ADVICE TO LOVELORN AND OTHERS

A Daily Column of Questions and Answers Conducted by a Woman Who Knows. Address your Letters to Mrs. Ellsbury Care Roseburg News-Review.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury:—I have a young daughter 16 years old and she has recently begun to dance. I have let her go to several school dances with her girl friends, and to a large ball with a chaperone. She loves to dance and now every time there is a dance in town we have a scene at home because she wants to go. She doesn't seem to have any idea that I could or would go. I am still young myself and know many of the people that attend dances here. What do you think about me going to dances myself. I have always danced before I was married and for a few years afterward. Would my girl respect me more or less, and would people think I was trying to act young again. My husband is away a great deal and would have no objection to my going.

MRS. V., Roseburg. A. I think it would be a splendid idea for you to attend dances with your daughter. She will think much more of you for it. Don't let her think that you are watching her at the dance, and don't reprimand her constantly about her behavior. She will then enjoy your being there, as much as you will. If you see her do something really wrong, talk it over with her a day or so later. I think when a young girl likes to dance it is ideal for her to go with her parents, and soon the parents will be enjoying it as much if not more than the daughter.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury:—My daughter is nearly eighteen years old and lately she has changed completely, it seems to me. She insists upon going to dances with her stockings rolled below her knees, and with what seems to me hardly any clothes on at all. She says she is more comfortable that way but it worries me considerably. Sometimes I wonder if she is really decently clothed.

WORRIED MOTHER, Roseburg. A. All mothers seem to be having trouble with their young daughters these days. I am sure there is nothing to worry about in your case. Your daughter is merely following the style of her friends. All young girls seem to want to put as few clothes on as possible these days, and in this hot weather it certainly seems sensible to me. Dancing is about the warmest thing they do, and I am not surprised that they don't want to wear too many clothes. Be sure that she is not dressed immodestly and do not worry about her.

CHAUTAQUA TO START TOMORROW

Series of Entertainments Begin Sunday Night and Last For Week.

PROGRAM IS EXCELLENT

Finest Array of Talent Ever Presented to Roseburg Audiences Will Appear On Circuit This Year.

Only 24 hours remain before the opening of the Roseburg Chautauqua. A great week of music and lectures is in store for those fortunate enough to hold season tickets. Burnell Ford on Sunday evening, Ada Roach and Ruth Freeman and Stefansson, world renowned Arctic explorer on Monday. A prelude and concert by the Orpheum Four, one of the best male quartettes in the country and a stirring patriotic address by Dr. James Freeman Jeanees on Tuesday. The Jugo Slav orchestra in prelude and concert and a magnificent address by Tom Skehill on Wednesday. Skehill is the best informed man in America today on the Russian situation. Community singing led by the noted song leader Walter Jenkins, an address by Father Cronin, a witty and eloquent Roman Catholic priest, and the play "Nothing But the Truth," a comedy put on by a clever company direct from Broadway, New York, will be the program for the fifth day. The Sam Lewis Concert company in prelude and concert and an address by Peter Clark MacFarlane, one of the most known writers and newspapermen in America, is the program for the sixth day.

The closing hours will consist of a prelude and concert by the Leaurance Little Symphony Orchestra and a stirring address by Captain T. Denning Upton. "Dinny" will speak on the "Four Square Builder." The Bible hour will be held each morning at 10 o'clock in the tent. The Junior Chautauqua will meet with the superintendent, Miss Ona Woodruff, every morning at 10 o'clock. In addition to this splendid program there will be given two lectures, "Doughboy Snapshots," and a "Trip Through Southern France," by James Elvin, the director.

Miss Woodruff, the Junior Superintendent, will be at the tent promptly at 6 o'clock on Sunday evening and season reserve seat tickets and single reserved seat tickets can be obtained from her at that time.

Only a short time remains to get season tickets. Roseburg people are urged to get behind local guarantors and put the seat sale over the top before the opening hour of the Chautauqua. The better support given the guarantors the faster the Chautauqua grows and the better the programs listed for the ensuing years.

Movie Closeups

There isn't a thing missing in "One Man in a Million," the latest Robertson-Cole super-special release in which George Beban, the great American character actor, appears in the stellar role. In all of the cities throughout the country where the picture has been shown, critics have declared it to be the greatest of screen dramas. This big photoplay will be shown at the Antlers theater Saturday evening and at the Majestic Sunday.

The story is of human interest with a strong series of comedy reliefs. Mr. Beban has shown his capabilities in this picture first having written the story and later producing and directing it. In the stellar role Mr. Beban is seen in his now familiar and much loved character of a humble Italian who teaches a really human lesson through the medium of a big heart. The author has called to his aid many clever dogs and an almost human parrot to bring home the story of the picture.

With Mr. Beban in the supporting cast is George Beban, Jr., his five year old son, who will undoubtedly be as great a thespian as his illustrious daddy. Others in the cast are Helen Jerome Eddy, Irene Rich, Lloyd Whitlock, George Williams, Jennie Lee and Wade Boteler.

Making pictures is becoming a regular round of arduous sacrifices for her according to May Allison, the blonde Metro star who indulges in some fiery destruction in her latest picture, "Extravaganza," which will be shown at the Majestic tonight.

In this picture adapted from Ben Ames Williams' story, "More Stately Mansions," Miss Allison and her entire supporting company in one of the big scenes take a midnight plunge into the Pacific ocean in all their festive attire. The watery setting was staged on the old Nat Goodwin pier, known the world over as the scene of many of the late Mr. Goodwin's social functions.

"I think I have sacrificed more perfectly good clothes in the interest of my productions lately," said Miss Allison, "than most people have in a lifetime. Why, it positively made my heart bleed to jump into the ocean with that wonderful Paris gown but it had to be done."

It was Christmas Eve on the snow-swept range. In a tiny cabin two kiddies are expecting the arrival of Santa Claus, although their mother's heart is breaking at the thought of her children's disappointment. Across the whirling snow, weak and wounded, stumbles a man. A half mile behind, following the trail and gaining at every step, are the sheriff and his posse of man hunters. There is a reward of $10,000 for the capture of the fugitive.

Straight for the huddle cabin he steers his perilous path, for there lives the woman he loves—the woman who would have been his wife had she been free to accept his offer. There is an affecting greeting, and the kiddies ask him if he has brought Santa with him. A look in the mother's eye tells him of her plight. For a moment he hesitates. Then, taking a pair of handcuffs from his pocket, he tells the oldest child to clamp them on his wrists. He then tells him to walk to the door with him and when the sheriff arrives, to say, "This is my prisoner; I claim the reward."

This is the final scene in one of the most powerful western dramas ever enacted on a local screen. It is "Desperate Trails," and will be shown at the Antlers theater Sunday, with popular Harry Carey in the stellar role, supported by a capable cast.

Harry Carey has never been seen to better advantage than in the role of Bart Carson; reine Rich is lovable and appealing as Mrs. Walker; Barbara LaMar is fascinating as Lady Lou, and other roles were effectively portrayed by George Seigmann, Ed Coxen, George Stone, Helen Field and Charles Insley.

The child was running across the street at the time of the accident, and in some manner fell so as to sustain a break of the arm.

Boy Gets Heavy Fine

Wesley Bonebrake was fined $10 yesterday afternoon by Recorder R. L. Whipple for being out after hours. He was also given a ten days' jail sentence which was suspended during good behavior. Bonebrake, it is claimed by the city officers, has persisted in remaining out after hours, regardless of repeated warnings and for this reason the recorder imposed a heavy fine.
