

How Far Will Your Dollar Go Today?

What you get for a dollar determines its value. And the secret of economical buying is information. The man or woman who is best informed is the one who buys to best advantage.

Every day this newspaper contains information that you should have in order to increase your buying power. The advertisements are intimate little lessons in economy. They are notices of how—where—when and for what your dollar will go farthest.

This advertising awaits your pleasure. It does not force itself upon you. At your convenience you can study it to learn where to go for the product or service you require—to discover where and how you can buy most easily and to best advantage.

It's a fascinating and worth-while practice to see just how you can make your dollar do its best for you.

The Advertisements will tell you.

State Capital News In Brief

(News-Review Salem Bureau.)
SALEM, Or., Aug. 23.—(Special)—Dr. R. E. L. Steiner, superintendent of the state hospital for the insane, will place before the state board of control shortly a proposition to construct a ward for criminally insane at the state penitentiary.

J. S. Landers, well known western educator, who has held important positions in Oregon, has been chosen by the board of regents of the state normal school at Monmouth as president of the school to succeed the late J. H. Ackerman. The board previously had elected Dr. Fred C. Ayer of Seattle, but he declined.

Governor Olcott has appointed Judge John McCourt of Portland as a member of the state supreme court to succeed Judge Charles A. Johns. Judge Robert S. Tucker, who was first appointed to fill the vacancy, has declined to accept. The appointment of Walter H. Evans, of Portland to fill the vacancy on the circuit court bench in Multnomah county and of Stanley Myers to take Mr. Evans' place as district attorney will stand as first announced.

George A. White, adjutant general and member of the world war veterans' state aid commission, and Lyman G. Rice of Pendleton, also a member of the commission, are visiting American Legion posts through the state.

Members of the civilian rifle team that will represent Oregon at the national shoot at Camp Perry, Ohio, beginning August 27, have been appointed by Governor Olcott as follows:

H. W. McBride, Portland, captain; Edwin D. Whitney of Portland, team coach. Team members—R. D. Archer, W. W. Phillips, James D. Fall, A. Flavius West and A. D. Schmidt, all of Portland; Harry Bowyer of Corvallis, O. Royce of Seaside, William P. Jones of Seaside and from Monitor, M. O. White, Osmer Hastie, Carl Jensen and William Marta.

The Associated Oil company of California has remitted to Secretary of State Koser $20,041.07, covering the tax on its sales of gasoline in Oregon for the month of July. The company sold during the month 965,475 gallons of gasoline and 55,483 gallons of distillate. From the Umatilla county farm bureau the secretary has received $307.78 in taxes covering the sale of 40,239 gallons of gasoline.

The state board of control has awarded contracts for the installation of a new electric passenger elevator in the state capitol and a new electric freight elevator in the supreme court building.

T. B. Handley, state corporation commissioner, has announced that unpaid license fees of corporations operating in Oregon are now delinquent and that interest will be charged at 6 per cent.

Frank C. Bramwell, state superintendent of banks, has completed liquidation of the Yoncalla State bank, which was closed in February, 1915.

Douglas County Taxpayers' league is making an effort to eliminate the county educational board and the school supervisory system, according to the information reaching the office of airplane forestry patrol in Oregon.

J. A. Churchill, state superintendent of schools.

Proceedings have been filed with the supreme court by the grievance committee of the Lane County Bar association of Leon R. Edmundson of Eugene. His whereabouts is unknown to Lane county authorities, who want him on a charge of violating the prohibition law.

Construction of the new state training school for boys will be deferred until spring, so that weather will not interfere with the building work after it has been started.

Attorney Chris Schuebel of Oregon City, has filed with the supreme court a bill of costs relative to the Hawley divorce suit of Oregon City. The cost of the appeal was $1483.80.

George C. Wimer, Southern Pacific clerk and H. A. Tibbitts, Southern Pacific agent at Myrtle Creek, have placed before Governor Olcott their claim to a portion of the reward offered for the capture of Dr. R. M. Brumfield of Roseburg, suspected of the murder of Dennis Russell. They gave information concerning a package that was shipped to Brumfield from Myrtle Creek to Seattle on July 13.

O. R. Hoff, state treasurer, has delivered to the United States National bank in Portland state highway bonds aggregating $2,000,000. They were sold at a recent meeting of the state board of control, bringing $2,007,828.

According to a report of T. A. Rafferty, chief state traffic inspector, representatives of the department during July traveled 10,847 miles, visited 163 towns and cities and were responsible in returning to the department license and other fees aggregating $1273. Fines during the month resulting from their activities totalled $7584.80.

The Shell Oil company of California has remitted to the secretary of state $5476.81, covering the tax on the company's sales of gasoline and distillate during July. A check for $77,711.78, covering a similar tax has been received from the Standard Oil company.

Because of the lack of available airplanes, the state forestry department is considering abandoning the information reaching the office of airplane forestry patrol in Oregon.

Alicia Hammerly - A Woman Who Wouldn't Remarry

By Miss McClure Gilman

MR. LARRABEE, ATTORNEY
As none of the maids were in the town apartment, I opened the door myself.

"I am Mr. Larrabee. Is this Mrs. Benton?" said a very kindly looking middle-aged gentleman.

"No, I am Mrs. Hammerly, Mrs. Benton's sister."

"I would like very much to see Mrs. Benton."

Without waiting for me, Bab made her appearance. "I am Mrs. Benton, Mr. Larrabee. You have business with me?"

"Yes madame. Mr. Benton sent me."

"Oh, it is something that he wants."

"No, Mrs. Benton. I gathered from your husband's conversation that it is not he but you who wish a divorce."

"Isn't it rather strange, Mr. Larrabee, that Mr. Benton should send his lawyer to me?"

"Not strange at all Mrs. Benton. Your husband asked me to see you and attempt to make a reconciliation. He is perfectly willing to cry 'perceval.'"

"Oh, he is willing to say, 'have sinners,' is he?"

"Ver, Mrs. Benton, and being willing to make atonement, is forgiveness for him not to be found in your heart?"

"No, I am very sorry but I expect that I am harder than most women. I do not think that Mr. Benton would forgive me under the same circumstances."

"Oh, I am quite sure that he would, Mrs. Benton. The errand upon which he has sent me here shows that."

"Well, you may go to him and tell him that you have been unsuccessful."

"I am very sorry, Mrs. Benton. Bab was silent."

"This is your unalterable decision?"

"Yes."

"Then Mr. Benton has empowered me to make you another proposition. He will not in any way contest your divorce and he wishes me to say to you that he has made, or will make immediately upon my return, an all-mo allowance to you of a hundred dollars a week."

I looked at Bab to see what she was going to do. It seemed to me that she must waver under such generosity as this.

From her face I saw that she was not going to yield. Her indignation had resolved itself into a mere case of stubbornness. For a moment, I confess I had no patience for her, and then, thinking of the long years ahead, the long years of loneliness—loneliness that would have always sting of gossip and scandal about it instead of the kindly condolence of friends—I made one more effort to make her change her mind.

"Oh, Bab, won't you wait until tomorrow? Remember this is irrevocable after you have filed your papers. You know you have promised me to wait until tomorrow."

"I promised you to wait until tomorrow before I filed my papers, but I want Mr. Larrabee and Mr. Benton also, to understand that I am only waiting because I have made that promise. You can tell Mr. Benton for me that I will accept the money which he has tendered me because I feel that it is due me and you can also say to him that I will send my attorney to him tomorrow."

"That will be unnecessary, Mrs. Benton. Mr. Benton wished me to prepare your case for you, provided you desired it."

"Thank you very much, Mr. Larrabee. That will be satisfactory to me."

"Then I will bid you goodbye. Thoroughly disheartened, I left Bab without a word. I knew that she did not understand in any way the great importance of the step she was taking. For the first time I realized that she had always been a girl who had stubbornly carried out her own ideas to the end. She had wanted to marry Duane Benton, and she had married him. And now she had said she was going to divorce Duane Benton, and she was going to do so.

In a few minutes she came to the door of the nursery, where I had fled, and said: "Do you not think, Alice, that we had better go back to the shore? There is nothing to eat here in the apartment and I do not feel like showing myself in any of the restaurants."

"I guess that will be best," I acquiesced.

Silently we went down to where the motor had been standing all the day in front of the apartment. Fortunately, we saw no one.

And again we hardly spoke as we returned to our shore cottage. The sun was setting in unworldly splendor. The whole earth was bathed in crimson and gold. But after the events of the afternoon it seemed to me that everything should be dull and gray.

Again I had that awful feeling that has come over me every time I have passed through a great crisis—the feeling of the implacability of nature. I have never been able to gain sympathy from the great mother. Poets have sung of her great compassion for the woes of humanity, but to me, while she is not merciless, she is utterly indifferent to either the woes or joys of man.

Lila Lee, the charming Paramount film actress, is becoming more popular with each new screen appearance. She has an exceptionally fine role in support of Thomas Meighan in "The Easy Road," which comes to the Majestic theater tonight, and her performance stamps her as an actress of exceptional power and ability.

Mr. Meighan has the role of a sailor-novelist who marries a rich woman and finding himself on easy street, neglects his work and becomes a drone. Lila Lee, as Ella Klutz, is saved by the novelist and this meeting results in his regeneration and reunion with his estranged wife. There are numerous strong situations in the story. Gladys George is leading woman. Tom Forman directed the picture.

Bids will be received until noon, Aug. 30th, by the clerk of school district No. 75, for the remodeling and repairing of Bellview school house. Specifications for this work can be obtained from the office of County Supt. of Schools O. C. Brown, or from the clerk of district No. 75. (Signed) Lora M. Kester, Clerk, Dist. No. 75.

Movie Closeups

Real gowns from the skilled hands of Parisian couturiers displayed by a dozen mannikins are an important feature in "Sheltered Daughters," the Realart production with Justine Johnston, which will show at the Antlers tonight.

These gowns, 1921 summer and fall models, are described as the very latest word in fashionable feminine attire. A special set was constructed to represent the establishment of a Fifth Avenue modiste, where much of important action of the picture takes place. It is in this smart setting that the heroine, played by Miss Johnstone, is transformed from an unattractive, poorly clad girl to a beautiful young woman, stylish and captivating. Such a display of fashionable garments as this has seldom been presented in pictures, it is declared.

The elite of Sinna Ferry had foregathered in honor of the "day-out" of Montana Rivers—"That Girl Montana." It was the happiest moment of Tana's life—it meant that she was recognized as respectable. Then came the thunderbolt!

"What're you doing among decent people? Main street's the dead line for women like you! You traveled around dressed as a boy, with a lowdown crook and now you aim to horn in with respectable folks!"

This is one of the gripping, tense and dramatic moments in "That Girl Montana," Blanche Sweet's newest Jesse D. Hampton-Pathe feature, showing at the Liberty theater tonight. It is a picturization of Marah Ellis Ryan's novel of the same name and relates the terrific struggle of a girl to overcome the stigma of sins of which she was innocent. The action of the story takes place in Montana, along the Kootenai river at the

New Suits Vary Their Charms

THE new suits for fall have arrived in force and in variety and now it remains to be seen just which of the new styles will be so cordially received that they will develop into fashions. Apparently manufacturers have made a valiant effort to please everyone and the salient features of their offerings are these: the introduction of several types of suits and the variation of these types.

An inspection of the new models shows that skirts remain practical and plain. The much heralded longer skirt is really here, but it is only slightly longer than conservative skirts of the passing season. The length of coats shows the greatest variation, because of the different types of suits which designers have used as a starting point, but the general tendency, so far, is in favor of those from finger tip to knee-length. The straight line silhouette has the confidence of designers and the new models are uniformly smart. In sleeves and in collars we are presented with a variety of developments; some of the collar are quite large and are often made natural fur. They may be worn or fastened up high so that the snugness into them. There are sleeves and bell sleeves, plenty of trimming—some fringes, and rich broderie of silk and braid. Many include—for the less elaborate styles—tricotine serge, polart twill, and dresser models, soft finished wool and very rich looking fabrics of made lish.

A suit of tricotine is shown in picture. Its lines are excellent and ingeniously arranged and the length both the skirt and coat may be taken as authoritative. The coat is made interesting by inset plaits across the back and by the new type of combable collar. Embroidery and silk combined make the decoration.

Tells His Friends and Neighbors of His Experience.

Every Roseburg resident should read what Mr. Neuner says, and follow his example. He has used Doan's Kidney Pills and speaks from experience. Is there any need to experiment with imitations or untried kidney medicines?

Geo. Neuner, 730 Mosher St., Roseburg, says: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as a reliable remedy. I used them when my kidneys troubled me and they promptly relieved me. I had a soreness and full aching across my back that made it hard for me to stoop. My kidneys acted irregularly, too. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills helping others and used them as directed. They relieved me of the aches and pains."
