

MONUMENT TO THE HEROIC DEAD

Beautiful Arlington amphitheater was used for the first time since its dedication, in Washington's 1920 Memorial Day. General John J. Pershing is shown making the principal address to an audience which overflowed the uncovered bowl. Veterans of the Civil war were given prominent places among the listeners.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN AND OTHERS

BY MRS. ELLSBURY.
Daily Column of Questions and Answers Conducted by a Woman Who Knows. Address your letters to Mrs. Ellsbury, Roseburg News-Review.

Mrs. Ellsbury: Will you publish a recipe for a soufflé. Thanking you in advance.
—KATH, Roseburg.

One cup sour cream, four eggs, sugar, one cup raisins, chopped nuts, and one-half teaspoonfuls of four tablespoons powdered sugar. Beat the yolks of the eggs, add sugar, raisins, cream, cloves, and a double boiler until creamy. Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff and place in a separate bowl. Add slowly the powdered sugar. Cover top of pie with this meringue. Bake in oven until the meringue is lightly browned. Serve hot or cold.

Mrs. Ellsbury: I am a girl 19 years old. I met a young man recently who is better than any other. We were several times at parties and he has never asked to call on me. I am sure he is a good man. How can I get him to call on me?
—J. H.

You may not be able to win him. There is nothing for you to do but be friendly and agreeable. Chance throws you together. Any man should come from him. If you were to make any obvious effort to get his attention you might do your purpose. You should try to let yourself become too much interested in a man who has shown interest for you. Be ready to let this young man's friendship if it is, but in the meantime take advantage of every opportunity to make other friends. Then you will not be so disappointed if you find that this one does not care for you.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: What are the seven wonders of the world?
—T. B.

The seven wonders of the ancient world were: (1) Pyramids of Egypt; (2) Hanging gardens of Babylon; (3) Statue of Jupiter on the Capitoline hill at Rome; (4) Temple of Diana at Ephesus; (5) Pharos, or Watch Tower, at Alexandria, Egypt; (6) Colossus of Rhodes, a statue 105 feet high, overthrown by an earthquake 224 B. C.; (7) Mausoleum at Halicarnassus, a Grecian-Persian city in Asia Minor.

The seven wonders of the middle ages: (1) Colossus of Rome; (2) Catacombs of Alexandria; (3) Great wall of China; (4) Stonehenge; (5) Leaning tower of Pisa; (6) Porcelain tower of Nanking; (7) Mosque of St. Sophia in Constantinople.

SATISFIED WITH THE TEST

After Somewhat Belated Proof of the Purity of the Liquor, Brothers Slept in Peace.

"Testing" corn liquor is one of the most frequent preliminaries to conviviality these days. It is rumored, alleged, indicated and otherwise noised abroad. Lightning that burns with a white flame is supposed to be dangerous, to contain wood alcohol, and to otherwise be undesirable; shine that burns blue is supposed to be the honest effort of a master-maker of spirits. Sometimes, however, zeal for drink overcomes caution, even of this uncertain sort, with the result that the following occurred a few nights ago.

Two young brothers in mild iniquity secured themselves a pint. They, being fairly law-abiding in other respects, went to their room to drink it. They drank it, at least, most of it, and became somewhat affected by its presence with them. They undressed, turned out the light and retired. After about 20 minutes, one aroused himself and called to the other.

"Say, wake up, we didn't test that liquor!"

"Well, must do it," was the drowsy reply, "won't do drink it 'thout testin' it."

They arose, turned on the light, found the drop or two of liquor left in the flask, poured it on a hand-mirror, touched a match to it with due solemnity and care, saw the blue flame and returned to their beds absolutely satisfied.—Atlanta Constitution.

HE GOT THE "BUG LETTER"

Discovery That Made the Victim Madder Than Before He Sent in Original "Kick."

There is probably no easier way to get a laugh out of an average American audience than to mention an Englishman's sense of humor, and to read what an American may have to say about the British humor may be exasperating to an Englishman, but the reverse is not always true. An Englishman, J. C. Squire, for instance, may write about American jokes and not be the least bit irritated. In his "Life and Letters" Mr. Squire's chapter, "Goats and Humour," contains several fine American jokes, and among them is one that concerns a traveler on a sleeping car who had written a complaint to headquarters about the presence of vermin in his berth.

"He received back from the administrative head a letter of immense effusiveness. Never before had such a complaint been lodged against this scrupulously careful line, and the management would have suffered any loss rather than cause annoyance to so distinguished a citizen as, etc., etc. He was very delighted with this subject apology. But as he was throwing away the envelope there fell out a slip of paper which had, apparently, been inclosed by mistake. On it was a memorandum: 'Send this guy the bug letter.'"

Relic of Glacial Age.

Devil's Pulpit, located about two miles east of Batavia, N. Y., is a relic of the glacial age. It is a huge mass of rock shaped like an hour glass, and is one of the most peculiar and striking natural formations in the whole state. The base is fully 30 feet across. It slopes upward to a narrow rock, corresponding to the neck through which the sands of an hour glass sift, and then broadens out to form what looks like the upper chamber of the glass. It is composed of limestone and stands 20 feet in height. The nearest bedrock like it is five miles away to the north, and geologists believe this means that the rock was torn loose from its original mother vein and dragged those five miles by the big glacier that swept down from the polar regions ages ago. Natural erosion did the carving that gives it the hour-glass contour.

New Timekeeper Clock.

Boiling eggs, developing photographs, or any other operation that requires short but accurate account of time, may be allowed to proceed without attention through the use of a novel clock, described in Popular Mechanics. The four-inch dial is at the top, and in the lower part of the case is a vertical scale, reading up to 60 minutes in one-minute divisions, and carrying a small slide that is set by hand. At the end of the period set, a four-inch gong on the back rings until it is shut off. Though a valuable addition to the home kitchen, the new time-keeping clock is intended especially as a labor-saving accessory for hotel and restaurant kitchens, photo galleries, laboratories and other places where the measurement of minutes is needed.

Snapping Movie Picture.

Usually 150,000 to 200,000 feet are run through the cameras to get a six-reel, or 6,000-foot motion picture. The director stations three, four or five cameras to take the same scene. He has one camera close beside the struggling villain and hero, another grinding from an elevation, still another at this angle, one more at that angle. When all of these negatives are developed, parts of each enter into the composition of the completed reel.

Impossible.

"These short skirts—"
"Yes!"
"I should think a girl's ankles would get cold."
"How can her ankles get cold when she has a fur neckpiece?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.
