ROSEBURG, OREGON, AUGUST 23, 1921.

CURRENT MARKET CONDITIONS.

Business conditions reflect more clearly than a month ago the improvement then under way, though it was then, as now, somewhat obscured by the usual midsummer dullness, in the statement made by leading banking heads through out the nation.

The money markets have now been definitely tested by the early and heavy movement of wheat. By the time the crest of the wheat movement has passed, the cotton crop will be coming on the market.

Although there is plenty of money, the demand for it is heavy and any judgment of the future course of money rates must take account of the inter-relation between bank credit for current producing and merchandizing operations and the requirements for funds for more or less permanent financing.

Conditions in July have all tended to confirm the belief that genuine business improvement is under way. Manufacturers in many lines are sometimes wont to express a sense of discouragement, however, because forward orders are not as heavy as they were during the late period of abnormal business activity.

The fact that building operations have persisted in fair volume in the face of many adverse circumstances, is a most encouraging factor in the general situation. Conditions at the opening of the current building season afforded little hope for an active year.

Although the normal seasonal decline is already being felt, the building activity of the current season is of much significance in justifying a confident expectation in a steady, if slow business recovery. It is a measure of faith in the future.

SCHEME TO "DOLL UP" AMERICAN MEN.

A shoe manufacturer with an eye to the main chance suggested the other day in the course of an address at a gathering of the trade that "through a powerful combination, the shoe maker, the clothes maker, the glove maker and all accessory makers should pool their interests and finance a high-grade campaign that will make American men want to spruce up and dress up."

On the word of this witness, we have it that in matters of dress American men are far below the standard set by the male population in other enlightened countries. If this inattention to dress details were merely a question of our not being able to afford more and better clothes, this maker of shoes would let us go undisturbed on our undress way.

And so he urges his fellow-makers of wearing apparel to dress us up. One may see, he says, more walking sticks daily in London and Paris than can be seen in the whole United States. We care even less for gloves than we do for walking sticks; we care less for silk hats than we do for gloves; we care less for spats than we do for silk hats.

It is extremely annoying to this better-dress advocate that we wear gloves only to keep our hands warm, and that as a rule we carry canes only when venerable and lame. That anyone should wear a pair of last season's shoes is to this manufacturer a direct slap in the face. He is going to set us right at once. This trick is to be accompanied by working on our temperament. It is to be changed to conform more to European models. The speaker did not tell his audience in what part of Europe he has lately traveled to get his information about the better dressed Europeans, whether it was in Vienna or in northern France that he saw fancy spats and silk hats and canes. But his appeals to our temperament will have to be based more solidly on facts if they are to be effective.

However shocking and disconcerting it may be to the foreign better dressed gentry, it is probably true that for the most part the American man's idea of wearing clothes for comfort is a firmly fixed one. He rather suspects that some of the accoutrements with which this dress reformer would weigh him down are hangovers of days which we thought Europeans were trying to leave behind them. But for all that, he will not object to anyone's trying a campaign of temperament changing.

There's all kind of room in Roseburg for reporters with an elastic imagination—and some of them are stretching things to the limit in an effort to spring a new angle.

Why not an effort for a confession? It would make mighty good reading matter, and possibly strike a popular cord among the masses generally.

Again we say, murder will out.

Pastor Accused of Killing Wife

SAN JOSE, Calif., Aug. 22.—To a woman scorned and burning with revenge, the Rev. Joan A. Spencer attributes the fact that he is held in the county jail here charged with the murder of his wife in Lake county. The Rev. Spencer was arrested here Saturday night at the request of Lake county officers who filed a warrant against the minister following the exhumation of the body of the late Mrs. Spencer, who supposedly was drowned in Clear Lake while bathing with her husband on the night of July 26.

The Rev. Spencer charged that a Santa Rosa woman, a friend of his wife, to whom he refused to pay any attention, despite the fact that she came often to his home, spread the stories which aroused suspicion and resulted in the murder charge being brought.

The Rev. Spencer admitted having

By Bert G. Bates

A TALE OF HARD TIMES.

Two gay young frogs, from inland bogs, Had spent the night in drinking. As morning broke and they awoke, While yet their eyes were blinking.

A farmer's pail came to the swale— And caught them quick as twinkling.

'Ere they could gather scattered senses, Or breathe a prayer for past offenses, The granger grave—that guileless man— Had dumped them in the milkman's can.

The can filled up, the cover down, They soon were started off to town.

The luckless frogs began to quake, And sobbed up on cold milk shake, They quickly find their breath will stop Unless they swim up to the top.

They swim for life and kick and swim, Until their weary eyes grow dim. Their muscles ache, their breath grows short And gasping, speaks one weary sport—

"Say, dear old boy, it's pretty tough To die so young, but I've enough Of kicks for life, no more I'll try it, I was not raised on a milk diet."

"Tut, tut, my lad," the other cries, "A frog's not dead until he dies. Let's keep on kicking, that's my plan. We yet may see outside this can."

"No use, no use," faint heart replied, Turning up his toes and gently died.

The brave frog, undaunted still, Kept kicking with a right good will, Until, with joy too great to utter, He found he'd churned a lump of butter.

And climbing on that chunk of grease, He floated round with greatest ease.

MORAL. When times are hard don't fret and frown, Don't get discouraged and go down. But struggle still—no murmur utter— A few more kicks may bring the butter.

Some embryo Prune Picker sneaked in the front door of our dugout yesterday and quietly placed a small slip of paper on our gossip mill. After making a few important changes the poem read as follows:

I once did know a dentist. When he was in his prime Felt victim to "memory lapses" That lead him to commit crime. He skidoos to Calgary. Took a job pushing a plow. He's now in a Roseburg bullpen— His name is Dennis now.

A SUGGESTION. When baby outgrows his rompers, sister can use them for a bathing suit.

If we were some of these young girls we wouldn't wear such short dresses without pulling up our socks.

Those two bootleggers nabbed last night by the officers had two barrels of hooch on their hips—and we don't know how many under their belts.

Watermelon season doesn't always signify extreme happiness—for the young lad who is busily engaged devouring the luscious red fruit knows that school days are close at hand.

A newspaper reporter is always in hot water. If he isn't spelling somebody's name wrong, he is forgetting that Jim Jones left for Podunk on his annual vacation.

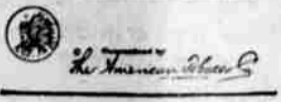

Somehow or other we haven't much sympathy for a bird who is howling about getting sick on spoiled meat. We consumed too much of the canned horse during the late rompus to get all het up over a wee bit of mouthy beef.

Fashion editors state that the women are having their evening gowns and bathing suits cut exactly alike so the sunbunners will fit.

LAFE PERKINS SIZ: "If the world owes us a livin', I'm having a hell of a time collectin' mine."

Delicious! Why? Because it's toasted to seal in the flavor. It's toasted.

some women acquaintances, saying: "Well, I suppose I did go around a bit like other men. It seemed quite the proper thing to do, but I was always happy with my wife."

The Rev. Spencer, who is 49, says his hair has whitened completely since his wife's death.

His wife was Miss Emma Morris of Dayton, Ohio, and they were married in Toledo, Ohio, January 1, 1907.

WILL DELIVER LUMBER. Maynard and Jenks of Glendale will deliver rough or dressed lumber for $20 per 1000.

Co-eds Vary Much From Ideal Woman

IOWA CITY, Iowa, Aug. 23.—(U. P.)—The co-ed, by her own description, is far removed from the characteristics ascribed to the ideal woman, according to statistics compiled at the University of Iowa here.

A questionnaire, arranged by F. R. Knight, professor of philosophy and education, was answered by 75 co-eds. They voted on the relative importance attached to each of 30 different feminine interests, as they thought the "ideal young woman" should regard them, and as they themselves actually did place their interests.

Following are the results of the ballots:

Table with 3 columns: Interest, The Ideal, The 75. Rows include Character, Health, An ideal home, Education, Friends, Social approval, Personal appearance, Studies, Reading, Art, Music, Travel, A business career, Athletics, Magazine, Societies, Domestic Duties, Laughing, Social entertainment, Theater, Sorority, Interest in young men, Sleeping, Eating, Dancing, Movies, Automobile, Dress.

priest has taken the lease on the building and purchased the furnishings, she states.

The St. Francis consists of 24 apartments on the second and third stories of the three-story building at Eighth avenue and Olive street. It is one of the largest and best fitted apartment houses in the city. Mrs. Perdue announces she will conduct the place along the same plan as it has been operated.

The new proprietor has had years of experience in hotel and rooming house business, she says. She has recently been running a confectionery in Roseburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly will leave soon for eastern Oregon where they will attend the Pendleton roundup and visit friends before returning to Eugene, to enter new business, they announce.

BEAUTY AND HEM. PARLORS MOVE.

The Elite Beauty and Hemstitching parlors have moved from the Bell Sisters Bldg. to the Roseburg National Bank Bldg., rooms 9-10-11. Will be open for business Aug. 29. WARNOCK AND DONAHUE.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

APPRECIATES STAND TAKEN.

Editor News-Review: I wish to commend you on your editorial, "Public Sentiment and Crime," in the issue of Aug. 20. How anyone can allow Dr. Brumfield's former high standing to cause them to forget the horrible, cold-blooded brutality with which the crime was planned and executed, is inconceivable.

His cold, remorseless, self-confident, "lapse of memory" plea, is a fitting defense for the crime. One could scarcely expect the perpetrator of such a crime, a beast void of heart or conscience, to break and confess.

We trust that the prosecution of the trial will be conducted as vigorously as the defense. If leniency and consideration are shown the accused, then justice will never be meted out and proud old Douglas county will have to bow her head in shame and disgrace.

Four Boys Lost While On Tour

The Whitney Boys Chorus was minus four of their songsters upon their arrival in Portland last evening. The lads came to this city yesterday afternoon and inquired if transportation could be provided for them to Portland.

They were lost from their party at Grants Pass. The truck, after getting three miles out of the Pass broke down, and had to return to the city for repairs. These four boys were told to walk on, and upon coming to two different roads at a certain point, they took the wrong one.

The truck returned and no boys were to be found. The lads made their way to Glendale, where they were fed and well taken care of. Here the railroad boys took it upon themselves to take the youngsters on into this city. They were safely placed in a refrigerator car and upon arrival were taken in charge by Agnes Pitchford, county juvenile officer. A wire for money was sent immediately and the treasurer of the chorus wired back transportation this morning.

The lads gave their names as Clifford Kempton, Edward Carey, Jim Cartwright and Clarence Miller. They are most congenial and pleasant in their manner and have had lots of fun entertaining during their stay here. They will leave for Portland this afternoon and are most anxious to get home.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN AND OTHERS

BY MRS. ELLSBURY A Daily Column of Questions and Answers Conducted by a Woman Who Knows. Address your Letters to Mrs. Ellsbury, Care Roseburg News-Review.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I am a girl nearly fourteen years old and I am too tall and thin. I look funny in my clothes and my mother said I was so ungainly she could not dress me so that I would look well. Could I do anything to make myself look better? IRENE, Roseburg.

Ans. You are just at the "awkward age," I repeat, and have nothing to worry about. By the time you are fifteen you will begin to gradually outgrow it. Every girl passes through that stage when they are all arms and legs, and their mothers despair of ever getting them to look well in their clothes. If you are tall and thin now, it probably means that you will be a tall, slender girl, and that is the best, I think. You may be more ungainly now than the little, stout girls, but you will be better looking when you are a young lady.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: My lover and I have quarreled and now I want to make up. He is too stubborn to make up. Would he think less of me if I made up first? What would you advise me to do. The quarrel was a foolish one, and we shouldn't quit over anything as small as that. WORRIED GIRL, Glendale.

Ans. If you were in the fault then it is your duty to apologize in a straight forward way. He will think more of you if you do. If it is his fault, then wait for him to make the first move. If you apologize, then let him do the rest. If he is the right kind of a man that will be sufficient.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I have often heard of bean sandwiches and wonder if there really is such a thing. I should think they would be very healthful and economical. If you ever heard of them will you tell me how to make them. HOUSEWIFE, Melrose.

Ans. Bean sandwiches, when properly made, are very good. They are just as you say, healthful and economical. To one can of baked beans thoroughly mashed, add one tablespoon of grated onion and one tablespoon of prepared mustard. Salt and pepper to taste. Spread between slices of buttered brown bread.

Jess Black, a Portland man, appeared before Justice of the Peace George Jones late yesterday and paid a fine of $50 for killing a fawn. The same warden who made the arrest confiscated his gun and revoked his hunting license. PICTURE AHEAD, KODAK AS YOU GO—then, if you want to make good results certain, bring your films to the professional kodak finishers, CLARK'S PHOTO STUDIO, Roseburg National Bank Building.
