Alicia Hammersly A Woman Who Wouldn't Remarry

By Edith McGillicuddy Gibson
The Road Editor

Alicia Breaks a Convention.

All my old friends were at the club and it seemed like getting back into the life I lived before my marriage to be with them. Before I thought I was dancing with Larry and it was only when we had made one turn and I had looked into the disapproving eyes of one of mother's very conventional friends that I remembered.

"Take me home, Larry. Take me home," I urged quickly.

"Why, what is the matter? Are you ill?"

"No, but I forgot. I forgot, Larry. Do you think I am a very wicked woman to have forgotten for a moment, here among my girlhood friends, the long years that lie between my girlhood and my widowhood. Have I no heart?"

It is because you have a heart, because you are so human, Alicia, that you forget for a moment. Stop and think, Alicia. Humanity must forget—otherwise this world would become a madhouse.

"Perhaps, but I must go home, Larry. I am remembering now, and when I remember I can not dance. I can not even see other dances."

Without further comment, Larry took me out on the porch and left me in the moonlight while he went to see Bart about the car.

In a few minutes he was back, saying, "It is all right. I will take you home and bring the car back for Bart and Bart."

"You are understanding, aren't you?" I knew instinctively that Larry was sure that I did not want any one about, that the only thing that could comfort me in my present mood was my baby. So he was making a perfectly valid excuse for leaving me.

We rode through the rose-scented night in silence. As always, Nature had a power to calm me possessed by nothing else.

Larry, who had learned the eloquence of silence, helped me out of the car. Then he left me at the door with only a murmured, "Good night."

I found the nurse giving little Hal his milk and, taking him in my arms, I held his adorable sleepy little self against my breast. After a little while I put him gently in his bed.

Going to my room and undressing, I slipped a kimono over my nightdress. Then to get my mind off my problems, I took up the manuscript of my new story, correcting and revising so that it would be ready for Larry to copy in the morning. I finished my work and sat idly dreaming in my bed. In a few moments I was fast asleep.

I awakened next morning, refreshed, and devoured my strawberries, toast and drank my coffee with great enjoyment.

Once more I went over the story cursorily and knowing that Larry could copy it, I turned my attention to writing a letter to Roland Early.

I had never thought of the editor impersonally as simply Roland Early. Notwithstanding his opinion about his age, he seemed to me a young man; that is a man not older than thirty-five. Of course I knew that he could not be a mere youth and hold the responsible position that was his.

My letter read:

"Dear Mr. Early: Since my recovery I have read your more than generous notes to my sister, and your kind interest has encouraged me to write another story which I am sending you under separate cover today."

"I am so glad you think I can write for I am sure you do or you would not have published my first story. I know I have much to learn and if it is not too great a burden to impose upon you, I would appreciate your personal criticism."

"I have in mind now, a story of novel length. Would you advise me to keep to the short story for a while before attempting a novel?"

"I cannot express to you the encouragement that your letters to my sister have given me. I am very anxious to take up writing as a profession. In fact, at this time it almost seems that I must write to get my mind off my personal affairs."

"In explanation may I say that the illness from which I am recovering was caused by the sudden death of my husband and the somewhat premature birth of my child."

"I want to write, dear Mr. Editor, first because I think I can, and secondly, because I want to earn a living for myself and my baby. If I am successful, I shall be always grateful to you since your praise of my work has given me the touch of confidence which I lacked."

"I shall be only too happy to meet you when I go to New York which I think will be in the near future."

"Sincerely yours,
"ALICIA HAMMERSLY."

Melrose May Have Electric Line

A special meeting of the people of the Melrose vicinity has been called for Tuesday night for the purpose of considering the construction of a power line from Edenbower to Melrose to furnish power and light for the farms of that community. It is necessary for the residents to build the line and power will be furnished by the Douglas County Light & Water company. The distance of construction is between three and four miles and the cost will run up to several hundred dollars. Lights are badly needed in that community, especially for the garage hall, which at the present time is lighted by a small farm gas plant which does not furnish sufficient light for the large attractive building. A number of subscribers will also doubtless be obtained.

FILLING STATION GOSSIP.

Lew McCall says that motorists who come through Columbus en route for Kansas City have about the following conversation when they stop at the filling station there: If it's a Cadillac, the driver says: "How far is it to Kansas City?" "One hundred and twenty miles," is the reply. "Gimme twenty gallons of gas and a gallon of oil," says the driver. Then comes a Buick and the chauffeur says: "How far is it to Kansas City?" "One hundred and forty miles." "Gimme ten gallons of gas and a half gallon of oil," and he drives on. Along comes a filver and the driver uncamps himself, gets out and stretches and asks: "How far is it to Kansas City?" "Oh, about 140 miles." "Is that all?" Gimme two quarts of water and a bottle of '3 in 1,' and hold this son-of-a-gun until I get in."—Columbus Advocate.

Hildeburn Family Enroute to Denver

The News-Review today received a letter from J. S. Hildeburn and family, local residents who are making an auto tour of the eastern and southern states. The letter was written at San Diego and the party was enroute to Denver, Colo. In speaking of the auto camp grounds at Willows, Cal., Mr. Hildeburn says: "The camp grounds consist of five acres with two rows of shade trees planted on it. Between the trees little houses have been built in which are electric lights, gas stoves and water. In the center of the grounds they have a beautiful building costing about $5,000 with shower baths, reading rooms and all the conveniences of a modern hotel, and everything is free. We are having the time of our life; have had no trouble so far except running a 10 penny nail into one of our tires. Our camp outfit beats anything we have seen and we are just as comfortable as can be."
