SUNDAY AT THE CHURCHES.

International Bible Students Association—Moose Hall, corner Jackson and Washington streets—Subject for Study Sunday at 3 p. m., "The Hope of the Jews." Do we see evidence of their return to Palestine? What wonder part are they soon to play in the establishment of God's Kingdom throughout the earth. This is an intensely interesting subject at the present time. Opportunity is given all to ask questions. The public is cordially invited.

Christian, corner Pine and Woodward streets, Rev. C. H. Hilton, Minister. On Sunday morning the church will observe, "Go to School Sunday." The minister will give a social sermon to students, the subject being, "Some Secrets of Success." All students are invited, and especially those who are going away to school. In the evening the pastor will speak again and the subject for the evening sermon will be, "Drifting." There will be baptismal services at the close of the evening sermon. Stirring music. A cordial invitation is extended the public to attend these services.

First Baptist Church, corner Lane and Rose streets, H. L. Caldwell minister. Church school at 9:45. Superintendent O. P. Coshaw urges all who have been interested in the school to remember that the fall program is now being made and that both ne wand old pupils should be finding their places for the coming months. Strangers are made to feel at home. 11 o'clock morning worship. This service will be especially for ranchers. All ranchers and their families are cordially invited. If the harvest time stirs emotions of gratitude and adoration in your heart you will enjoy this service. The pastor will have a harvest-time message. Strangers and visitors are welcome. 7 o'clock, Young People's Meeting. A place for social and Christian fellowship for all young people. The meetings are growing in interest and in numbers. High school students both of Roseburg and those who have come here to go to school are especially invited. It is a good place to get acquainted with some of the best young people. The subject for discussion is, "How to Make the Most of Our Bibles." 8 o'clock, evening worship. Message by the pastor. The service is short each Sunday evening. There is no better way of closing the Lord's day than to be in His house of worship. The pastor is glad to announce that his wife and baby have arrived.

Presbyterian Church, Jackson and Lane streets, E. W. Warrington, minister. The church wants to help you live up to your highest ideals. She seeks to strengthen your purpose to give your children a sound, religious foundation. Won't you come to church and Sunday School? 9:45 a. m., the Bible study hour. We are looking forward to October 2. It will be Rally day. All those who have been out of Sunday School during the summer should try to get back as early in September as possible. 11 a. m., the morning worship. We are glad to welcome all strangers to the services of the church. We hope that those members of the church and congregation who have been absent for a few Sundays will soon be in their places again. 7 p. m., the Christian Endeavor. The subject is "How to Make the Most of Our Bibles." This should be an interesting and helpful subject. Miss Edna Perrin is the leader. 8 p. m., the evening preaching service. We endeavor to make this service evangelistic, presenting the claims of Christ in song and story. Promise your Master that you will attend the evening service of the church regularly during this fall and winter.

M. E. Church—St. Louis Albert Banks will have charge of the services morning and evening, during the absence of the regular pastor, who has been called to the bedside of his brother, who is ill at Portland. The regular services will be held, Sunday School at 9:45 a. m. and Epworth League at 7 p. m. Special music will be given at the regular morning and evening service.

A marriage license was issued this morning to Frank H. Madison of Kellogg and Edith Ruden of Roseburg.

Mrs. B. B. Richter of Camas Valley was in town today transacting business.

If Plans to Sell Broccoli

is a great jump from the time when "Grandpa" Winston sold his "freak cauliflower" on the Roseburg market.

Field for Expansion. Still, however, broccoli is in the experimental stage. Out of the hundreds of acres of broccoli land in Douglas county, only 300 acres will be devoted to that crop next year. Yet those 300 acres will return fully $100,000 to the growers if the price is up to this year's standard, and present indications are that it will be much better than this year.

The coming crop is to be the biggest ever produced in Douglas county. One season Douglas county shipped out 88 carloads. Last year there were 54 carloads forwarded to the eastern market. This year it is estimated there will be approximately 200 carloads.

Several New Growers. Last year there were 30 growers in the industry. This year there are 40 growers, representing 300 acres. For the first time individual growers are taking up big tracts. Formerly ten acres composed a big tract for one man. This year, however, growers are making a major proposition and are going into the business on a much bigger scale. Harry Winston has what is believed to be the largest broccoli tract in the state. He has put 50 acres of the Frank Landers place into this crop. Foster Butler, one of the pioneer growers, has 60 acres in broccoli. This shows that the industry is being looked upon as a better commercial investment and if these men are successful in their work, next year will undoubtedly see a wonderful increase.

Market Looks Good. The market looks good. Broccoli is yet too new a vegetable to be a drone on the market. The demand in the east is so great that the price is bound to remain good. Suitable land and climate for growing broccoli is limited and consequently there is little opportunity for the market to become overcrowded. New York restaurants particularly make a specialty of broccoli in season and the entire crop of this state can be easily sold in New York without lowering the price or lessening the demand. The best price ever received by the growers was $2.25, which was paid several years ago for the old size crates which were somewhat larger than those now in use. $1.25 was the average price paid this year, and it is expected that next year's price will be better than that paid this spring.

Some Drawbacks. The broccoli industry, however, is not all a bed of roses. There are some drawbacks. Based on a percentage of 100 per cent, the coming crop is at the present time only about 30 per cent perfect, according to the estimates of experts. This is caused largely by aphids, which are doing considerable damage. No satisfactory method has yet been found to combat the aphid. Growers have managed to control them to a certain degree by dipping the plants before planting and by frequent sprayings with Black Leaf 40. Statistics on the rapidity with which aphids multiply look like tabulated data on the distance to Orion, and growers have found it impossible to completely check the aphid. There is a great need for some spray, or other aphicide which will hold this pest in check and when this is discovered there will be a decided reduction in the amount of loss to the growers. There is always a danger of loss because of weather conditions. Broccoli grows during the summer, fall and winter months and ripens in February and March. A severely cold winter will cause a great deal of damage and the amount of moisture also has a decided bearing.

Douglas County Favored. As a result of these peculiarities Douglas county is one of the very few places where broccoli can be grown to advantage. The extreme cold winter of 1919-20 proved this fact beyond all doubt. The Willamette Valley lost its crop completely, because of the extreme cold. Douglas county crop, although badly damaged, still brought considerable profit. Other sections of the state can produce broccoli and in many seasons will be able to compete with Douglas county, but over a period of time Douglas county will be outstandingly in the lead as the climatic moisture and soil conditions are ideal, and it is very seldom that there is any weather of sufficient severity to cause any material loss.

It is very evident that within a few years Douglas county will become the national center for the production of broccoli, in spite of all efforts to win this distinction away. It now becomes the task to establish Douglas county as the national market for broccoli and there is no doubt but that this will be satisfactorily accomplished.

Growers Organizing. The growers are now working upon plans for organization. This will be a great forward step and will result in much growth in the business. The need for organization is apparent, when one is conversant with the problems which confront the broccoli growers. The principal topic now before the growers is that of marketing and cash or commission selling, but there are soon to be other problems and beyond all doubt the organization will form itself into an association to promote the broccoli industry in Douglas county and to make it one of the big profit returning products of this section of the state.

Here's Opening News of Coming Sells-Floto Circus

Only papers in cities played by Sells-Floto circus during the last two years will print this year, friendly readers. It takes a city editor and a copy desk that have seen "Poodles" Hanneford, the riding Hannefords and the Sells-Floto performance since the big western circus started its annual spring openings in the Chicago Coliseum to stand for this frankness on the part of the show's press department.

Of course, here and there will be a chap who will risk it, knowing, as all city editors know, that the second largest show on earth has long since gotten over amateurish exaggeration. But it goes back—does this year—to the time that Sells-Floto, coming to Roseburg on Friday, September 23, was founded by combination of the old Sells circus and the great Otto Floto shows, the greatest two car troupes that ever claimed to have twenty.

They tackled Otto's two cars onto the famous Sells trains and exclaimed: "Here's a circus of the west, by the west and for the west." They held onto this policy for ten years, but the show got too big for 'em. It had to take in the continent to progress, to get its breath. Then came the Chicago openings and performances that made circus history. And what a circus! With the renowned acts on its three ring-top stage roster—headed by the famous Poodles Hanneford and the Hanneford family of riders—the features of the program literally lifted auditors to their feet. Encores were common—and encores were hitherto unheard of in the circus business.

And this is the show that was built for the west. But the east, the north and the south demanded that the west share with them. Sells-Floto had become a national institution. It will remain so. Three years ago newspapers frankly referred to it as "the coming show." It came. It has arrived.
