England Gives Evidence Friendship for U. S.

By CLYDE A. BEALS.

(United Press Staff Correspondent.) LONDON, July 30. (By Mail.)—Everything on this side of the water points to the rapid increase of good feeling toward the United States. The unthinkability of quarreling with America is only rivaled by a popular newspaper topic by the impossibility of war.

"Friendly co-operation with the United States is for us," said Mr. Lloyd George in his opening address to the Dominion Premiers now meeting in London, "a cardinal principle."

We are ready to discuss with American statesmen any proposal for limitation of armaments which they may wish to set out, and we can undertake that no such overtures will find a lack of willingness on our part to meet them."

"That, however, only came as a climax to what has gone before, and serves as a keynote for what has gone on since. The last few months have seen a sudden growth of Washington busts and statues in England. The Sulgrave Institution presented three busts, one to Liverpool, one to Sulgrave Manor, the home of Washington's ancestors, and the third went to one of the most sacred spots in the British Empire the crypt of St. Paul's cathedral. The "Heart of England," Trafalgar Square, now treasures a replica of the Houdon statue of Washington, presented by the state of Virginia.

The Marquess Curzon, receiving the statue on behalf of the government, said: "The two great branches of the English-speaking race are now and indissolubly one. We can never fight again."

This unveiling occasioned many expressions in London papers to the effect that England would never be satisfied until of her own initiative she had erected a statue of Washington in Westminster Abbey. For England there is no more hallowed spot. Statues of Lincoln have also become popular. One was placed in a cemetery on Calton Hill in Edinburgh shortly after the United States entered the war. About a year ago a statue of him was placed just across the street from the Parliament buildings, though it has been temporarily moved to have a firm base built. Newspaper photographers took snapshots at that unveiling of the prime minister singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

All these signs of Anglo-American friendship are being encouraged by British and American societies. The most remarkable is the English-speaking Union. It was founded by twelve Americans and Englishmen in London on July 4, 1918. On the third anniversary of its birth, it had over 5000 members. The American president is ex-President Taft, and the English president is Arthur J. Balfour. The luncheons and banquets that the union holds have become the vehicles of semi-official announcements. Ambassador Harvey's formal bow was made at one of the formal how that caused so much comment all over the world. Ambassador Davis made his farewell at one. The prime minister has spoken on occasions, as well as Winston Churchill and other prominent English statesmen.

There are several other such organizations of friendship on a smaller scale. The Anglo-American society recently endowed a chair of American history. Lord Bryce delivered the first lecture. The Sulgrave Institute has already been mentioned. The Pilgrim society is another.

Working in harmony with all these institutions have been the visits of the Rotarians and the American members of the International Chamber of Commerce. They both made a fine impression.

As one expression of English friendship, Sir James Wakefield is presenting to Pittsburgh, a bust of Pitt, and to Washington, D. C., a bust of Burke, both of which statesmen were decidedly friendly toward America.

On the fourth of July, when many business houses in London were displaying American and English flags, the London Times, one of the world's greatest papers, published a twenty-page American section.

Americans in England, who are delighted at the signs of maturing friendship, send only one comment home to the people coming over to plant more signs of good will. "Some one ought to tell them," one said, "that the English are very reserved in their sentiment. They never like to have it thrown on with a shovel. The Gettysburg address contains 267 words."

L. F. T.'S TO PARTY.

The L. F. T.'s will enjoy another one of their delightful dancing parties Monday evening at the Riddle open air pavilion. A picnic dinner previous to the dances will be held in the grove, and arrangements have been made to serve coffee. Each member has the privilege of inviting friends for this occasion, which no doubt will be as enjoyable as those in the past.

To Film South America

How would you like to break loose from the shackles of routine and the yoke of civilization, assemble a motion picture outfit and expedition equipment for a two or three years' trip, and plunge into the wilds of South America in quest of romance and some good travel films?

Such are the plans of Earl W. Braga, of the Southern Pacific insurance car, now in Roseburg, and his college chum, Fred W. Paulson, an officer in the U. S. navy at San Diego.

For almost a year they have been working on the project, gathering equipment and dovetailing ideas and plans, and hope to sail from San Francisco for the South Seas this coming spring.

Their outfit will comprise the most up-to-date professional motion picture camera on the market, equipped with lenses of exceptional speed and capacity, numerous accessories for the camera, a complete made to order outfit for developing their negatives in the field, a black felt dark-room for use in native huts and hotels, a complete outfit for printing and developing a test positive of their negatives, drying drums, and also a projection machine and screen so that they may project their prints for criticism and editing before writing the titles and shipping to the States.

The first picture to be taken will be "Golden Pacific Hours" and will have its introductory locations in San Francisco, and aboard ship steaming down the Mexican and Central American coast. They plan on stopping over in Guatemala for a picture, and also in Costa Rica for another before continuing on to South America.

From the Canal Zone they plan on going into the interior of Peru, then Bolivia and on south. Mr. Braga has already spent a year and a half in the far end of South America and is familiar with conditions there. Mr. Paulson in the service has also made two voyages to Chile.

Their productions will be released under the name of "Trampalooques" and we will all await their showing at the local theaters with interest.

SAYS ARTICLE IN ERROR.

You surely got things mixed in your paper of July 27th, concerning the Umpqua Port recall. I wish you would correct same; the true case is as follows:

The recall was filed against three commissioners, to-wit: W. P. Reed, J. R. Browne and Joseph R. Butler, because of W. P. Reed's resignation and the appointment of A. L. Butler to fill the vacancy, therefore it left only two for the recall, namely: J. R. Browne and Joseph R. Butler. The Taxpayers' league nominees are John J. Henderer and J. P. Christie. Until Reed's resignation was filed with the county clerk, William R. Sawyers was also a Taxpayers' league candidate but since the appointment of A. L. Butler of Scottsburg in W. P. Reed's place, Mr. William R. Sawyers has withdrawn his name as a candidate for election as port commissioner.

The election will be held August 12th. Yours truly, FRED ASSENHEIMER, Gardiner, Oregon.

AIREDALE DOG NOT SCOTCH

Breed Had Its Origin in Yorkshire, England, and is a Comparative Newcomer.

Your airedale is not a Scotch dog. He is not of Scotch ancestry and no blood of Scotch dogs flows in his veins. He is an Irish and English dog. The name of his breed does not come from the County Ayr in Scotland, but from the River Aire in Yorkshire, England. Nor is the airedale an old breed of dog, as such things are measured in the dog world. It is neither an old family nor a "first family" among dogs. The airedale is a newcomer. Dogs of this breed were first exhibited at Shipley, in Yorkshire in 1876, and they were then called, not airedale, but "waterside terriers." These dogs were produced by crossing an English otter hound with an Irish terrier, believed to have been a red terrier, and later adding a dash of bull terrier blood. The combination produced a dog second to no other dog in intelligence, bravery, gameness in a fight, loyalty to his master and his master's family, and kindness to children.

The word "airedale," as the name of this new kind of dog, was first used in 1883 at the national dog show at Birmingham, England, where these entries were described as "airedales or waterside terriers." The name "waterside terriers" fell into disuse. The English Kennel club was slow and conservative in recognizing this as a new and distinct breed of dog, but referred to them as "broken-haired terriers."

TRACE INSTITUTION TO ADAM

Ancient and Honorable Order of Henpecked Husbands Claims First Man Was Chairman.

Easter Monday is the henpecked husband's day in Yorkshire, and the members of the Ancient and Honorable Order of Henpecked Husbands held high revel together in hillside villages, says the London Morning Post. The club is one of those freak institutions established in pure fun, though the members do declare that it dates from Adam, who was the first chairman of the order.

Really it is a survival of the days when freak clubs flourished in the country—the days of the Elanites of Bradford, known locally as the Low Moor Liars, whose test of membership was the ability to drink a quart of beer without stopping to take a breath, and to tell a trumping lie.

The biggest liar was elected mayor for the three months following and had the privilege of free beer at all meetings during his term of office.

Another quaint organization was the Pudsey Botherhead Tea club, a body which, judged by its name, might have been mistaken for a tea-drinking institution, but which declared its object to be the promotion of beer-drinking and the playing of chess.

Egyptian Decorative Ideas.

Experts tell us that in the decoration of furniture the Egyptian cabinet maker never veiled construction. He obeyed the sound principle and precept that decoration should spring from construction, and not construction from decoration.

Elements of ornament apparently were the same in private as in public buildings. These elements were the lotus and papyrus flowers, the palm branch and the feathers of birds, as well as a number of geometrical patterns derived from primitive arts of weaving and plaiting. The simple or complex treatment of lotus and papyrus flowers, buds, leaves and stems, it is asserted, made the Egyptian system of mural decoration rich, varied and glowing, as well as thoroughly in harmony with the scale of color set by nature in the Nile valley.
