JUDGE STEWART'S RESIGNATION

Those close in touch with the physical condition of County Judge Stewart were not surprised at the announcement yesterday of his resignation. For many months the judge's health has been so impaired that it has been impossible for him to give the time and attention to county affairs that he feels the position rightfully deserves, and with this idea in view, and upon the advice of his physician, he decided there was no other course for him to take but to tender his resignation and give way to some person able to give their undivided time and attention to the great volume of business to be handled by the county court during the coming road building season. Mr. Stewart has been a painstaking official ever since he took charge of the county's affairs, and it is with much reluctance that his large number of loyal friends and supporters gave way to his decision to retire from public life. It is to be regretted that his health would not permit him remaining at the head of the county court to carry out the work that has become familiar to him during his term, and in which he has a deep interest. He has always taken a broad view of all matters pertaining to the upbuilding of the county and never faltered or neglected to initiate and further any project that had for its purpose the building of a greater and more prosperous county. His resignation is to be regretted, but was forced upon him solely on account of ill health.

No doubt Governor O'Leary was mindful of the big issues to come before this county in the very near future in the way of road building and many other projects, when he chose as successor to Judge Stewart the former sheriff of this county, Geo. K. Quine, in whom he has explicit faith to carry out the big issues to be presented in a business-like way, and following out the letter and spirit of the successful career of Mr. Stewart.

Probably not in the history of this county will there be larger problems to deal with than during the administration of Mr. Quine. He takes hold of the office confronted with many big issues that have for their purpose the building of a greater and more prosperous Douglas county. It will require much thought and attention on the part of our new county judge to successfully carry out these projects, and in doing so, he must have the fullest co-operation and assistance of the taxpayers at large. With this support pledged, there is no reason to believe but that his administration will redound to the best interests of all concerned and the county's prosperity will continue to make substantial strides during the coming years.

THE LAST CALL

The last call is being made for a Strawberry Carnival for 1921. A meeting is to be held at the city hall this evening for the express purpose of eliciting the event for this year or severing all connections for the time being. From this big annual event, it is possible that there is any desire on the part of the business, professional or other men in the community to let this matter drop with a dead, sickening thud? It is to be hoped there is no such desire. If Roseburg fails to stage this annual event this year the skills are being prepared to slide the one big and best exhibition ever held in the city into oblivion forever. Put off celebrating the Douglas county strawberry for one single year and it will be a hard matter to reinstate the affair. Let's get together—and do it quickly—hit her up for a genuine old-time celebration, with all the trimmings, and put Roseburg on the map as never before. It can be done, and done well, if all enter into the cause with the proper spirit.

Some interested individual has furnished the News-Review with a long list of candidates for the political arena at the next regular election. Of course, the contributor did not desire that we publish the "rester," otherwise he would have given us his name and address. But the contributor, who writes from "somewhere in France," has a vivid impression that the county is depending solely on a small plot of terra firma "somewhere south of Roseburg" to furnish timber for all the political bids in the county and, be-

Graduate Of Bellevue Hospital
New York, Expresses Gratitude To Tanlac For Wonderful Results She Obtained.

One of the latest to add her name to the long list of Tanlac endorsees is Mrs. Lily A. Lorentzen, 855 Faxon Ave., San Francisco, who, before her marriage was a trained nurse, a graduate from Bellevue Hospital, New York. Mrs. Lorentzen has a host of friends and acquaintances and her statement, coming as it does from one who has had so much experience in relieving suffering will be read with wide interest.

"Twenty-six years ago," she said, "while on a visit to the country, I had a severe sun stroke and was down in bed for a year and eight months after that, and had to be fed artificially all that time. As a result my stomach was left all upset, my appetite was almost gone, and I was willing to 'throw up the sponge' and get on the band wagon, he suggests that some city that is not on the highway be 'fully and equally represented' in the transaction of the county's business. With this idea in view he has assembled a tentative ticket to go 'over the top,' and which would 'make life long friends' of enemies and endear the 'troubled party' to every voter in the county. His suggestion might be a good one, and judging from recent events he had the situation summed up before any other person had knowledge of the facts.

Some men are so constituted that they are kept too busy working over the wrongs of others to pay any attention to the rights of themselves.

Come out to the strawberry carnival meeting tonight and help put this annual event over.

Many a solemn-faced man gets the reputation for wisdom when he's only a chronic grouch.

It will soon be strawberry time in Douglas county. How about the big show?

County Judge Quine, if you please. Cut out that "George" stuff from now on.

The unexpected always happens when it is least expected.

CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY.

A birthday surprise party was held Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy G. Payne, on Hamilton street, in honor of their son, Herbert Payne. The former part of the evening was spent with games and music, after which time all enjoyed a very "stuck up" time participating in a fairy pull. The party of young people met at Mr. Engels' home on Winchester street and proceeded to the Payne home in a body. Herbert, being away from home at the time, was summoned by telephone and was very much surprised upon his arrival to find the jolly group awaiting him. Those present were the Misses Viola Grimm, Natalie and Leona Barker, Goldie Bruton, Juanita Crocker, Hazel Bruton, the Messrs. Marion and Daniel Mootter, Homer Kronke, Royd Bruton, Mrs. Pearl Foster, Mrs. J. W. Crocker, Mr. and Mrs. Percy G. Payne, Lewis and Thelma Payne, and the host, Herbert Payne.

FARM BUREAU NEWS
By H. E. Haslett.

The following news items received from the Central office of the American Farm Bureau Federation, should be of great interest to the farmers of Douglas county:

Fruit Marketing Committee Authorized.

Growers from all of the important fruit growing sections of the United States were represented at the National fruit marketing conference, called by the American Farm Bureau Federation in Chicago on April 25th. The convention passed resolutions, requesting the president of the Am-suffered with awful pains and cramps. At times I just cried out, I was in such misery, and I would blurt up so bad I could hardly stand it.

"I grew worse each year and finally was operated on. But I didn't improve, and I couldn't sleep well, as I was nervous and restless and worried all the time. My back ached awfully and I often broke down completely from weakness and would have to go to bed.

"That was my condition when I began taking Tanlac a few months ago, and it was one of the greatest joys of my life, as it restored my health perfectly. My appetite returned and the stomach trouble and nervousness left me and I felt splendid in every way.

"Then some time ago our house caught on fire and we were burned out, and the excitement of it all unnerved me and set me back. Knowing how well Tanlac helped me before, I started right back to taking it again and it wasn't long until I was feeling well and strong once more. I am in splendid health again and just can't tell how grateful I feel to Tanlac for all the good it has done me."

American Farm Bureau Federation to appoint a committee of twenty-one to study the problems affecting the fruit industry and to work out a plan whereby fruit producers may establish and conduct a co-operative fruit marketing organization on the most favorable method or plan; urging the states to adopt uniform laws in trading rules; asking the American Farm Bureau Federation to create a fruit department under the direction of a fruit specialist; recommending to congress such tariff duties as will enable American fruit to compete fairly with foreign offerings; and advising all co-operative associations to await the report of the Committee of Twenty-one before signing any long term contracts with so-called marketing organizations.

Farmers Oppose Profits Tax Repeal.

Farmers are strongly opposed to a repeal of the Excess Profits Tax, H. C. McKenkie, taxation specialist for the American Farm Bureau Federation says, and outlines the farmers' viewpoint as follows:

"It must be borne in mind that corporations are taxed under a different schedule than individuals; the corporations pay a normal tax of 16 percent on net income in excess of certain credits and the excess profits tax.

"Under the excess profits tax, the corporation has first an allowance of $3,000 and 8 percent on the invested capital (Sec. 312) then the rate is 20 percent up to 20 percent of the invested capital, and 40 percent on the net income above that figure.

"The excess profits tax produced during the last fiscal year $1,750,000—by far the largest single item. Owing to the unfavorable business outlook it is estimated that it will produce this year $200,000,000 of the revenue.

"If the excess profits tax should be repealed, it would allow corporations making very large earnings running up to 200 percent and over, to escape by paying only the normal tax, an entirely inadequate share of the tax burden. This is one of the very strongest arguments against its repeal.

"It has been urged that corporations are owned by individuals who pay surtaxes. The answer is that corporations are artificial persons created by the state, and received many privileges and advantages not enjoyed by the individual; that in return, the state is justified in taxing them; that in case of the railroad the government has said that they shall not take from the public more than 6 percent of their invested capital; that if the railroad can get along with 6 percent the other corporations are seriously hurt by the present excess profits tax; furthermore, the government would be justified in so adjusting this tax as to prohibit corporations profiteering at the expense of the public, and this could be done.

"As between a flat tax and a progressive tax, the progressive tax is to be preferred because with a flat tax, all they get above the tax, they keep, while with the progressive tax the farmer the net earnings, then the larger the tax. From the fact that individuals with very large incomes are putting their money into tax free securities of low earning power, rather than of low earning power, rather than into corporations paying the excess profits tax and then they themselves paying a surtax, automatically the stocks of corporations with large earning power will fall into the hands of a large number of persons with moderate incomes, which is just where it will do the most good. While this may not have been one of the controlling reasons for establishing this tax, it is a first class reason for retaining it.

"Another of the collateral effects of the excess profits tax is that in a measure it tends toward equalizing the net returns as between the corporations differing in natural advantages, as to raw material, fuel, etc. For example, during the war the government commandeered all the products of the wool chemical factories in the United States, and fixed the price on the product the same for all factories, regardless of cost of production. This allowed the larger factories and those most advantageously situated to make the most money, but along came the War Profits and Excess Profits tax, and those with large profits have to surrender a goodly portion to the government. Thus things are, to a certain extent, evened up. Today these factories all sell on the open market at practically the same price and the excess profits tax will help equalize things.

"The repeal of this tax would involve finding some other source from which an equal amount of revenue can be derived. All the remedies proposed are worse than the disease. An analysis of all the substitutes shows invariably the effort to free incomes of a large part of the burden they are now carrying and to substitute consumption taxes, which would be paid largely out of the living wage, and which would then fall on the man least able to pay, and in many cases in inverse proportion to a man's ability, because the larger a man's family the more his demand for goods.

"I can conceive of nothing more short sighted or ill advised, from the standpoint of business and capital, than to repeal the excess profits tax, and to attempt to relieve the corporation and shoulder the burden of it on to the common people through a consumption tax."

Wool Pooling Plans Progress.

C. J. Fawcett, of the wool marketing department, represented the American Farm Bureau Federation at the Utah Wool Growers' meeting in Salt Lake City last week. He reports that the completion of plans for the formation of a pool in that state will take care of the wool in the southern Idaho and Nevada areas, and represents the latest advance in the plan for a nation wide pool.

The wool marketing department is now working on pooling plans in Kansas, Texas, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, New York, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, the Dakota's and California. In most of these states definite plans for the pooling of the 1921 clip have been developed. The state pools will probably be sold through a national sales agency, thus state pools.

avoiding all competition between buyers on farmer's behalf.

The transportation department has completed work on the brief in the Omaha Switching case. This case involves for Omaha alone a sum of $130,000 annually and it extended to other markets would total a huge saving to shippers of livestock.

Some time ago the carriers in Iowa attempted to raise the minimum weight on hogs from 16,000 to 17,000 in single decked cars. The American Farm Bureau Federation joined in the protest and took part in the hearing held in January. The decision of the Iowa commission has just been received. The 16,000 minimum is continued.

Bureau Meeting in Washington.

The conduct of the Washington office of the American Farm Bureau Federation and legislative projects which should have the support of organized agriculture constitute the chief business to be considered by the executive committee at its meeting in Washington, D. C., beginning on April 11. The state Farm Bureau representatives to the meeting. A score of them have already indicated that they will be represented by leaders authorized to aid in the formulation of legislative policies which may properly receive the endorsement and backing of the Farm Bureau movement.

MR. HOMESEEEKER

Yes, you are in the midst of the most equable climate on the Pacific Coast, California not excepted. Never cold or extremely hot, the least wind velocity on the coast. "You observe few windmills." "Not counting real estate men." No flies or mosquitoes, very few fleas. No poisonous insects. No malaria or native sickness. Water 100 per cent pure. The beautiful Umpqua river cuts through the Coast range in a northwesterly direction, welcoming an uninterrupted passage of the 65 per cent degree temperature trade winds, that prevail from May to Oct. We have a 40x40 mile climate all our own, walled in on either side by magnificent mountain ranges. Cyclones or violent winds are impossible, fruit and berries second to none on the coast, not mentioning broccoli, the mortgage lifting winter cauliflower, and scores of other valuable assets in profusion.

Speaking of sleep. When the ocean breezes cease in the evening a cool, balmy current settles down from virgin forest and snowy peaks that waits one into the realm of beautiful, peaceful slumberland from which there is no wakening until the trill of the myriad bird life gives you a placid awakening, the advent of another precious Umpqua day.

The writer for 35 years was a scenic photographer, has traveled and retraveled the entire coast from Alaska to Old Mexico, has scaled every mountain peak of prominence. Can tell you the climatic conditions and resources of each community in this territory of a thousand miles deep. Information free. Come and look over my pictures.

We have a new law controlling real estate brokers that is timely. Real estate brokers must procure a license. To do this they are required to give a bond to cover any and all sales. Should they misrepresent land or values, you can recover your payments and damages as they may appear. The prosecuting attorney prosecutes your case. The dealer also is required to get ten freeholders to sign his application vouching for his integrity, character, etc. "Be not afraid."
