Mr. Black stated that they made excellent jams and jellies, and in case no better name was found he would call them "Oregon" prunes. Some samples were brought to this office today and pronounced the best ever.

that door open all night." Dr. Brumfield told Deputy Hopkins yesterday. "I have no desire to escape from here."

The officers, however, are not taking the prisoner's word for this and are taking every precaution to see that he is not allowed the least bit of liberty. The night guard on the jail will be maintained and Mrs. Brumfield's visits with her husband will be very limited. She is not allowed in the cell now and is compelled to talk to Brumfield through the bars. During their recent visits there has been no show of affection. The doctor always asks about his three boys first. Their meetings, which at first were sad and tearful, have changed. They talk about common everyday subjects, about their life in Indiana and other family affairs.

Sleeps Fine at Night

Dr. Brumfield sleeps fine at night and eats hearty meals. The jail food which he recently declared as "coarse" is very welcome to him now since his wife was denied the privilege of furnishing extra delicacies. Mrs. Brumfield supplied the jailer with some money to purchase any extra food which Brumfield may desire.

Awaiting Trial Date

Reedsport In Prosperous Condition

Mr. Walker states that the work of rebuilding the planting mill recently destroyed by fire is almost completed. The plant will be able to furnish employment for about 40 men. Two of the Reedsport sawmills are in operation and a third was scheduled to open up again today. It is believed that the mills will be able to continue work all winter. Mr. Walker says that the Reedsport people are anxious to see the dredging out of the inner harbor to a sufficient depth to permit the large lumber schooners to load, which will result in the mills operating to full capacity, as they will be able to ship lumber by way of the Panama canal at a rate much cheaper than is charged for railroad transportation.

Farm Boy Holds Important Office

EDMONTON, Alta., Sept. 8.—(By United Press.)—Herbert Greenfield, elected to head the political party of the United Farmers of Alberta when it defeated the existing provincial government and who will become premier of Alberta when the next parliament sits, is a city boy who has made good on the farm. His career is a romance of the soil. Greenfield was born in Winchester, England, fifty-two years ago. When 23, he came to Canada. Though he had neither capital nor rural experience, he determined to become a farmer. He hired out as a farm hand in Ontario. When he had accumulated a little money and experience, he bought a farm. Stories of bonanza farming on the prairie came to him and, selling out, he trekked to Alberta in 1905 and homesteaded a farm. He lived in a dugout. He had little more than health, a plow and a team of horses. He worked from dawn to dark. In a few years a mansion had supplanted the sod hut. A village of barns, granaries and outhouses grew up about the place. His pastures were filled with cattle, sheep and hogs. His cultivated lands extended to the horizon. The poor settler had become a rich and influential farmer. Now that he has been chosen for practically the highest honor the province has to bestow, friends declare the qualities that made him a successful farmer will make him a successful statesman.

Auditing Committee Files Report

A meeting of the directors of the Taxpayers League was held yesterday afternoon for the purpose of hearing the report of the auditing committee. A meeting of the entire membership of the league will be held in the near future for the purpose of hearing the report on the work accomplished and considering new plans. The report submitted by the auditing committee was as follows:

"To the board of directors of the Taxpayers League of Douglas county, Oregon: "We, your committee on county expenditures report that we have examined the bills allowed by the county court at the August term thereof and we find that some bills were allowed for expenses of certain county officers in excess of what we understand the law allows. Some of these bills have been allowed from a misunderstanding of the law and in some cases the court claims that it has been the custom of the court for a long time past to allow similar excess charges. We have remonstrated with the county court against allowing any compensation to officers or employees in excess of what the law provides. In other words, where the law has fixed the compensation the county court cannot legally allow any sum in excess of statutory provisions. In all cases where compensations are left to the discretion of the county court they should be fair to the employee and at the same time protect the taxpayer. "Your committee in examining the county expenditures have had no power to correct anything except by suggestions and recommendations to the county court. We have not done this in a spirit of fault-finding but have called the attention of the court to overcharges and other matters where the county expenses may be curtailed. Your committee will ask through the district attorney and the attorney general, an opinion as to the application of Chapter 85, General Laws of Oregon, session of 1921, amending Sec. 3511, Laws of Oregon, relating to payment of salaries to county officers. We will also refer the question, 'Can a county court be held financially responsible for allowing claims in excess of the amount fixed by law?'"

"Respectfully submitted, "GEORGE W. RIDDLE, "S. D. EVANS."

Time For Peach Blight Spray

"Peach blight disease is very common on peach trees in Douglas county, and is doing a great deal of damage to the trees as well as to the fruit," says Fruit Inspector Armstrong. "It reduces the bearing capacity of the trees very much, and in some instances it destroys the trees entirely. Apricot trees are also very subject to this disease and should be sprayed the same as peach trees. "All peach and apricot trees that show any indication of the disease should be sprayed, according to the instructions given in the following article which was written by Prof. H. P. Barks of the Oregon Experiment station at Corvallis, and printed in the Oregon Growers last year. The Bordeaux spray that is to be applied now should be 4-4-50 strength. The October spray should be 6-6-50 strength."

Peach Blight. The peach blight starts in its cutting work with the early fall rains. Consequently we should spray at that time, at least before the early fall rains, in order to start protection against the peach blight fungus. This should be supplemented by another spray along about the middle or latter part of October to keep up the protection during the winter. The peach blight works during the winter just as the apple tree anthracnose does, and the peach blight also works during the spring and summer, which apple tree anthracnose does not do. The peach blight, if we can get it under control during the fall and winter, however, will give almost no trouble, or very much less trouble during the succeeding spring and summer. The work of the peach blight fungus that is most destructive is its attack on the buds which are formed this summer for the foliage and fruit of the next season. It gets in there when the buds are in healthy condition the latter part of the summer, then the fungus attacks them and it is pretty nearly winter time before
