

ADVICE TO LOVELORN AND OTHERS

BY MRS. ELLISBURY

Daily Column of Questions and Answers Conducted by a Woman Who Knows. Address your Letters to Mrs. Ellisbury Care Roseburg News-Review.

Dear Mrs. Ellisbury: My brother is a girl whom I do not like. She is vulgar and too fast, but she is like her. Could you give me a way to make him stop going with her? WORRIED SISTER.

Never try to make him stop going with her. You would only invite him to like her more. Invite him to go out with you and that your brother will be present. Show him that you are a young lady. A short of being a good idea also is to let the girl find out what you think of her. Show him that you are not a part of her real self. Perhaps he knows her brother is trying to help her to become a better person. If this is the case make a good friend of her and help her to be worth while.

Dear Mrs. Ellisbury: Did President Wilson win a Nobel prize, and what was it? H. S. STUDENT, Roseburg.

A. The Nobel peace prize for 1920 was awarded to President Woodrow Wilson. He is the third American to receive this award, the two others being Theodore Roosevelt in 1906 and Elihu Root in 1912. The peace prize is awarded by a committee of five persons elected by the Stockholm, and like the others, usually amounts to about $40,000. According to the terms of the Nobel will the award must always be made in kronen, each prize being a little less than 150,000 kronen.

Alicia Hammerly A Woman Who Wouldn't Remarry

By Idah McGhee Gibson

The Novel Writer

Alicia's Baby

As I stepped from the train I saw—on the platform before me, laughing and cooing in Hannah's arms—my boy!

Everything grew black before me. I pitched forward from the car steps and would have fallen outright if Larry Wheaton had not caught me in his arms. It was the shock of the unexpected, the relief from a burden, that had been weighing me down.

I did not wholly lose consciousness, however, for I heard Bart's voice mumbling in my ears: "Buck up, buck up, Al. It's all right. It was just a teapot in a teapot. It was mighty rough on you, but I hope it will do Mistress Bab a little good. She isn't so cock-sure of herself this morning as she has been."

I had not waited for Bart to finish his monologue, but had rushed to Hannah and got my baby in my arms. Larry—sympathetic, devoted Larry—was close beside me.

It was not until we were all in the motor that I began to question. I had not even introduced Alice Gordon, but dear old Dad had taken her in charge and when I looked around somewhat bewildered I saw him nutting her into a taxi.

"Was it a joke?" I asked tremulously. "Surely no one could be so—so thoughtless—as to play such a joke on me."

"Yes, it was a joke," growled Bart, "but an unintentional one on the part of Hannah and Bab, who played it to the limit on themselves."

"Oh, Mrs. Hammerly, I am afraid you never will forgive me, but I did not mean to make any trouble. Surely I didn't mean to do it. You know me well enough for that, don't you? But when I saw little Hal out on the pavement and a lot of dirty vagabonds around his carriage, offering him all-day suckers and other bits of poisonous candy, I just could not stand it, and picked him up and carried him away."

"Oh, you know you were a bit angry at Bab, Hannah," said Bart.

"But I don't understand," I interrupted.

"I'll tell it to you, Al," said Larry. "Hannah wanted to visit her sister-in-law and she decided that it would be better to take the baby with her than to leave him at home, as you were not here. Bab insisted that the idea was preposterous; that she was competent to take care of one baby for one day. Hannah declared that she would not go without the baby and Bab insisted she should leave little Hal with her. In the midst of the discussion, a telegram came to Hannah saying that her sister-in-law wanted her at once, and so she had to go. During the afternoon she came back into town to do some errands for her sister-in-law. In the meantime, Bab had taken the baby out for an airing and thoughtlessly pushed him into a crowded street. As she was passing one of the stores, she saw Duane just inside the door and leaving the baby on the sidewalk, as she thought it would take but a second and he would not be out of her sight, she rushed in to tell Duane she was there and he must come and walk with her.

"At this inopportune moment, Hannah happened along and, noticing a crowd of youngsters who had surrounded Hal's carriage, she snatched her darling and rushed away."

"Of course when Bab came out there were ructions. The excited children could only say that a woman had snatched the baby away from them and run away as fast as she could."

"You imagine, Al, that Bab was like a wild woman. Beside her knowledge that she had been to blame for the baby's disappearance, was the fact that she had told Hannah that it wasn't the right thing to take a baby to a house where a woman was ill and she had also given Hannah to understand that taking care of a baby was not such a whole of a job as Hannah made it. What could she say now in excuse for herself? Duane says that he could do nothing with her and before she would settle down at all she had rushed to the telegraph office and wired you, signing her father's name. She also wired Bart. 'Come home quickly; Hal has been kidnapped.' You know how much I care for the little duffer, so of course I insisted upon coming with Bart."

"We tried to get you by wire, or rather Dad did," said Bart, "but somebody who signed himself T. J. Turner said that you had already left and that he would try and catch you on the road."

"I didn't get any wire," I said "and oh, how wonderful it would have been if I had!"

"We'll look into that, for I am sure T. J. Turner wired," Bart answered.

"Yes, I know he did. He would not let me suffer a moment longer than necessary."

"Is it someone in the office?" asked Larry suddenly.

"No, it is Judge Turner, Larry, a prominent man whose life story I am going to write for my first article."

"You don't mean that it is Judge Thomas Jefferson Turner? Why, they say that he is slated for the supreme bench. What is that magazine editor thinking of when he sends a girl like you to interview such a man and write his history?"

I did not answer. Neither Judge Turner nor anyone else seemed of any moment to me. I had my baby in my arms and I was never going away from him again.

Poor Hannah had not spoken since she made that one dramatic plea for herself. All through Larry's recital she had sat facing me with her hands clasped convulsively, never daring to raise her head. I knew that what she had done had come from her love for the child, but I knew also that there was a little malice in the thought that she was going to give Bab a bad quarter of an hour when she took Hal and made away with him.

She must have known what was passing in my mind, for she said: "Oh, Mrs. Hammerly, you know that I did not mean to be wrong; that no one could love the baby or you more than I. Aren't you going to forgive me?"

For answer I placed little Hal in her arms.

"There's a Reason"

THE first thing you want in foods—and the all important thing is purity. Cost—taste—everything else is of minor consideration.

Foods should be nourishing. That's what they are for—to build up strong, sturdy bodies.

Calumet Baking Powder is pure in the can. It is made in the largest, cleanest, most modern Baking Powder Factories on earth—only of such ingredients as have been officially endorsed by United States Food Authorities.

KEEP your baking costs down

HERE'S THE BEST WAY TO USE CALUMET BAKING POWDER

BEST BY TEST

It's pure in the baking. Calumet never fails to produce the sweetest and most palatable of nourishing foods.

It has more than the ordinary leavening strength. You use less of it. That's one reason it is the most economical of all leaveners.

Another reason is—it is sold at a moderate price—you save when you buy it.

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 oz. Some baking powders come in 12 oz. cans instead of 16 oz. cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it.

Calumet Waffle Recipe

2 1/4 cups sifted pastry flour, 3 level teaspoons Calumet Baking Powder, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 1/2 cups milk, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 2 eggs beaten separately. Then mix in the regular way.

Syrup of Prunes

To Go On Market

Oregon Syrup of Prunes, which is now being perfected in Portland, will be placed on the market July 1, according to Attorney Elbert Hermann, attorney and secretary of the company which is sponsoring the business. Mr. Hermann is in Roseburg attending to business matters and expects to return to Portland in a short time. Syrup of Prunes is a tonic laxative, which is said to be much better as a medicine than Syrup of Figs. It has been improved to the highest point and the company is now making up thousands of bottles under a special label to place on the market. A huge display will be made at Owl Drug store in Portland, on July 1, it is stated and a big advertising campaign will then be put on throughout the country.
