May Have Committed Crime To Avoid Disgrace

were extinguished, enough evidence was left to show that the body was not that of Dr. Brumfield and that someone, undoubtedly the doctor, had murdered Dennis Russell.

Made His Getaway.
 Although failing in his murder plans, Dr. Brumfield was very successful in escaping from this state and country. His plans for escape, which had evidently been laid before the crime was committed, were followed to the letter. They were so thorough that the officers were baffled for a time, but again the inevitable "hitch" in the proceedings occurred, and Dr. Brumfield was nabbed on a ranch near the little Canadian village of Midsnapore.

Mysterious Package Appears.
 The day prior to the crime, July 12th, Dr. Brumfield expressed a package from the Myrtle Creek express office to Seattle, under the alias of "Norman Whitney." He tried to express it to Banff, but the express agent was not informed concerning the rates and he was compelled to send it to Seattle.

It is said that the officers have complete information concerning this mysterious package but such information has not been divulged. At any rate, it was this selfsame package that caused Dr. Brumfield to be captured. When he wrote to the Seattle express office for it from the Canadian town where he was staying, the officers at once placed the Royal Northwest Mounted Police on his trail, and within a short time Dr. Brumfield, alias "Norman Whitney," was resting in a jail awaiting the arrival of the Roseburg officers. This package, which contained women's apparel, will have much to do with the case. Just why Dr. Brumfield wanted this package cannot be satisfactorily explained. Some believe that he was anxious to secure the women's clothes for the purpose of disguising himself. Perhaps he planned to appear before the passport officials as a woman and to have his picture taken in that disguise. It is known that Brumfield was preparing to secure passage on a steamship bound for Australia.

Mysterious Woman Again.
 Again the mysterious woman enters the case. The pink skirt found in the package was said to have been purchased from the Burchard store on July 13th by some "strange woman." Dr. Brumfield was never seen with his woman but he appeared in the Burchard store at the time she was making the purchase and ask of Mrs. Burchard for "an empty box." When he was directed to the rear of the store, the doctor smiled and nodded a greeting to the mysterious woman. This woman has not been located.

Another Woman in Case.
 The woman who purchased the pink skirt was but one of the women in the case. When Dr. Brumfield reached Canada he journeyed to Lake Louise, where he remained for some time. He registered at a hotel there, the officers state. At Lake Louise Dr. Brumfield met another woman, named Grace Killian. Grace Killian was employed as a chambermaid in the hotel, and when the Canadian police found the letter in Brumfield's possession, which had been received by him from the woman, they at once telegraphed to the manager of the hotel at Lake Louise and made inquiries. The manager informed the police that Grace Killian had been in the employ of the hotel there over a year and that Dr. Brumfield, alias Norman Whitney, had met her there during his time in Lake Louise. Evidently the two were very intimate, but it is the old story of a man's weakness for woman, and it is not believed that Brumfield was acquainted with the Killian woman before his time of arrival at Lake Louise. The Canadian officers have Grace Killian ready to return here for the trial in the event the officers request it.

Grace Killian refuses to comment on her relations with Brumfield, or Norman Whitney as she knew him, but it is not believed that she had anything to do with the murder. It was at first thought that perhaps it was she who had purchased the pink skirt, but the fact that she had been employed for over a year in Lake Louise did not substantiate such beliefs.

Always Appeared Normal.
 All during the trial, Dr. Brumfield declares, he was suffering a lapse of memory, yet those who talked with him said that he appeared normal with the exception of taking the attitude of a "hunted man." If Brumfield intends to maintain his loss of memory plea he will be forced to answer many embarrassing questions. He states that everything is a blank following the Sunday before the crime, July 10th. Prior to that date, however, he wrote to a Canadian steamship company requesting information regarding passports, sailing dates, etc., for Australia. He has not yet explained such actions and Mrs. Brumfield professes ignorance of such letters. But the letters are in existence and will be introduced as evidence at the trial.

Memory Quickly Restored.
 When Brumfield was captured on the ranch in Canada, he at first told the arresting officers that his name was Norman Whitney, but when told that "they had the dope on him," he confessed his identity and thrust his hands forward ready to receive the handcuffs. All of this time, he declares, he was suffering from the lapse of memory, yet he could remember well enough to give his correct name when he saw that his ruse to shield himself under another name had failed. Then when placed in a cell to await the arrival of Sheriff Starmer and Deputy Webb,

BARGAIN IN HOME.

he gave out an interview to the effect that he was willing to return without a fight and to "face it all." Several days later when Starmer and Webb arrived and entered the jail in which Brumfield was kept, Deputy Webb said, "Why, hello Doc." Brumfield raised up on his cot and looked at the deputy and said, "I'm not Doc, my name is Dennis Russell." The deputy answered, "Sure you're Dennis Russell, you're just the man we want. You're wanted for murder in Roseburg." At this unexpected reply from the deputy, Brumfield practically acknowledged defeat of his plan. From all appearance he attempted to try several "gags" but finally while on the train near Hood River he announced his "lapse of memory" and since then has adhered to that story very closely. He says the last thing he remembers is picking up some buckshot for his boy on Sunday, July 10th. He says his memory up to that time was all right, but when questioned concerning the letter to the steamship company he refuses to answer.

Inquired About Auto.
 While on his way to Roseburg in the custody of the Douglas county officials, Brumfield did not talk much concerning the case, although he had been told of the details connected with the crime charged against him.

One evening, however, as the train was speeding southward, Brumfield suddenly turned in his car seat and asked one of the officers the following question:
 "How about my automobile, was it damaged much?"
 The officer was quite surprised at the question but quickly answered: "No, not very much, Doc. We just turned it over in the road and attached a rope to it and pulled it in. It wasn't burned so badly."
 Brumfield turned and gazed thru the car window for some length of time. Suddenly he faced the officer again and inquired:
 "Was my gun destroyed?"
 "Yes," answered the officer, "your gun was a total wreck. It was burned to pieces."
 Brumfield then remained silent for some time.

Elkton Boy Is Killed For Deer
 Jesse J. Scott, 16-year-old Elkton boy was instantly killed about noon yesterday when he was shot for a deer by H. R. Levison, motorcycle patrolman from Portland.
 The boy, in company with his half brother, Walter Haynes, and H. R. Levison, left Elkton early yesterday morning on a hunting trip in the mountains. At the time of the accident they were about seven miles from Elkton. Haynes was walking up a canyon, while Levison and Scott were going up the ridge about thirty yards apart, separated by thick colored hat.
 Levison thought that Scott was some distance ahead of him along the ridge and hearing the brush rustling close beside him, fired quickly. The bullet penetrated the brain, so close to the top of the head, that according to coroner Ritter, if it had been one-fourth inch higher it would have missed him entirely.
 Being in a very rough country, the body was left, while Haynes and Levison came to Elkton for help. Coroner Ritter was notified, and left at once. The body was carried in by lantern light last night over seven miles of rough mountain trail. It will be buried late this afternoon at Scottsburg.
 Coroner Ritter says it was purely accidental, and that the blame could be placed on no one. Mr. Levison is very much broken up over the affair. He is paying all expenses of burial.

Leslie Tooze Be Buried At Eugene
 EUGENE, Or., Aug. 25.—The body of Leslie O. Tooze, graduate of the University of Oregon, who was killed in the Meuse-Argonne campaign September 28, 1918, has arrived in Hoboken, N. J., according to word received here, and will be brought to Eugene for burial about September 3. Leslie Tooze is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Tooze, of Salem, and a twin brother of Lamar Tooze, also a graduate of the University of Oregon. Lamar Tooze has gone to Hoboken to escort the body to Eugene. Funeral services with full military honors, will be accorded the Oregon man it is understood. Leslie Tooze was first buried at the shell torn village of Eclisfontaine with a military funeral.
 Later the body was removed to Romagne cemetery, the largest American cemetery in foreign lands and now it will be brought to his native country and laid to rest near the school where he spent the earlier years of young manhood.
 Leslie Tooze held the rank of first lieutenant at the time of his death in No. Man's Land. He was a member of Company K, 264th infantry of the 91st division. He was killed on the 31st day of his arrival in France. At the time of his enlistment, Leslie Tooze was a student at Harvard law school, along with his twin brother.

PRIDE OF ROSEBURG URGED BY PORTLAND AD CLUB MAN
 At the banquet held a few weeks ago in Roseburg, Eric V. Hauser of the Portland Ad Club presented the Douglas County Concert Band with a gift of $50. Mr. A. T. Lawrence wrote to him in behalf of the band, thanking him for the gift. This morning Mr. Lawrence received the following letter in reply:
 "Your letter of August 16th received and I sincerely thank you for the kind words of appreciation and assure you that what I did came from the heart, as I realize that in order to have a successful band, it calls for a great deal of self-sacrifice and civic pride.
 "I realize fully the wonders of nature that are in our great northwest and how wonderfully we are blessed with the climate and soil, but without the mind of man these wonders of nature cannot be developed, and therefore one of the most interesting things to me is to watch the development of towns and cities. Irrigation projects and road building.
 "No city can grow unless the citizens are willing to make sacrifices and I feel sure that every one of you will get your reward through the knowledge that you are helping to make Roseburg and the surrounding country a better and happier place to live in.
 "Wishing you continued success, I am,
 Sincerely yours,

BRUMFIELD IS SILENT.
 Playing "500" and reading fiction occupied Dr. Brumfield's time today in the prison cell where he is being kept awaiting trial. He refused to greet Sheriff Starmer this morning when that official appeared early for the meal basket. Brumfield had just awakened and was preparing to build a fire. The other two prisoners were still asleep.
 The band concert and singing held in the courthouse yard last night was enjoyed immensely by Brumfield, it was said. The doctor is a great lover of music and during the singing last night he hummed softly the old time melodies on the program.
