Ring Battles of Jack Dempsey and Carpentier

During the journey across the continent, Dempsey was establishing a record which would have made the name "One Round" Dempsey not inappropriate. The record book recites with monotonous regularity his list of knockouts: Homer Smith 1 round, Jim Flynn 1 round, Bill Brennan 6 rounds, Bull Sadie 1 round, Tom Riley 1 round, Dan Ketcher 2 rounds, Arthur Pelkey 1 round, Kid McCarthy 1 round, Bob Devere 1 round, Porky Flynn 1 round, Fred Fulton 1 round, Jack Moran 1 round, Carl Morris 1 round, with others of more or less note meeting the same fate.

It was in mid-summer, 1918, that Fred Fulton, the Minnesota plasterer, six feet, four and a half inches in height and weighing 220 pounds, was selected to stop this sensational drive of Dempsey. The bout was held in the open in Jersey City July 27, 1918, and proved to be one of the shortest bouts on record, Dempsey winning in 27 seconds.

Fulton, who is still fighting, is one of the most curious of American boxers. Possessed of a frame that should make him a champion, he never has been able to emerge from the second-rate ranks. On this day he appeared nervous as Dempsey glowered at him from the other side of the ring while seconds laced up his gloves.

At the gong, Dempsey tore at him with the fury of a tiger, easily getting inside Fulton's guard, despite the long reach that should have protected the Minnesotan. Dempsey rained rights and lefts to Fulton's jaw. Fulton went down under the furious pelting and stayed down.

The Minnesotan tried in various ways to explain his poor showing after the bout, but to the spectators the fiasco only gave one more indication that Dempsey was the proper challenger of Jess Willard for the heavyweight championship.

Georges Carpentier, fighting from the bantam weight ranks to meeting first-class middleweights, scored his first great sensation in 1912, when he won the European middleweight championship from Jim Sullivan, an Englishman, in two rounds.

The bout was fought at Monte Carlo. English sportsmen, confident that their man would easily defeat the Frenchman, journeyed by hundreds to that famous sporting resort to wager thousands of pounds on Sullivan.

Witnesses of the bout declare that Carpentier with his clever footwork and speed, was the winner from the time the first blow was struck. Feeling out his man in the first round, he started with the gong of the second to administer terrific punishment that the Englishman could not withstand and took the count. The result made Carpentier the most talked-of boxer in France.

In the same year, Carpentier scored 20-round victories over George Gunther and Willie Lewis, the American middleweight, and also knocked out Hubert Roc, a Frenchman.

The victory over Willie Lewis forcefully impressed the worth of the French boxer in the minds of ring experts both in Europe and America.

Lewis and his manager tell an interesting story in connection with the Lewis-Carpentier bout. They met Carpentier's manager, Desamps, early in the morning to arrange for the contest and in a few minutes all details except one comparatively minor point had been settled. They arranged with Desamps until 2 o'clock and then went out for lunch. Returning at 4, they found Desamps still gesticulating. Through an interpreter the argument was kept up until 2 o'clock the following morning, and then Lewis, with Desamps still talking, "gave up the ship." The incident is eloquent testimony of the careful manner in which Carpentier's interests have been cared for by his shrewd manager both inside and outside of the roped arena.

Championship Battles

Short Sketches of Fights for the Heavyweight Title.

Jack Dempsey played the accompaniment to Jess Willard's swan song on July 4, 1919, at Toledo, O. It was all over in the third round. Jess got $100,000 for the performance, many times the amount Caruso earns in a whole opera. Dempsey got $27, 000.

The champion fell down and got up so many times in the first round that the referee became dizzy from counting, and failed to hear the bell.

THIS WAS ON THE fifth liason between Willard and the floor.

The gong sounded feebly on the seventh count, but Referee Pecord continued shopping the air over Willard. When he had finished he informed Dempsey that there had been a knockout and the champion left the ring, only to have his manager come running after him with the information that there had been a mistake.

That first round was awful. But it prepared everybody for the worst and no one was surprised when Willard lost in the third round.

Dempsey opened the fight by accepting some taps on the face. Then he hauled off and busted Willard in the stomach so hard that a dazed expression overspread the champion's countenance. Dempsey then landed several blows to the jaw and Willard dropped to the floor for six counts, only to fall again with a blow that greeted his nose.

As he got up a second time he turned his head away but the Giant Killer struck him twice and he fell on his hands and knees.

Arising once more, Willard was cornered by Dempsey who pounded him to the mat with rights and lefts to the face. Again he got up and once more he was knocked down.

Somehow the giant groped his way through the second round, suffering nothing more humiliating than a fall partly through the ropes. Dempsey tore into him again when the third round opened. Willard was groggy and weak, with one eye out of shape and everything gone wrong. His seconds threw the towel into the ring and called it a day.
