WILLAMETTE PRUNE GROWERS HOLD OUT

Few Prunes Bought In The Dallas Section According to Reports

PRICE UNSATISFACTORY

Growers Continue to Demand Better Price on Small Sizes of Fruit—Crop in Valley to be Under Normal Figures

SALEM, Aug. 17.—Awakening from the lethargy which has embraced the prune market generally since June, 1920, buying in the section around Dallas of dried prunes has been more brisk during the past ten days than for several years and competition in bidding for the 1921 crop is brisk.

Four hundred and twenty-nine thousand pounds of dried prunes, the last of the hold-over of the 1920 crop in the Dallas district with the exception of Woods and Chapman holdings, are reported purchased by the California Packing corporation last week at prices ranging from three and three-fourth cents to five cents. The buyers are reported scouring the orchard districts for what small stocks they can find.

Not all of the activity of the buyers is confined to the hold-over fruit, however. Bidding for the green fruit is already brisk but few contracts are being written, the growers holding fast for a price of $1.40 to $1.50, which they confidently expect will materialize by the opening of the drying season because of the strong competitive buying and unexpected reduction in crop estimates due to the late dropping.

Cannery offerings for the green fruit opened at from $1 to $1.25 a bushel, but failure to attract sales has caused the buyers to cease quoting definite prices pending the opening of the drying season and the establishment of basic prices.

The canneries are this year facing a new form of competition due to the development of a condition novel to the prune industry in the Willamette valley. Brokers are reported bidding extensively for green prunes for the first time and are making preparations to pool the crops of a number of orchards and do their own drying or have it done on contract.

This condition has grown out of the short crop which will make it unpractical for many of the growers to open their dryers profitably. Brokers are planning to lease some of the idle dryers for the season, or contract with the owners of some of the larger dryers to handle their purchases.

While growers doing their own drying estimate the actual cost of the process at about a cent and a half per pound, negotiations of the brokers for contract drying are understood to be contemplating a price of 2 to 2 1/2 cents per pound. Such figuring by the brokers is taken to indicate an anticipation on their part of a further advance in the dried market. Two cents paid for drying green prunes purchased at 40 cents per bushel, the minimum figure for which the growers are holding out, would bring the Dallas cost of the dried fruit to 5 cents to the brokers, but the basis of 20 pounds to the bushel dried.

Many growers, however, are anticipating that the dried return in pounds to the bushel will run more than 20 pounds this year, due to the lack of rain during the growing season. Last year many of the prunes ran as low as 17 and 18 pounds to the bushel dried, but they have run as high as 24 pounds, the mark they are expected to approximate this year.

Offering of 5 cents for 20-lbs. of the coming dried crop still rule the market, but are being entertained with less and less enthusiasm by the growers around Dallas, who are showing increased confidence in their early predictions of a 16 cent price for this size. The price on 40-lbs. for this crop, will reach 8 1/2 cents or better.

Reports that there will be very few of the larger sizes in the new growers on every hand. The sparse bearing of the trees and the condition of the fruit at the present time insure larger prunes than for many seasons, it is claimed.

GOOD YEAR FOR FARMERS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Gray Silver, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau, today said a United Press representative that the American farmers generally would experience the best season financially they have had for several years, and that they will pass the increasing prosperity on to the rest of the country. The general crop shortage will induce higher prices for farm products, and their income will give greater buying power to the farmer, thus benefiting other industries, according to Mr. Silver. As a result of this state of affairs, the legislation of debts will be made and a higher standard of living will be experienced among farmers.

PACIFIC HIGHWAY TO BE DEDICATED

Special Ceremonies To Be Observed Upon The Completion of Peace Portal

IS NEARLY ALL PAVED

Believed That by the Year 1925 Entire Road Will be Paved as Improvements Are Now Being Made in All Sections.

BLAINE, Wash., Aug. 13.—Western America's great coast road, the Pacific highway, which runs from Vancouver, B. C. across Washington, Oregon and California to Tia Juana, Lower California, will be dedicated formally here on the border line between Canada and the United States September 9.

Dedication of the road will be part of the ceremonies marking completion of the Peace Portal, a huge arch built across the highway here to mark the passing of more than 100 years of peace between Canada and the United States. Representatives of the governments of Canada, France and the United States and state and highway officials are expected to attend.

While work is not completed on the Pacific highway, it is believed that by 1925 every foot of the road will be covered by paving. If the work is completed at that time, the highway will be the first transcontinental highway to be paved its entire length.

Work on the road has been under way since 1919, when an improved road length of the coast was advocated, and good roads workers induced the legislatures of the three seaboard states to unite on a program. The highway route was marked and it was agreed that each state should improve the part within its boundaries as rapidly as possible.

A course 176 1/2 miles in length was outlined for the main road and when this summer's paving is complete, about 141 1/2 miles of the road will be hard-surfaced. In California 88 1/2 miles of the highway has been paved. In Oregon the total is 215 1/2. Washington 287 1/2, and in British Columbia 22 1/2.

With the completion of paving now under way, the highway will be paved from Blaine to Bellingham in Washington state. Just south of Bellingham there is an unpaved section, and then paving is found again. It continues through Seattle, Tacoma, Olympia, Centralia and Chehalis and ends south of that town. It begins again north of Vancouver, Wash., and continues to the Columbia river. In Oregon paving begins at the Interstate bridge at Vancouver and extends south through Portland, Salem and Albany. Between Albany and Eugene there will remain an unpaved section after this year's improvement is completed. Between Eugene and Roseburg another section remains without permanent hard-surface.

These two gaps are all that Oregon must close up in 1922 and 1923. Paving yet to be placed.

In California from the state line south to Redding the pavement will remain to be placed after this year. It is now paved between Redding and Red Bluff. From Red Bluff south through Oroville, Sacramento, Stockton, Merced, Madera, Fresno, Bakersfield, Los Angeles and San Diego to Tia Juana, paving, with exceptions not worth mentioning, has already been laid.

The main Pacific highway passes through the capitals of all three of the coast states and through the leading cities with the exception of San Francisco. Typical scenery of the coast lays on each side of the highway in a changing panorama. In its course the road passes from sea level to an altitude of 4522 feet in its pass over the Siskiyou, and then winds its way back to sea level at San Diego. It is seldom out of sight of rugged mountains and goes with in shadows of some of the largest peaks in the nation. From it trails lead to Raintier national park in Washington, Crater Lake national park in Oregon, and Yosemite and Sequoia national parks in California.

Brumfield Arrives At Portland Jail

apparently recalling with difficulty that he has a wife, Brumfield asked Sheriff Starmer if his wife could visit him in the Roseburg jail. When the sheriff answered affirmatively, Brumfield added: "And my boys, too? I have three boys, fine boys, just like stair steps."

As the train approached Portland the prisoner was on the alert, calling the attention of the officers to the Columbia river valley scenery, but whenever reference was made to the crime he became silent.

After arriving in Portland Brumfield told District Attorney Neuner, so the latter informed newspaper men, that Russell was killed while Brumfield was suffering from a loss of memory between Sunday, July 10, and the day of his arrest. He claims he has had only occasional flashes of recollection of what happened during that period.

Box Not Mentioned.—Neuner said that he did not ask Brumfield about the package of women's clothing. However, his general assertion that he is suffering from a mental lapse of all that time until he was captured by the Canadian officers, would cover the shipment of the box, Neuner said. Brumfield told the district attorney that he did not remember anything about his family or who he treated at his office in the three days that elapsed before Russell was killed.

Rumors Are Afloat.—Rumors were circulating around the jail this morning that Brumfield would be kept here either two or three days, while others, equally positive and authentic, were that he would be taken to Roseburg this afternoon. Neuner said that he had not decided this point.

Is at Ease.—While talking to the Douglas county authorities Brumfield seemed perfectly at ease. He gestured easily and his hands did not appear to tremble as he traced endless designs on the table in front of him.

Questioned by Neuner.—Brumfield was questioned by Neuner within view but out of hearing of reporters. After the interview Neuner told the reporters that "Brumfield says with exception of flashes in Portland, Seattle and Vancouver, his mind was an absolute blank from Sunday, July 10, until he awoke yesterday morning and found himself shackled to Webb. Brumfield recalls that on July 10 his boy spilled a lot of buckshot and Brumfield had trouble picking it up. He then became ill and his mind blank. He has hazy recollections of trouble at the boundary line in Blaine."

Neuner said that Brumfield made Thomas Seigel of Canas Valley spent the morning in the city attending to business matters.

no reference to the crime charged against him. The attorney refuses to allow the prisoner to be interviewed, or photographed. He allows nobody to see him. Neuner said Brumfield spoke of suffering mental lapses during his college days similar to that just experienced.

Brumfield told Webb he had suffered pains in the head while a student and to some extent while he lived in Roseburg. When the attacks came he would have to quit work for several days.

"Very obviously his defense will be that he was suffering from a lapse of memory," Neuner told newspaper men.
