A Telegram From Home.

I found the apartment ideally suited to my wants. It included a somewhat isolated suite of rooms and bath that would do for little Hal and his nurse. There was a darling little library and sun room to be used as living and dining rooms for myself. A bedroom, fair-sized as rooms go in cities, and dressing room and kitchen with maid's room and bath, attached completed the apartment.

"I am afraid it will cost more than I possibly can pay."

"Well, all we can do is to find out," said the judge comfortably. Stepping to the room phone, Judge Turner called up the office and asked that the man in charge come us to see.

He came, all deference which became positive servility as he evidently recognized Judge Turner from newspaper pictures he had seen.

Before the judge could introduce me or say anything whatever, he called Judge Turner by name and turning to me said: "I hope you like the apartment, Mrs. Turner."

I felt myself blushing, but the judge quickly fixed matters. "Mrs. Hammersly is an old friend of mine who has just moved to this city. She wishes an apartment near the park, for she has a young baby. A friend of mine, Mr. Gates had told me about this apartment, which I believe he recently vacated and so I offered to bring her here."

"I hope you are pleased with it, Mrs. Hammersly," said the man. "Yes I am very much pleased with it, but I am afraid that it is more expensive than I can afford."

"It is one hundred and twenty-five dollars a month."

I made some mental computations. I had wanted to get an apartment for about a hundred dollars, but I thought that proximity to the park and its fine arrangement for my needs, might make it worth my while to economize on something else, if necessary.

"Someone has said," I remarked to the judge, "that one may pay a fourth of his income in rent and still be economical. Do you think that is true?"

"Not always," he answered. "These calculations must always be adjusted to the different circumstances of those who are doing the calculating."

"Well," I confided, "one hundred and twenty-five dollars a month is just about a fourth of my income."

Without more ado, I turned to the man and said, "I will take it."

"Make out the lease and Mrs. Hammersly will call for it in the morning, or better still, send it to her hotel. I took out my check book."

"Never mind writing a check until you get your lease. I think my name will be sufficient guarantee of Mrs. Hammersly's good faith in this matter."

"Quite satisfactory," said the man and for a moment I wondered if I saw a little smirk on his face as he did so or was it my foolish imagination.

Once more I went over the apartment, this time looking at it in terms of proprietorship.

"Without thinking, I said "I will put Hal's little bed here, for you see that right through the doorway, Hannah will sleep and she can see him without even turning her head. These windows will bring in the morning sun. Oh, it will be perfectly splendid, particularly as this door opens into my own room." All through my rhapsodies, that blessed man acquiesced in my enthusiasm.

Over and over I told him where I was going to put each piece of furniture. Over and over I consulted with him about the proper draperies for the windows and over and over I told him how happy I was going to be.

"Why," I said, "working here will be just play." And then I could feel my face fall into lines of surprise and consternation. "Why," I reiterated, "do you know we haven't worked at all and I have no more material for the story that I am to write about you than I did when I started."

"I am afraid, my dear, we are holding out on you. Never mind. I am going to send you up a lot of printed matter. Some of my admiring relatives have kept scrapbooks galore about me, which they have presented to me from time to time."

"I wish I could stay here this very night," I said irreverently. "How long do you think it will take to get my household goods here?"

"Long enough, my dear lady, for your enthusiasm to evaporate, perhaps."

"Why do you say that?"

"Because you are a very restless little person if you will allow me to say so. In one mood you simply detest the thing that you love in another."

I looked at the judge in surprise, for although I had never acknowledged it to myself, I knew this to be true.

"You need the leavening power of a great love to settle you, Mrs. Hammersly."

"Do you think I have not had it, Judge Turner?"

In answer he said irreverently: "Let me take you back to the hotel. Looking at my watch, I found that it was half past five. I had never known hours to pass so quickly."

"Why didn't you tell me that it was so late?" I said. "I am sure that I have kept you from something important."

"I have nothing more important on my hands than your happiness. But the shadows are falling and I really have a dinner engagement."

As we went out and closed the door, something seemed to tighten about my heart as though that door had closed all the joy of the afternoon within. When I went to the desk for my key the clerk handed me a telegram.

Hastily I tore it open and read: "Come home! Little Hal has been kidnapped. Think we are on track of kidnapers."

BAND CONCERT JUNE 16.

The Douglas county concert band will give a concert at the armory, Thursday, June 16, at 8 o'clock p. m. Fine singing and vaudeville will be included in the program. Admission 25 cents. This will be a good chance for everyone to support the band. Tickets on sale at Hamilton Drug Co., Rexall Drug Co., and Red Cross Pharmacy.

Distillate Is Ag in On Hand

"Engine Distillate for use in tractors, motor boats and other similar internal combustion engines, has been placed on the market again," announces B. L. Hyland, special agent of the Standard Oil company, at this point. A large stock is being carried to care for internal combustion engines which are equipped to use this product. In the past, engine distillate has proven quite satisfactory for special types of engines, and its appearance again on the market will mean a considerable saving for tractor operators and owners of engines which can be adapted to this fuel.

DILLARD ITEMS.

A parcel shower was given Wednesday, June 8th, at 4 o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Delos Coon, of Dillard, in honor of Miss Vivian Buell, who is soon to be a bride.

Miss Buell was met at the gate by Mrs. Coon, who ushered her into a room filled with ladies, which was quite a surprise, as she had previously been invited down to dinner. She was then invited to sit on the Navajo and open the tiny parcels which amid peals of laughter were showered on her head as she entered the door. She was then taken to a small room and dressed in her bridal robes for the procession which led down the hall to "Here Comes the Bride." The bride remained standing on the porch while the guests went on to the lawn, where the bridal bouquet was caught by Minnie Smith. They were then ushered to the wedding table where covers were laid for twenty, and their places ascertained by tiny place cards with pictures of each guest. A very unique feature of the occasion was the centerpiece, which consisted of a large kewpie entwined with pink ribbon and a beautiful bunch of sweet peas. The bride-to-be received many beautiful as well as useful articles. The wedding cake was cut by the bride, and ice cream and cake were served by the hostess and Mesdames Walker and Miller, after which pictures were taken of the bride and the invited guests.

Those present were: Miss Eva Rice, Mrs. Harry Davis, Miss Elvira Lewis, Mrs. Lou Walker, Misses Gladys and Lucile Hubbard, Miss Ruth Miller, Mrs. Loren Miller, Mrs. Otto Parker, Misses Myrtle and Clara Herscher, Miss Vivian Buell.

Miss Vera Campbell, Miss Esther Moyer, Mrs. Sisco and Ray Laurance, Miss Minnie Smith, Miss Roster, Miss Alta Wright, and the hostess, Mrs. D. Coon. The guests all wished Miss Buell all kinds of future happiness. X. Y. Z.
