GLORIA'S JEWELRY

"Why, Gloria, are you engaged to Herbert Richardson?" I questioned as she took off the beautiful diamond ring and slipped it on my finger.

I pulled it off quickly. Some way it seemed to sear my hand—and yet I was very curious to know all about it.

It was a gorgeous affair of platinum with one big diamond in the center, and a setting of small diamonds.

"Then you are engaged to Herbert Richardson?" I repeated.

"If I am he doesn't know it," she answered bitterly.

"But he gave you this ring," I choked a little over the assertion.

For a moment I wondered if Herbert Richardson really did give it to her.

"Yes he gave it to me all right, along with other pieces of jewelry which I'll show you. I really have to thank that foolish old woman, though, for I'm sure Herb would never have thought of giving me a ring otherwise. He didn't want to wear a ring she had given him. Then after making me a present of it, it was very easy for him to buy me more jewelry."

"Gloria! Are you telling me that Herbert Richardson gave you jewelry that had been given him by another woman?"

"You heard me truly, Virginia."

Gloria jumped up from the chair in which she was sitting and brought out from the dresser a magnificent brooch set with diamonds, and three or four more rings.

"I should think you would be afraid to keep them here. Are you sure no one will try to steal them?"

I fingered the jewels watching the light play upon them. Never had I handled so many beautiful things in my life.

"Aren't they lovely!" she exclaimed as she took them one by one and held them up for me to admire again.

"They must be worth a great deal of money, Ria. Did Herbert Richardson give them all to you?"

"Yes, he gave every one of them to me."

"But you are not engaged to him? You should not have accepted all these beautiful things unless you expected to marry him."

At this, Gloria sat down abruptly and commenced to laugh.

"Oh, my dear, my dear, when will you get over your old-fashioned notions? Virginia, in our world cost-ly presents are some of the prerequisites that accrue to pretty girls."

"But I don't understand, Gloria."

"You will before you have been on your own long."

"Does every girl who earns her own living accept presents like these from men who are merely good friends?"

"Perhaps not all of them, but I would like to see the girl in my position who has longed and dreamed for jewels like these refuse them when offered to her by a man like Herbert Richardson. Before you have been earning your own living long in this business you will know that there is a game of wits that is played out here between men or more money than principles and girls who have more calculation than money.

"It's an old, old game, Virgie—this game where men show you the things you want most and whisper they can be yours for the asking. The Bible tells of Satan taking the Divine One up into the mountains and showing Him the kingdoms of the earth. He, being divine, was able to withstand the great temptation. But what of you and me, Virgie? We're just poor little human mites—as good looking and just as smart as the girls who spend money like water for everything their hearts desire. But we must not want them; they are not for us."

"Why not take some of the good things that these foolish men will buy you?"

"But sometimes, Gloria, you will have to pay."

"I wonder if we will? Personally, I think I have paid. Virgie, have you ever read that story called 'The Salamander'?"

It describes a girl who plays with fire and always escapes being burned.

"Men will offer you beautiful jewels, and sometimes even wonderful clothes, and if you're clever you'll take them all. It is a part of the game, my dear, a part of the game."

"Oh, I could not, Gloria; I could not!"

"Why not? The man who gives them to you understands that it is a game and he does not always play it accordingly to rule either. He pits his wits against yours. He is gambling just as you are. And according to all tradition, men like the game of life even better than its reward."

"But remember, my dear, if the man wins, you stand to lose something you can never regain—your own self-respect—and if you win, you only gain a few baubles that the man has probably forgotten all about the next day."

CAREFULLY CONSIDER DIVERS ENTERPRISES

Hasty Conclusions Should Be Cautiously Avoided.

No Reason for Assuming All Activities of Farm Should Be Devoted to One Big Money Crop—Study All Angles.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In making use of the results of a year's cost accounts for the purpose of perfecting the organization of the farm, hasty conclusions should not be drawn. Sometimes a positive decrease in profits may ensue if an enterprise be dropped, because, taken alone, it has failed to pay. Cows, for instance, may not be showing a net profit, but if all the cows were sold there might be no other way of using up the roughage and it would become dead loss. Labor devoted night and morning to milking and feeding cows and charged to them would be entirely lost if the cows were sold and nothing supplied to fill in the time.

The fact that the hogs or the corn crop bring in the most net money during the season is no reason for assuming that all the activities of the farm in the future should be devoted solely to hogs or corn. It may be that the keeping of cows is partly responsible for making the hogs so profitable, or that the growing of wheat, clover, or other crops in rotation with corn makes the latter crop much more profitable than it would have been if grown alone.

Similar conditions will be met with on all farms, and, therefore, no sudden changes should be made on the basis of what a single year's accounts may indicate. All angles of the enterprise should be taken into consideration.

SODIUM FLUORID POISONOUS

Care Should Be Taken That Material Does Not Get Into Drinking Water or Feed.

If sodium fluorid is used for killing lice on chickens be careful not to let it get into the food or water. Don't pour it out where the hens will drink it before it can soak into the ground. The material is rather poisonous if taken internally.

Where some of the sodium fluorid in dust form reaches the body of the operator, and is allowed to remain for several hours, local irritation and burning may occur on tender parts of the skin. In dusting large flocks it is better to use a sable rather than to hold the bowls between the knees. The solution does not injure the hands, even when dipping is continued for several hours, except where there are sores, which may become slightly irritated.

Don't allow sodium fluorid solution to remain in galvanized vessels a great length of time. It is best not to keep it overnight in tins or galvanized containers, as it will injure them.

Many Forest Rangers Wanted

PORTLAND, Oct. 21. — Announcement is made of the examination for forest ranger in the Forest Service for October 25, at all forest supervisors' headquarters in Oregon and Washington. This examination will also be held on this same date at all forest supervisors' headquarters throughout the national forest states.

"The position of forest ranger is appealing more and more to graduates of Western agricultural and forestry schools to whom a life of public service is attractive, who like a rugged, outdoor life, who do not mind being alone a good deal, and who are not afraid of hard work," said District Forester Cecil, in making the announcement of the examination.

"The forest ranger has almost become famous, collectively speaking, in the West, and even in the East, because he is a somewhat picturesque and romantic figure, as well as a highly useful citizen and public officer," continued Mr. Cecil. "This is largely due to the fact that the forestry and the national forest system are not only becoming better known but better appreciated and the public generally of the states of Oregon and Washington is taking more real interest in the public forests and the men who are the keystone of the forestry work."

Forest officers, who have been long in the service point out that a forest ranger's job is no snapper, nor is it a soft job of riding about and camping in the mountains, as some untrained people still believe, but is a real man's job. Build means fighting forest fires, building trails, bridges, telegraph lines, and lookout towers, looking after livestock that is grazed under permit on the national forests. The job, above all, calls for loyalty, dependability, energy, initiative, judgment, tact and resourcefulness. A higher type of man is required nowadays for the job of forest ranger than formerly, for forest officers say that a ranger in these days with his district of several hundred thousand acres has about as much responsibility as a forest supervisor with a national forest of a million acres had in the early days of the Forest Service.

To the red-blooded young man with an education, who cares for a life of public service of the highest type, in the out of doors, the ranger's job will always appeal.

The entrance salary paid to those who pass the Civil Service examination is $1220 per year. Forest rangers are eligible to promotion after they have proved their worth to a maximum ranger salary of $1620 per year as vacancies occur in higher grades above the entrance salary, and higher administrative positions are available to the men who make good. "Many forest officers in the Washington and Western district offices started in as forest rangers," Mr. Cecil said. Rangers as a rule are furnished a house or ranger station in which to live, together with a barn, garden spot, and in many cases with pastures for the horses which most rangers yet have to have, to cover the work on their rough mountainous districts. The government furnishes a car in doing his work, mileage is allowed him, and besides the government pays his necessary traveling expenses while he is away from his official station.

Forest officers state that there are many good chances in the Forest Service for the right type of honest energetic young men with an education who are not afraid of a life of hard work spent on the national forests.

The examination for ranger this year will be held on October 25, at the thirteen supervisor headquarters in Oregon and the seven in Washington. The Oregon towns are: Albany, Baker, Bend, Eugene, Grants Pass, John Day, Lakeview, Medford, Pendleton, Portland, Prineville, Roseburg and Walla Walla. The Washington towns are: Bellingham, Okanogan, Olympia, Republic, Seattle, Tacoma and Wenatchee. Persons intending to take the ranger examination should apply at once to any forest supervisor at any of the above named places for an application blank (form 1312).

Applicants must be over 21 years of age and under 40 in order to be eligible to take the ranger examination.

Russian Women Are Speculators

(By JOHN GRAUDENZ.)

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

MOSCOW. (By mail.) — Food shortage and poverty in Russia has created a new type of people—the speculators, as the Russians call them. One finds them in great numbers at the Smolensky Rink (market), but also at every street corner. A certain proportion of them are professionals, but the greatest have become peddlers of street traffickers during and since the revolution. They come from all stations of life, and one often comes across a duchess, a countess, not to speak of a baroness, who is quite an ordinary figure within this line.

It usually happens this way: A housewife, worn out by the sorrows of daily life, moneyless and hungry, collects all her courage and goes to the market to sell some odd articles of her probably former luxurious household. She stands in line at the market for hours and and if she has luck finds a buyer for her stuff who either is just in need of such an article or sees a bargain.

The seller, happy to see some money to keep her going and glad to escape what she still considers a humiliation, promises herself never again will she go there. She doesn't, until the money is gone. This time she raises her price a bit, witted by experience. So is going on until she has perhaps nothing more to sell. By this time she has lost all false shame and starts speculating by buying articles from her less courageous neighbors and selling them at a profit, thus making an otherwise unteachable life somewhat easier.

I met many women on whose faces were written better days who had established regular booths, displaying all kinds of odd articles. The market goes on daily from eight a. m. until 6 p. m.

I had a hard time to get away with my own camera, which at least a dozen persons insisted in buying from me. "Skolke" (how much) camera dangling from my arm, and were utterly astonished when they heard the camera was not for sale.

A different type are the thousands of street traffickers huddling around every corner offering poorly made sweets, bread, cigarettes and pastries made at home. Hazard-looking housewives either sell these articles themselves or send out their children. German sacharin seems to be a much-asked-for article.

Since the reintroduction of free trade, enterprising youngsters have taken to the flower trade. If you ride a drosky—especially with a female companion—it is next to impossible to get rid of them unless you decide to use hard words.

Money can buy everything today in Russia, just as anywhere else in the world. With the exception of booze, perhaps, there is hardly an article which one would not find either at the markets or in the newly-opened shops in Moscow, be it French perfume or a toothbrush, a silk stocking or a smoking jacket, a safety razor or American condensed milk. I saw many a pair of brown army shoes with the United States stamped in the soles. There also were samples of genuine American underwear, trench-coats and many other articles familiar to an American.

Besides the Green good restaurants, a large number of coffee houses are open, and many of them equipped with the best orchestras I ever heard. They play the latest Berlin tunes as well as American ragtime.

To the Workers of Oregon

By Otto R. Hartwig
President, Oregon State Federation of Labor

DURING these days of reconstruction and uncertainties, it becomes more than ever necessary for the citizens of Oregon to patronize the industries of Oregon by buying such products as are made in this state.

Industries of Oregon cannot be expected to grow and furnish continuous satisfactory employment to the workers of Oregon if we spend our money for products manufactured elsewhere.

It is a well known fact that on the whole, Oregon workers are receiving better wages and working under more satisfactory conditions than is true of the workers in many of the eastern centers where a good deal of the products that the careless purchaser buys comes from. It is the height of stupidity and selfishness to demand decent working conditions from the Oregon employers and then turn around and use the money earned in Oregon to buy products made under sweat-shop conditions that exist in many of the eastern and middle states.

Let's buy Oregon Products!
