

Alice Hammerly A Woman Who Wouldn't Remarry

By Edith McGee Gibson
The Novel Writer

AN UNINTENTIONAL HURT.

After a long silence and in a few very formal and polite sentences, Mr. Early accepted my resignation. I knew that he had waited to accept it, hoping to get an answer to the letter I had lost, but at last he had written him. For the first time I was glad I had lost the letter before I read it.

I had and I had determined to go to the seashore, within motoring distance of New York, for the summer. Duane's business would keep him in the city some months longer.

Hal was growing like a weed. I realized that I would soon have to put him in kindergarten. How the weeks and months had sped.

Duane had originally come to the city for only a short time, but his stay was lengthening until even Bab despaired of ever having a home of her own.

One night, after we were settled at the shore, Duane came back from the city and informed us that Judge Turner was coming down with him the next day for the week-end.

I was not able to analyze any emotions. Fear and happy anticipation battled in my mind.

"Duane, is it possible that the judge can now see?"

"Just the very least little bit. But the fandangies have been taken off his eyes and he wears heavy dark glasses. Only time can tell whether he will ever completely recover his sight."

"Bab, I said that evening as she came to my room, 'I am not sure that I want to see Judge Turner.'"

"You are not in love with Mr. Henderson, are you?"

"I do not think that I am in love with any one, although Allen Henderson has been very kind to us ever since that tragic night."

"Kind to us?" sniffed Bab. "You mean that every one but you has noticed that he is perfectly devoted to you. He adores you, Alice, and now you are afraid to have Judge Turner come down here because you have a sneaking sort of pity for him. Thank goodness I never had any doubts in making up my mind about Duane."

"Good night, Bab," I said to terminate the discussion.

"I do not intend to stay long, Alice. I only came to bring you this."

It was Larry Wheaton's wedding card!

While I was very glad and happy for him, I was a little hurt that he had never thought to answer when I sent him Alice's beautiful definition of love. I had known for some time that Larry was going to be married because Bart had been asked to be best man, but Larry himself had seemed to think, if he thought about it at all, that our friendship was definitely settled when he wrote me that letter telling me that he had fallen in love with the real girl.

My admirers are vanishing one by one. I said to myself—and I tried to tell myself that I did not care—that little Hal was all that was necessary to my happiness. But I knew that I had even while I repeated it, over and over.

When a woman has been married and enjoyed the constant companionship of her husband she never gets over that feeling of loneliness, or rather aloneness, for whether a woman is happy or not in her married life there is a certain feeling that some one must be interested in her and her affairs more than he is in anyone else. I do not think I have ever gotten over that loneliness. I cannot describe it except as a feeling of being set apart from the living and loving of the rest of the world.

The knowledge that Judge Turner was coming the next day made me wonder whether I had not better accept Allen Henderson, for I had been for days and weeks trying to keep him from telling me he loved me.

I could not compose myself for sleep for hours and finally I gave it all up and laid my problem on the knees of the gods.

I was never more shocked in my life than when Duane helped Jeff Turner out the motor the next day. The last time I had seen him he was a vigorous personified as he stood against that blue velvet curtain, his eyes contemptuously glaring upon the maddened crowd beneath him; his shock of disordered red hair making an aureole about his ugly face, and in his arms that bundle of supposedly charged humanity. Today his hair was grey at the temples. You could not see his eyes behind the darkened glasses which covered them. His face was still red and scarred from the flame. He was emaciated to a gauntness that made his clothes hang upon him like a scarecrow. There was about him nothing that I recognized except his smile.

At the sound of my voice he put out both hands and I eagerly clasped them. Without thinking I placed the arm that was still slightly stiffened across my shoulder to help him into the house and then, to my surprise and without explaining, Judge Turner drew quickly away.

"Duane, Duane," he called sharply. "Come here."

Duane, who had been talking to Bab and giving orders at the same time for the judge's comfort, came forward.

"What do you want, Jeff?"

"I am going back to the city at once."

"Are you in pain?"

"Yes, terrible pain. It is unbearable."

Without a word Duane helped him back to the motor and the last thing I remember was a sight of those horrible black glasses turned toward me—black glasses on a stranger, for the only characteristic I had recognized had been Judge Turner's smile and that mouth was now compressed into a straight line of agony.

Another Boat Goes on Reefs

(By Associated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—The Pacific Mail steamer San Jose, 2135 tons, bound for San Francisco from Panama, struck San Pablo reef off the west coast of Mexico. The boat is still fast but has listed heavily. The passenger list includes 33 names and the crew 66. It is believed the steamer will float until relief arrives this afternoon.

A ROSEBURG INTERVIEW.

Mr. Carman Tells His Experience.

The following brief account of an interview with a Roseburg man seven years ago, and its sequel, will be read with keen interest by every citizen:

A. J. Carman, R. R. conductor, 446 S. Pine St., Roseburg, says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and can endorse them for they are the very best kidney remedy known to me. Continuous riding on the train, no doubt, affected my kidneys and caused dull, aching pains in the small of my back. As another member of the family had received great benefit from Doan's Kidney Pills I tried them and they gave me the very best of results. They did all that is claimed for them. I willingly endorse Doan's Kidney Pills" (Statement given February 24, 1913).

On March 25, 1920, Mr. Carman said: "My faith in Doan's Kidney Pills is as strong as ever. If I have any trouble with my kidneys I use Doan's and they are sure to relieve the trouble."

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Carman had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

RUSSIAN REFUGEES SUFFERING BADLY.

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, Aug. 9.—F. L. Thompson, in charge of the American relief at Brest-Litovsk, reports that Russian refugees are pouring in at the rate of 2000 per day, many of them crawling on their hands and knees, too weak to stand, and scores dying by the roadside. The conditions are appalling and thousands are existing on grass roots boiled in water. The bolshevik sentries are living on whatever they can get.

The lady in a car who on July 20th took the little red dog from South Roseburg better return same.

Movie Closeups

A picture that will "strike home" to nine-tenths of the audience viewing it; an excellent combination of clever comedy and serious moral—such as "Sham," the new Ethel Clayton Paramount picture which plays at the Antlers theater tonight.

As Katherine Van Ripper, a "gentle grafter," Miss Clayton has a well-balanced light comedy role that shows her at her best. Theodore Roberts is a bluff old oil millionaire while Walter Hiers is his hoity son. Sylvia Ashton and Helen Dunbar, two excellent character actresses, play to perfection a pair of selfish, high society aunts who prize their niece, Katherine, only for her social connections. Playing opposite the star, Clyde Fillmore is highly capable.

All in all "Sham" contains all the humor of the popular stage version with added touches made possible through the enlarged visual scope of the screen.

It was a fortunate coincidence for Harry B. Harris, directing Gladys Walton in "Short Skirts" the current attraction at the Majestic theater, that the filming of this story occurred while the mayoralty campaign in Los Angeles was at its height.

While "Short Skirts" is really a study of a modern young girl and her determination to follow the example set by her older sisters before she is out of her pinafores, one of its most important counterplots has to do with a mayoralty campaign. As the picture was filmed at Universal City in May, during the heat of the election excitement, Director Harris had plenty of opportunities to secure good atmospheric scenes which would otherwise have been almost impossible of duplication.

Referee in Bankruptcy.

RECORDS HUMIDITY IN AIR

Both Temperature and "Livability" Shown by Twin Thermometer Likely to Become Popular.

Sensations of heat or cold, as experienced by a normally healthy person, are caused almost entirely by the condition of the surrounding atmosphere. If it is still, damp, and about 75 degrees or more in temperature, a feeling of disagreeable heat and oppression results; while if of the same temperature, but dry and in moderate motion, no discomfort is felt. The reasons for this are that dry, moving air takes away bodily heat about as rapidly as it is generated, while damp, still air does not, explains a writer in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Therefore in designing an instrument to determine whether atmospheric conditions are conducive to bodily comfort, other factors than temperature must be taken into account. For this reason the ordinary dry-bulb thermometer is unreliable and has been supplemented by another instrument of the so-called wet-bulb type, in which the bulb is inclosed in a fabric mesh bag which keeps it damp. To use, both bulbs are immersed in hot water until they register 110 degrees. They are then removed, and the time required for each to drop to atmospheric temperature noted. The wet bulb will always cool more rapidly than the dry one. This difference in cooling rates serves to index the degree of comfort one should be experiencing, as it roughly indicates the moisture in the air and whether or not air is in motion.

ROMANCE EVEN IN NEW YORK

Almost the Last Place on Earth One Would Look for It, but It Is There, Nevertheless.

Two New Yorkers have set up jeweled tablets in a fashionable uptown cafe, where they first met the women who became their wives. The tablets commemorate the felicitous events.

However incredible this may sound to a race of wives whose husbands forget their wedding anniversaries and a public that does not associate fashionable cafes with conjugal constancy or New York with sentiment, it may easily be confirmed by looking in at the grill of the Cafe Reaux-Arts.

Both memorials are bronze plaques inlaid in the wall in alcoves of the grill and inclosed with glass. The first is set with a fiery opal and carries the mystic inscription "Happy Dawn, September, 1905," nothing else. Andre Bustanoby remembers who put it there, but does not say. The other was the work of a celebrated local lawyer. It is set with a large turquoise and engraved, "A. and L. Aere Perennius, MCMIX." Like the other, it celebrates the meeting with and hours spent with the wife to be. And 12 years have elapsed since the second was put up without any request for permission to alter the inscription or efface.

Mysterious Feat of Rats.

Here's another mystery problem to set beside that of how the Egyptians built the pyramids. G. W. Youngblood, a business man of No. 125 South Broadway, Los Angeles, is responsible for it.

Youngblood related that on opening his office one morning he found that rats had chewed off the tops of carnations which were standing in a glass vase about 14 inches high. According to the real estate man, the rats did not move a chair next to the vase and thus reach the succulent stems, nor was there anything else near by on which they might have stood. And he does not believe the rodents could have climbed the sides of the smooth vase. Still the flowers suffered heavily.

And to make the problem harder, Youngblood said that the rats, displaying a highly developed artistic sense, carried roses from one desk to another which lacked posies. How did the rats accomplish their task?

Otters Cared For.

A pair of fully developed otters have been discovered in a slough along the Brandywine, near West Chester, Pa., and have been watched with interest by many persons.

They are the only ones reported in Chester for probably 40 years, and are very carefully protected by the owner of the property where they have made a den in a bank beside the still water.

The animals are said to be about four feet in length and very active. It is believed a number of young may be produced in the den beneath the bank and prove the founding of a colony which will arouse much future interest.

New Dickens Dramas.

At a recent Charles Dickens dinner in London regret was expressed that dramatic versions of the Dickens novels are not more popular. Forthwith a certain Bransby Williams proposed to undertake to popularize the Victorian novelist in the theater. At Birkenhead he will accordingly institute a repertory season with adaptation of "David Copperfield," "Oliver Twist" and "Barnaby Rudge," to be written by members of the Dickens fellowship under the direction of said Mr. Williams.
