

W. C. T. U. TO HOLD CONVENTION AUG. 9

Annual Douglas County Convention to Meet at Presbyterian Church.

TO BE ALL DAY SESSION

Fine Program Dealing With Topics of Philanthropy and Reform is Arranged by Committee in Charge of the Event.

The Douglas county annual W. C. T. U. convention will be held in this city on August 9, at the Presbyterian church.

The W. C. T. U. is not only an organization of reform, but also of philanthropy. Interest in the home and school are definitely sought for by the organization.

The W. C. T. U. will be assisted in their evening program by the Chamber of Commerce and the Douglas county concert band.

The following is the program of the convention:

9:30 a. m.—Devotional service. County Evangelistic superintendent in charge.

9:45—Appointment of committees and election tellers.

10:15—Reports of departmental superintendents. Mothers' Meeting and Child Welfare. Mrs. L. M. Tuttle, Sutherland; Olvatic Medal Contest. Mrs. Olive Betts, Roseburg; Anti-Narcotics. Mrs. Helena Riddle, Riddle; Law Enforcement. Mrs. E. A. Shurr, Roseburg; Scientific Temperance Instruction. Mrs. Ford, Gardiner.

Report of vice president, Mrs. Alva C. Marsters, Roseburg.

Solo, Mrs. Hutchinson, Canyonville.

President's address, Mrs. Edythe Kelley, Roseburg.

God's Leadership Essential, eight minute speeches, in charge of Rev. H. L. Caldwell, pastor Baptist church, Roseburg.

In the Home, Rev. J. C. Jones, pastor M. E. church, south, Roseburg.

In the Schools, Mrs. John Howard, Green.

Election of officers.

12:00—Nonnalide prayer for world prohibition, Mrs. Hutchinson, Canyonville.

Luncheon served in the church. Table blessing in song. Tune, Old Hundred.

Be present at our table, Lord. Be here and everywhere adored. Thy creatures bless and grant that we may feast in Paradise with Thee.

Solo, Miss Naomi Phelps, Roseburg.

After dinner speech, "Prohibition in Action."

1:30—Song and praise service. In charge of Captain C. Ford of the Salvation Army.

1:50—Thank offering service, led by Mrs. Mary Carwell, Yoncalla.

2:05—Address, "Our Plague Spots and How to Get Rid of Them" Rev. Guy Fitch Phelps, pastor M. E. church, Roseburg.

2:15—Solo, Mrs. Oscar Gorrell, of Sutherland.

2:35—Cathartenes.

2:50—Address, "Personality," by Mrs. Felix T. McWhirter, Indianaapolis, Ind., past president Indiana Federation Women's Club and the state W. C. T. U.

3:10—Reports of convention committees.

3:30—"Community Sing," leader, Miss Leona Genevieve Marsters, University of Oregon School of Music.

3:50—"The Biggest Work Done by Any Union This Year. Two-minute speeches by local union presidents: Mrs. Olivia McGilvray, Canyonville; Mrs. J. P. Christy, Gardiner; Mrs. J. J. Betts, Clatskanie; Mrs. Helena Riddle, Riddle; Mrs. Alva C. Marsters, Roseburg; Mrs. M. E. French, Sutherland; Mrs. Mary Carwell, Yoncalla.

4:10—Baby hour. Small children received as members of the W. C. T. U. cradle roll.

Solo, Mrs. A. N. Orcutt, Roseburg.

7:45—Music, Christian Workers' Band chorus.

Devotional services, Rev. C. H. Hilton, pastor Christian church, Roseburg.

Report of election of county officers.

Royal Quartette.

Program in charge of the Roseburg Chamber of Commerce, Judge J. W. Hamilton, president.

Selections by the Douglas County Concert Band, Mr. T. A. Olson, director, Mr. A. T. Lawrence, manager.

Symposium, Natural Resources, Vital Resources, A. C. Marsters, Spiritual Forces, Rev. E. W. Warrenton, pastor Presbyterian church.

DRAIN AND LEONA.

Mrs. Sylvia Sanders went to Portland Tuesday for a few days visit with her sister, Miss Loretta Traylor. She expects to return Saturday.

Will Traylor and family, accompanied by some friends, went over to Smith river last Thursday for an afternoon's outing.

For the second time this summer

a burglary was attempted on N. D. Cool's store, but Mr. Cool, who was sleeping in the store, heard them as they broke the glass in the window and were reaching in for the lock and frightened them away before they effected entrance.

Mr. Lee and son, Howard, went to eastern Oregon the first of the week to be gone two weeks or so.

Mr. and Mrs. Whipple and the latter's sister, Mrs. Neal, are planning a visit to relatives at Winchester soon.

Mrs. Mary Mattoon expects to leave for an extended visit with relatives in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor gave a surprise party Thursday for their son, Sylvester, on the occasion of his tenth birthday. A pleasant time was had by all.

One of the men working on the highway above Leona met with an accident while unloading gravel the other day, but we could not learn his name nor details of the affair, other than that he lost several fingers.

Mr. Moreman is having a fine chicken house built. It will be large enough to accommodate about 100 hens. Marion and John Gunter are working on the building and will soon have it finished.

We wish to correct an error in last week's items. It was Mrs. Mary Mattoon (not Matton) who went to Cottage Grove on a visit.

Paroled Men Earn Big Sum During Summer

(News-Review Salem Bureau.)

SALEM, Or., July 29.—(Special.)—Earnings in legitimate endeavor of 183 paroled men from the Oregon penitentiary who were reporting during the month of June aggregate $6486.24, according to the report of Percy M. Varney, state parole officer, made to the state parole board.

This was an average of $35.77 to the man. At the same time the average earnings of conditionally paroled men were $52.44 to the man.

Since the passage of the state parole law in 1911 a total of 1493 prisoners have been paroled from the state prison, and 410 of them, or 27.46 per cent, have violated their paroles. Of this number 52.44 per cent violated by committing crime and 47.56 per cent by failure to report.

Crimes by Paroled Men.

According to Mr. Varney the crimes committed by paroled men, which have caused them to be returned to prison or put them in the fugitive status, are usually of minor nature. Really serious crimes that have been committed by these men, he avers, could be counted on the fingers of one hand, and the offense committed by Luther Fagan at Hood River recently in kidnaping two women and a boy, resulting in the killing of Fagan by a posse, Varney says is the most serious crime that has been committed by a paroled man. One or two rather sensational cases of forgery and obtaining money by false pretenses are mentioned. Records showing in detail the escapades of the parole violators are not available at the prison.

Up to six months ago, according to the parole officer, 89 per cent of the men on parole were making good. The percentage has been reduced to some extent in recent months because of the prevalence of misdemeanor and crime during the last winter.

Few Are Oregonians.

The pelley of the prison relative to keeping men in the state when they leave the penitentiary is changing for the reason that a very small percentage of them are Oregonians. The records show that some time back when the prison population was 224 only fifty-seven of the prisoners were Oregonians. Now when a man is through his term in the state prison he is encouraged to leave the state.

In writing up the case of any man who is slated to go before the parole board for consideration, the parole officer is required to submit a statement from the judge who presided at his trial and from the district attorney who prosecuted him; also a statement from the man himself.

When Paroles Are Violated.

When a paroled man violates his parole by commission of a crime and is returned to the prison he is required by law to serve out the maximum of his old sentence and the minimum of his new sentence before he is eligible again to go before the parole board.

In addition to the regular list of paroled men now reporting to Officer Varney are 128 men who have been paroled from the bench. They also are required to report each month. The form of their report is slightly different from that of the men paroled out of prison. The latter must sign a statement showing among other things the conditions of their parole, their monthly earnings and their occupations.

Many Are Discharged.

Mr. Varney now has on his list 112 men who have been released from reporting. Of the 1493 who have been paroled since the law became operative in 1911, 788 have been discharged.

Twelve men were paroled during the month of June.

FARMERS NOTICE.

Douglas County.

I want for display purposes specimen bundles of all choice small grains, timothy, clover, and alfalfa, delivered to 125 Cass Street, and I will pay full value, also for timothy, timothy hay bundles, giving variety and name of grower. A. T. Lawrence, Commercial Agent, 125 Cass Street, Phone 213.

Father Located Valuable Evidence

PORTLAND, July 29.—The holder of the blood-spattered overcoat, the gory hunting knife and the sheet of music pointing an accusing finger toward the state star witness, all of which may serve to clear Mrs. Louise Agee of the charge of murdering her husband, was none other than D. J. Swing, of Norwood, Mo., father of the accused woman.

Rewarding a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

DIVORCE DENIED.

Denying the applications for divorce by both Marjorie Hawley and Willard Hawley, son of the millionaire Oregon City paper manufacturer, the state supreme court today reversed the Clatskanie county court, which granted Willard Hawley's divorce and custody of his child. The court declared neither side proved the charges of cruelty and inhuman treatment was filed when Marjorie Hawley applied for a divorce November 21, 1919, and Willard Hawley December 30 the same year. The plaintiff filed the divorce complaint, the defendant denied and counter-charged. There was criminalization, and recrimination, each forgetting the vow of love and cherish and the value of a good name. The duty to the infant daughter was disregarded and a mutual defamation contest followed.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier, chief counsel for Mrs. Agee, justified his action in not turning the things over to the authorities by saying that Joseph H. Klecker, the janitor-music teacher, brought under suspicion by allegations of the defense, already was out on bail, that an early trial was asked immediately, and that a woman's life was at stake.

Returning a search of weeks, in which he combed every foot of ground for miles about the Agee residence and followed every possible clue, the articles which may save his daughter from the gallows were found by Swing, hidden in the underbrush of a vacant lot at the corner of Well and Lombard streets, on Sunday, July 17, testified the elderly man yesterday.

The evidence had remained in the hands of the defense since that time. John A. Collier,