home early in the afternoon.

"Oh, Hal, I am so glad to see you," I said, throwing my arms around his neck.

"Well, I couldn't stay away any longer, either, so I just told Dad that I was coming up here to see you and take you for a little drive. You know Dad's very fond of horses. Alix. He has the best pair in town. Slip on your street dress and we'll go for a ride about the city. What's the matter with you, dear, have you been crying?"

And then, of course, the whole cat story came out.

"You don't mean to tell me that you're afraid of a cat? Why, Alix, I've seen you bait your own hooks when we've been fishing and tear your fish off the hook when you caught one!"

"I know it, I know it," I answered miserably, "but I can't help it. I can't stay in the same room with a cat. And, Hal, dear, you won't let him come in the window into this room any more, will you?"

"Of course I won't if that's the way you feel about it. But I can't understand it."

"Neither can I," I answered, "but I just can't endure them."

By this time I had gotten into my street toga, hurriedly washed my face and put on my hat. Like two children Hal and I rushed down the stairs, because I had hurriedly stepped up to Hal as he stood looking out of the window to see if the cat was still in the tree-top, and touching him lightly, said: "Tag."

"My, what is the matter!" exclaimed Hal's mother, rushing into the hall. "Is the cat after Alicia again?"

"I stood stark still and left Hal to make explanations."

"We're just playing tag, mother," he said lightly.

"Well, I was in hopes, Hal, that Alicia would look upon life more seriously than you do, and I'm afraid that she is not going to. I don't know really what your father will do if you continue so irresponsible."

I knew that Hal's mother was reproving me over his shoulder, but I did not say anything. However, I determined that the next morning I should have my duties in that house very definitely laid out, and because I was sure that I was not going to please my mother-in-law even if I tried my best to do so.

Tomorrow—Hal's mother doesn't understand Alicia.

Veterans Dine With President

WASHINGTON, Mar. 26.—To ask for advice regarding the administration policy toward soldier composition and related subjects, President Harding today called to Washington Charles G. Dawes, of Chicago, who served as brigadier general in France during the late war.

Mr. Dawes would not indicate the recommendations he took to the White House nor forecast what the President's action might be. He will remain here over Sunday and will go to dinner tomorrow with Col. F. W. Gaffrath, commander in Chief of the American Legion, at the White House. Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian and assistant secretary Roosevelt of the navy department, who has been active in the work of the Legion since its organization will also be at the dinner.

Mrs. Eugene Paul and little son left for Myrtle Creek this morning where they will spend several days visiting with relatives.

Wonderful Results At 70 From Internal Baths

Mrs. L. M. Wadlin, 2043 National Ave., San Diego, Cal., writes Tyrrell's Hygienic Institute of New York as follows:

"Within the last month have had wonderful results and all inflammation has nearly subsided. I could hardly expect a woman over 70 to receive benefit from a trouble of long standing as quickly as a younger person. Money could not buy my 'J. B. L. Cascade' if I could not get another. It is difficult to believe how many internal troubles internal bathing will relieve until you realize that physicians agree that 85 per cent of human ailments are caused by accumulated waste in the lower intestine. The 'J. B. L. Cascade,' the scientific method of internal bathing, removes, in a perfectly natural way, all poisonous waste, and has been so successful in promoting health that over half a million intelligent Americans are now using it regularly. It is the invention of Chas. A. Tyrrell, M. D., of New York, who for 25 years was a specialist on internal bathing, and it is now being shown and explained by Nathan Fullerton, at Recall Star, Parkers Bldg. They will give you on request a very interesting booklet on Internal Bathing by Dr. Tyrrell, 'Why Man of Today is Only 50 Per Cent Efficient.' Ask for it today and know more about yourself and your functions than you ever have before."

Farmers Adopt Strong Resolution

At the close of the meeting of the delegates from the various rural telephone companies Saturday afternoon, the farmers expressed complete satisfaction with the management and the service of the local exchange. A number of persons expressed themselves as being well pleased with the service that has been given and the management was praised for the efficiency with which the affairs of the company have been handled. It was made plain that the meeting was not a protest against the company in any way, but instead was a protest against the action of the public service commission of Oregon in granting an increased rate in the face of a decline in all other commodities and articles. The purpose of the meeting was expressed in the following resolution which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, that we delegates of the Douglas county rural telephone companies go on record as being opposed to the unreasonable and exorbitant raise in telephone rates and that we term the same 'legal robbery.' That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the president of the State Farm Bureau and request that copies be forwarded immediately to each County Farm Bureau president."

A vote of thanks was given the Douglas County Farm Bureau for arranging for the meeting.

Miss Maybelle Miller arrived here Saturday evening to spend spring vacation visiting with her father, Dr. K. L. Miller. Miss Miller is a sophomore at the University of Oregon and is active in student body affairs.

Ill With Pneumonia—

Miss Vera McClintock, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McClintock, has been ill the past few days with pneumonia, but at the present time is much improved. Dr. Stewart and Sether are in attendance.

New Train Dispatcher—

C. J. Beath and wife, of Portland, arrived in Roseburg Saturday and will make their home here. Mr. Beath is a train dispatcher and has been transferred from Portland to this city.

Still in Roseburg—

County School Supt. O. C. Brown and wife are not in Portland, as some people were led to believe by a recent personal notice which referred to another family of Browns. They are still at their office in Roseburg attending to school matters.

Wreck at West Fork—

An engine and caboose were badly smashed up Sunday when the two collided on the track near West Fork. The exact details are not known, but while switching the engine collided with the caboose, causing the latter to be badly damaged. The pilot of the engine was also smashed. The wreck was called to the scene of the accident and in a short time the track was cleared.

Student Visits School—

The chairman of the University Greater Oregon committee has announced his committees for the spring vacation period, who are to visit home town high schools in the interests of the university. Miss Alice Thurston of Roseburg was placed on this committee and will speak to the local high school students some time this week. Miss Thurston is a senior at the university, and is also well known here, and will no doubt accomplish a great deal in trying to put this over.
