Swimming Suits

At the beaches everywhere—this season—from Waikiki to Narragansett, there's greater fun than ever in swimming! Why? Because the logical bathing suit—the Jantzen—has taken its place of leadership in water sports. It fits comfortably, naturally—never binds—never sags—holds its shape after years of service.

Good shops in your city are showing new models in fashions for men, women and children. See them.

A Woman Who Wouldn't Remarry

Larry's Farewell.

When Larry said that he had taken me out to the end of the piazza to kiss me goodbye I suddenly realized that I wanted him to kiss me and yet I wasn't in the slightest degree in love with him. I knew that I would be bored to death with him as a husband and that he would want to brain me before he had lived with me six months—and yet I am sure that I answered the thrill of Larry's lips.

There are a great many fallacies in this world that are long dying and one of them is that no good woman ever is kissed or ever wants to be kissed except by the man who is, or is to become her husband.

I think that is a man-made idea which has been handed down through the ages because men have wanted women to come to them with virginal lips while they arrogate to themselves the privilege of kissing when and where they choose. I am sure that Larry's kiss was as sweet to me as mine was to him and I felt that I had wronged no one, not even myself, by accepting it. For he was honest and straight and loving and he gave me not one whit less of regard or respect because of it than had been mine before. I was still to him a "real woman" and he knew a real woman was a very human thing before he kissed me.

The next morning after the boys had gone back to college, I received a long telegram from Mr. Early, full of sympathy and proffers of help. He had evidently not yet heard that I had arrived home to find my baby safe and well. I answered it immediately. Also there was a wire from Judge Turner saying that he had tried to get me on the train, but evidently, through the stupidity of the conductor, I was not to be found, as the wire was returned to him.

Miss Belcher wired congratulations upon the outcome of my visit and informed me that Mr. Early was returning soon and that his wife had gone to a sanatorium with a complete nervous breakdown, the doctors saying that it would probably take her a year at least to recover. The telegram ended with the words: "Poor man, I am so sure that even you will feel that he does not deserve this."

"What does she mean by that?" I asked of Alice, to whom I showed the telegram.

"I cannot understand," she answered, "unless you have said, or given her to understand, that you did not think he was a martyr to his marriage vows."

"I guess I did. Did you ever know Mrs. Early, Alice?"

"Yes, I know her very well. She
