Entered as second-class matter May 17, 1920, at the post office at Roseburg, Oregon, under the Act of March 2, 1879.

ROSEBURG, OREGON, JULY 13, 1921.

TESTS OF CHARACTER.

The head of a surety company some days ago expressed the conviction as a result of his observation that married men, fat men and profane men offer the best risk in his business.

It may be that fat men are disposed toward good nature and that an easy-going man is not tempted to go wrong because it would involve too much trouble.

If observation supports the view expressed by the surety company official it is coincidence rather than cause and effect. One's reliability certainly depends on one's principle rather than on one's martial state, corpulency or manner of speech.

Folks who believe hustle and bustle in every day life is a characteristic confined to the western hemisphere would do well to visit Glasgow, according to an engineer writing in Electrical Review.

Integrity is a quality that cannot be determined by surface indications. It has to be determined in living. The honest man may meet all three of the superficial conditions laid down but he is honest not because of them but because he is right.

Germany is rapidly getting back to normal. Brewers are now permitted to make 25 per cent of their product with 12 per cent alcoholic strength.

The man only slightly under the influence of liquor attracts considerable more attention than before prohibition.

Bathing Resort to Many Lynchings be Opened Soon Reported This Year

The popular bathing resort in Unquaga Park is to be opened within a few days by Hazel and Lewis Payne, who are now preparing to erect a couple of large tents to be used as dressing rooms and who are making other arrangements prior to the official opening of the resort.

Lincoln Thruway, well known resident of Camas Valley, had the misfortune to fall from a wagon last evening, and upon doing so fell in such a manner, as to sustain a break in collar bone.

On Wednesday evening, we held our prayer meeting at the parsonage or other private house, using the church building for the Sunday services only.

Heir Petitions For New Administration

As a result of the recent fracas at Elkton, in which W. H. Levins stabbed James Boyce, in an altercation over a hay fork, Ruby Levins, step-daughter of James Boyce, and heir to the Cyrus Levins estate, has petitioned the county court to remove W. H. Levins as administrator of the estate.

FATHER IS DEAD.

Mrs. E. Bridges of this city, today received news of the death of her father, J. K. Lilly of Athens, W. Va. Mr. Lilly was quite advanced in years.

Cheer up! It's too hot to worry.

There are ten million feeble minded people in the United States, says a well known doctor. Well, well, that's not too bad.

Do you remember the first time you traveled on a Pullman, and you thought the porter was trying to steal your shoes?

Nightgowns to be shorter, says French style expert, and ladies' attire will extend only slightly below the knees. Well, well, wouldn't that get your chamois—that's almost as bad as street dresses.

HE MUST PAY THE MEAT BILL. FOR SALE—I must sell my 1918 auto at once. Only $100 cash, balance on very easy terms. Phone 270-J—Eugene Daily Guard.

"Protection" needed—bathing beach in full swing," says a headline in the Albany Democrat. Another effect of those knitted bathing suits.

The big smoke, Jack Johnson, is out rustling up a fight and says he is after Dempsey's hide. And it looks as though Dempsey intends to preserve his hide by hiding.

When a man goes to have his picture taken he feels funny. He either tries to look stern like General Pershing or to appear jovial, sort of Al Jolson like. But invariably the result is that he looks very much like himself, and that's always a disappointment.

About the first of the month the mail becomes more deadly than the female.

ISN'T IT FUNNY? Two prize fighters Enter the roped arena To slug each other And receive a purse of $200,000 or $300,000 For their trouble. But let two men go Into an alley and do The same thing and City Recorder Whipple Fines them five bucks each.

A Dixonville resident, just returned from New York, says a fellow can't have much fun in a big city, 'cause there are so few places where one can pitch horseshoes.

Etaoin Shrdlu ppxvlll etaoin etnaoin etna is to be a regular visitor in the city according to some linotype operators.

A NEIGHBORHOOD TALE. The Sage met the Fool at the Club one evening and they engaged in conversation.

"You ought to be more careful," the Sage advised the Fool. "Last night I walked past your house and you had forgotten to pull down the shades. I beheld you loving your wife something scandalous."

The fellow with a dirty vest is usually the first one to complain about his neighbor's backyard.

USE YOUR JUDGEMENT, JIM. "Dear Mrs. Ellsbury—I am in love with a young lady of 18 whose parents are as strict on her as if she was still under age. Is it considered proper etiquette to secure her father's permission before going to see her." "Anxious Jim."—News-Review.

LIVED ON FISH FOR A YEAR

Explorer Stefansson Tells of Year's Fish Diet Without Salt.

That we place too high a value on a great variety of food as necessary to health and good digestion is the opinion of Stefansson, the eminent explorer, who lectures at Chautauqua on the second night, based on his experience in the Arctic, and the experience of those who were with him on his historic expeditions.

"I lived on fish, both raw and cooked, for a whole year, and without salt," Mr. Stefansson says, "and weighed ten pounds more at the end of the year than at the beginning. I was not troubled with indigestion, or any other bad effects. In fact, I can say that I never felt better in my life. Taking up any new system of diet is largely a psychological matter," said Mr. Stefansson.

HOME DECORATION

Interesting Lecture at Chautauqua by Hunt Cook of Chicago Art Institute.

"No community can rise above the level of its home life and that home life is largely, the product of home surroundings," says Hunt Cook of the Chicago Art Institute, who lectures at Chautauqua on the third afternoon.

Mr. Cook is an authority on interior decoration and he will talk at Chautauqua on "Art in the Home." He builds a model room on the Chautauqua stage and shows the right and wrong way of arrangement.

SHOWED SMALLNESS OF MIND

Whistler's Petulance Under Criticism Was Cause of Sorrow to His Numerous Admirers.

There is no doubt that Whistler was a master of bitter words. His phrases have a casual ease of snapping and stinging that often scarifies and sometimes amazes. From his Puritan training and his extensive knowledge of the Bible—"that splendid mine of inventive," as he characteristically called it—as well as from his own reckless temper, he drew a profusion of abuse, which withered, whether justifiable or not. And occasionally he was capable of great imaginative touches that recall his pictures.

But in general his writing is vexatious and, to say the least, undignified; and the angry rattle of a gifted small boy, who ought to know better. The Wilde correspondence is perhaps the worst; but everywhere we get a tone of cheap abuse and railing. There is a careless vigor of sharp wit, but hardly the vigorous splendor of Voltaire or Swift.

And it is such a small, such a shallow, such a supersensitve way of taking criticism; no urbanity, no serenity, no large, sweet, humorous acceptance of the inevitable chattering of the world. I do not see how any admirer of Whistler's genius can read "The Gentle Art of Making Enemies" without sighing over the pity of it.—Garnet Bradford, in Atlantic Monthly.

ANCIENT GUILD OF ARCHERS

Institution Centuries Old Lodged in One of the Most Interesting Buildings in Bruges.

One of the most interesting places in Bruges, both for its antiquity and its connection with the royal house of Stuart, is the Guild of Archers of St. Sebastian. The date of the foundation of the guild is unknown, as all the records were destroyed in the great fire of the beiry of Bruges in 1280. However, there is every reason to believe it must have existed before 1090, as it had already emblazoned in its arms the Cross of Jerusalem, or the Holy Land, which was awarded to all the medieval guilds that took part in the first crusade.

Charles II, King of England, together with his brother, the duke of Gloucester, became members during their two years of exile. Charles II was the first to inaugurate the Gold Book of the Archers, and put his signature to his gift in which he promised 1,000 golden crowns. The duke of Gloucester gave 200 golden crowns to the guild and also a silver arrow.

Senses Kept to Danger.

Since it is more important to be warned of danger than guided to delights our senses are made more sensitive to pain than pleasure, writes Edwin E. Slosson in the New York Independent. We cannot detect by the smell one two-millionth of a milligram of oil of roses or musk, but we can detect one two-billionth of a milligram of mercaptan, which is the vilest smelling compound that man has so far invented.

Thought He Had a Meaning.

Readers will be interested to know that authors do not always know just what precisely was their meaning when they wrote certain lines or passages. Maeterlinck always disclaimed any allegorical message in his "Blue Bird," for instance, and insists that he wrote the play as a fairy tale, and nothing more.

Netting Wild Animals.

Netting animals is one of the easiest and best methods of collecting them, says Charles Mayer, in Asia Magazine. The size of the meshes will depend entirely upon what one hopes to capture. The net is placed at a spot where animals are sure to pass; it is suspended across the trail and held in place by light bamboo poles.

Not Entirely to His Liking.

A South Grand avenue business man was getting chummy with his six-year-old son the other day. "Wouldn't you like to grow up and be a motor car salesman like me?" the father asked. "The boy thought it over a minute. 'Hense, papa, couldn't I just grow up?' he answered.—Kansas City Star.
