THE NEW WAY TO "REDUCE."

A doctor with a sense of humor suggests to his lady patients who want to get thin, "Just worry! Worry is the greatest fat reducer known." As a means for promoting worry he suggests adopting a light diet, taking the money saved on lunches, sweets and rich food and investing it in some of the many doubtful securities of the day, and then watching the stock market quotations go down. It's a fine system for anybody who has the courage to try it.

This same doctor believes that the business depression is a good thing for the country. He has seen the preceding fat years make of clean-cut America a fat people, luxury-loving, inert, bound on their way to the tomb through over-indulgence. He knows that hard times work the other way. Cheeks grow thin and bodies slough off their rolls of flesh. Minds grown fatuous and lazy are sharpened to a keen edge once more by the whetstone of anxiety, the dropping of luxuries and the necessity for action to meet the emergencies.

It is a new light on hard times. But it takes a doctor to tell the truth, remarks an exchange.

Things don't always happen the way one might expect, says a writer in 'The Nation's Business. I heard of a soft drink manufacturer who was put out of business by prohibition. In the old days he sold thousands of cases of his harmless drink to saloons—where there was always an incidental demand for non-intoxicating beverages. Now there are no saloons, and this manufacturer hasn't been able to sell enough elsewhere to make up the difference. For he has never had to face such keen competition.

Speaking about city parks, why not negotiate for some acreage west of the city near the ball grounds and adjoining the river? It would be an ideal location, of easy access, with an abundance of shade and could be quickly converted into a fine city park. As the matter of securing a park is now under discussion, let's finish the job before the summer closes. There's a number of suitable locations not yet brought to the surface.

One dead and six seriously injured is the record of an automobile smashup near Salem Saturday evening, and bystanders report that the car that did the damage was going 60 miles an hour or better. When the fool and the automobile get together, the result is tragic.—Eugene Register.

Many a man has to wait until the first of the month before he can tell the difference between calico and crepe de chene.

"The follies of youth" are so called by those who are committed to the supreme folly of being old.

Marriages are called "matches" because they have so many flareups.

Canning and Drying Shows Big Increase

(News-Review Washington Bureau.) WASHINGTON, July 6.—A preliminary statement of the general results of the 1920 census of manufactures, covering the calendar year of 1919, for the canning and drying of fruits and vegetables has been issued by the bureau of the census, department of commerce. It consists of a detailed statement of the value of canned and dried fruits and vegetables picked during the years 1914 and 1919 in the United States as a whole.

Big Industry. Returns were received from 3190 establishments engaged in the industry in 1919, the products of which for that year were valued at $416,145,000. At the census of 1914, there were 3250 establishments reported with products valued at $158,916,000. While there was then a decrease of sixty in the number of establishments, the total value of products increased $258,129,000, or 163.3 per cent.

From 1914 to 1919 the value of canned vegetables increased $89,205,000, or 95 per cent; canned fruits, $103,068,000, or 414 per cent; dried fruits, $51,252,000, or 147.4 per cent, and canned soups, $3,980,000, or 50.5 per cent.

The value of canned soups does not include the product of slaughtering and meat packing establishments.

Jealous Veteran Slays Girl, Self

MARSHFIELD, Or., July 5.—In a fit of insane jealousy because of a youthful love affair being broken off, Bert Clinton, aged 21 and member of the American Legion, shot and killed Erma Wagner, aged 18, at Myrtle Point this morning and then fatally shot himself. Clinton died at the hospital at 4 o'clock this morning.

Clinton served in the navy throughout the war and was one of the first young men of Coos county to volunteer his services and enlist when the war started. When discharged he returned to Myrtle Point.

to make his home and was employed there.

Clinton had been attentive to the girl for some time, but during the past year Miss Wagner had attempted to repulse his attentions. Friends say that Clinton was greatly infatuated. At a dance Monday night Clinton had the first and last dance with the girl. He asked to accompany her home, but she refused, saying she would go with her mother.

Miss Wagner was the daughter of J. M. Wagner, of Broadbent, and during the celebration was visiting at the home of her grandfather, T. M. Hermann, brother of Binger Hermann, in Myrtle Point.

She went home with her mother, Mrs. Donna. Mrs. Omar Grant and Miss Bessie Donaca.

Clinton hurried ahead and waited for the party in front of the Hermann home. He asked for a few words with Miss Wagner, but she replied that she would not talk at that time. Clinton drew a .38 revolver and fired. Mrs. Donaca put her arm about her daughter to protect her. The first bullet fired went through the sleeve of Mrs. Donaca's coat. Clinton then took the girl in his arms and fired a bullet through her head and then shot himself in the head. Both fell on the sidewalk. The girl died. Clinton was taken to the hospital, but nothing could be done for him.

The deputy coroner, after an investigation, said that it was evident the young man had been suffering from insane jealousy for some time past.

Young Clinton was the son of J. DeWitt Clinton of Myrtle Point. He was a quiet young man and had been held in respect, and Miss Wagner was a quiet, modest girl. Both were members of pioneer families of Coos county.

REMAINS IN HER MEMORY

How North Star Brings Up Vision of Happy Childhood to the Mind of Writer.

One of my own most perfect childhood memories concerns my visits to my grandmother, when she invited me to stay for supper, and my grandfather walked home with me after dark. All along the way, he used to point out our two shadows on the pavement, as we passed the street lights one by one.

We watched the way the shadows were very short directly below the lamp, and how they lengthened until they were just our height—his more than twice as tall as mine—and how they finally grew so long that their tops were almost out of sight. The object was to find the point where the shadows were exactly as tall as ourselves. When we came to the darkest part of the street, where our shadows were lost in the hedges, we used to stop and find the North star over a pointed tree near my own home.

That was always the way we made the journey from his home to mine, until he thought that I was too old to care to have him show me stars and shadows any more. But for me, as long as I live, the North star will shine over that particular tree. And I shall always keep the memory of that funny little shadow that used to be mine, clear cut with the light behind it—and beside it, hand in hand with it, that dear characteristic shadow that never falls on any road in the world.—Frances Lester Warner in the Atlantic Monthly.

BELL MADE TOO MUCH NOISE

Invention of the Telephone Evidently Was Not by Any Means a Quiet Affair.

The landlady couldn't stand it any longer, and the lodgers threatened to leave unless the racket stopped.

Alexander Graham Bell was the cause of the trouble. He had rigged up a contraption in his bedroom and a duplicate in the room of his accomplice, Thomas A. Watson. A wire went out of the window and connected the two machines.

These two machines, according to young Bell, were first models of a revolutionary invention, the telephone. "I don't care what it is," said the landlady, "but if you two boys don't stop yelling your heads off, into those boxes, you'll have to pack your trunks and get out."

This episode of the angry landlady happened years ago in a cheap lodging house in Boston.

The Western Union Telegraph company offered Bell $100,000 for all his patents. Bell, with vision, realized that he had a fortune within grasp and rejected the offer. He and Watson went around the country, delivering lectures, and with the proceeds financed themselves.

Today there is a telephone to every old American and more than 24,000,000 miles of wire in the Bell telephone lines.

Old Estates in America.

The commonest real estate phenomenon in England is the rarest one in America; namely, long-handled-down holdings still belonging to descendants of the ancient owners. A certain William Douglas, born (where else than) in Scotland, came to this country in 1625 and settled near New London, Connecticut, where he built a house. The homestead has been in the hands of his offspring ever since. What is believed to be the first English settlement within the present boundaries of New York state, Gardiner's Island, at the eastern end of Long Island sound, is still owned by descendants of the original owner of the island, Lion Gardiner, who purchased it in 1639 from the Indians. The present home of the Gardiners was built in 1774 and has been exteriorly little altered since.

Toughest American Wood.

The toughest American wood is that of the Osage orange, which is not an orange at all, but belongs to the nettle family. This has been proved by a series of tests made by the United States Forest Service, but the Indians knew it before the coming of the white man, and it was known to them as the bow tree, because they used it for making their finest bows. Some idea of its strength may be had from the report made not long ago by the forest service, which shows that a block thirty inches long and two inches in cross-section when bent breaks under a stress of 13,000 pounds, its nearest rival being a variety of the hickory called monkey-nut. When bent by the impact of a 100-pound hammer, it stands a stress of 15,520.

Our Dearest Friends.

We spend a great deal of our time in learning what literature is good, and a great deal more in attuning our minds to its reception, rightly convinced that, by the training of our intellectual faculties, we are unlocking one of the doors through which sweetness and light may enter. We are fond of reading, too, and have always maintained with Macaulay that we would rather be a poor man with books than a great king without, though luckily for our resolution, and perhaps for his, such a choice has never yet been offered. Books, we say, are our dearest friends, and so, with true friendly acuteness, we are prompt to discover their faults, and take great credit in our ingenuity.—Agnes Repplier.

Professor Budlong Puts Tanlac To Test

PROF. C. J. BUDLONG, Manchester, N. H.

"It's an actual fact, I'm in good health for the first time in thirty years and I owe my present splendid condition to Tanlac and nothing else," was the emphatic statement of Prof. C. J. Budlong, well-known and highly respected citizen of Manchester, N. H., residing at 42 School street.

"Practically all my life I had had rheumatism, and when I say rheumatism I mean every word of it. It was all over my body and especially bad in my feet and legs and there were times when I couldn't get from my bed to my chair without help. And from the time I was a boy I couldn't sit down and eat a good meal without being in misery afterwards and I would have terrible pains around my heart and frequent attacks of palpitation and dizziness. I had a suborn case of constipation, was troubled awfully with blinding headaches and hardly knew what sleep was. My suffering had almost made a complete nervous wreck of me and I was so weak I wasn't worth a nickel as far as work was concerned. I thought my troubles had a life-long grip on me and was about as discouraged as a man ever gets.

"Well, before I had finished my first bottle of Tanlac I realized it was different from anything I ever tried. It suited my case exactly. And now for almost the first time since I can remember I can eat anything I want and digest it. I haven't an ache or a pain and have gained fifteen pounds in weight. I just feel good all over and am full of life and energy these days. Everywhere I go I talk Tanlac. It hasn't an equal." Tanlac is sold in Roseburg by W. F. Chapman Pharmacy, and leading druggists.
