Little Hal came running toward me, trying in his boylsh way to tell me the events of the day. And among other things he said: "Auntie Hab cwied and cwied."

"Why, Hal where did you see me crying?"

"Down by the water."

"He means at the stone seat near the sea wall." explained Haanah.

Bab looked self-conscious, but did not deny what Hal had said.

"Oh, I guess I was bored with—" labs stopped abruptly.

"Are you tired of it here, Bab?" I asked, ignoring the word "bored" which I knew was taboo.

"Yet, let's go back to the city. Do you intend to stay in New York this winter, Alix?"

"No, I think we had better rent our apartment, and I am going to

"Oh. I can't go home just now, Alix. I couldn't face mother."

"Bab, have you been writing to her as though Duane were with us?"

Bab nodded miserbly.

"I don't think it quite fair. It will be a great shock to them."

"Oh. Alix. I don't know how to tell them. They have always loved Duane. It will break their hearts. I will bet you tell them when you go home."

"Where will you go in the mean-

"I don't know. Perhaps I will stay at the apartment. Alix, I don't think I can stand this uncertainty much longer."

"Uncertainty of what?"
"Of my divorce."
"Why, my dear, I thought you were just as certain of that as you might be of death and taxes."
"I guess I am, but I wish I could hurry it up and get the ordeal over."
"If it will make you feel better, dear, I will tell you that I learned for the city that your case will come up the first of the week."
"Did you see Duane?"
There was an eager note in her

Woman Who Wouldn't Remarry

By Idah McGloss Gibon

I met Bab that night with almost a Judas feeling. I know that she would have felt hurt had soc known where I had been during the day, but fortunately she seemed to have no curiosity about my visit to the city. I wanted to tell her that I knew that her divorce was coming up very soon, but I did not know how to do it without explaining that I had seen Dusne.

Little Hal came running toward me, trying in his boyish way to tell me the events of the day. And among other things he said: "Auntie Bab ewied and cwied."

Work I had not heard since Dusne and she had parted.

"Yes, I saw him."

"How is he looking?"

"Not as well as you do."

"What do you mean by that?"

I mean that he seems to be taking the separation much harder than you are."

"He should take it harder. It is the result of his misdemeanors."

Bab's continued intolerance so infuriated me that for the first time since Duane and she had parted.

of divorces in this country result not so much from the vices of men as because women ask for more than human virtues in the men they marry. I have lost all faith in the divinity of sex. I scarce can find one who can understand that 'to err is human, to forgive divine!' They seem to say 'I shall forgive nothing even if I pull down the sacred edifice of home about my head.'"

BETTER FACILITIES PLANNED AT O. A. C.

CORVALLIS, Aug. 28,-"Better cilities than ever before for caring or students at O. A. C. have been provided by the college and the cititens of Corvallis," said H. T. Vance chairman of the housing committee The new dormitory for women will are for more students than both the older halls, Waldo and Cauthorn. Thirteen sororities have their own homes. Many women live with parents and other relatives down town. Also a few women may, with faculty permission, be granted the right to live in private families. Several new houses have been acquired this summer for men's fraternities. These, with the former houses, clubs, and campus dormitory for men, will care for 1500 men, leaving a fewer number than usual to seek homes with town families. Corvallis has built 75 new homes this year, many of them arranged to accommodate students. All homes offering living accommodations for students are being listed by the housing committee and ranked according to merit into one of four classes.
