GOOD EVENING FOLKS—
Among the seven or eight topics that this department of uplift does not concern itself with are the matter of changing from summer to fall underwear, parodies on "The Frost is on the Punkin," and the length of the ladies' skirts. We have no quarrel with these jokes, but have inclined to the theory that we weren't getting out that kind of an almanac, yet it is a curious fact that at least half of all the contributions we receive have to do with these questions. We have never been able to see anything particular diverting in the practice of putting on heavier clothing when it became cold. Riley's poem has been parodied to death and the skirt thing has been discussed to the point of utter boredom. The column isn't much (loud cheers) but it does have its simple limits.

Ye ed. today rec'd a gov't postcard signed R. H. S. Student. The student informs ye ed. that next week is "Good Speech" week and then goes on to inquire whether or not it would be proper to have the orchestra play "Ain't we got fun." No, Dardenalla, the music in question should be retitled, "Haven't we got fun."

Doc Bailey, the south deer creek broccoli connoisseur, sent in a branch bearing two persimmons Saturday. Doc didn't bring in the fruit himself for fear we'd ask him for something more substantial, ye ed. having not yet acquired the persimmon appetite.

If everybody lived in glass houses the reformers would have convulsions.

During business hours the stenographers will continue to wear desk stockings—roll tops.

No girl's heart is in the right place unless she has quit lacing.

Flappers now wear the pictures of their "steadies" on their shoe buckles.

Nothing is so pitiful as a well-dressed woman in a dilapidated Ford.

Why is it a man with his wife always sneers at a good-looking girl in a bathing suit?

Target practice is on for the winter months in the Pearce harness shop—all of the boys having stocked up with plug and set their sights on Harry's community stove.

The most economical woman we know of is the one who takes a 1914 strawberry carnival hat and decorates it for 1921 use.

Jim Starrett has resurrected his overcoat which was brought over the plains from Ak Sar Ben and placed it in use. He says the mothball aroma will soon wear off.

If there is ever a shortage in face powder the sweet young things will be compelled to wash their faces once in a while.

Yes, Flour Has Dropped Again

But, as the Colored lady said to her rival, "Ah done saw him fust" We intend to keep on "seeing him fust" just as often as possible. The more of your needs you buy from a properly managed co-operative business the more money it can save you. The more of your needs you buy from any other dealer the more money he can make off your needs. "A word to you should be sufficient" We unloaded another Car of Flour and Feed Saturday but were too busy selling it to write an ad and tell you about it. Come in and get our new prices before you buy. "See Us First. We Can Save You Money"

AN UNINTENTIONAL HURT

I thought a great deal about what Gloria had told me as I pulled my "built-in" bed from out the dining room buffet.

My life had changed as completely the last three weeks as that bed which masqueraded as a buffet in the old daytime was a change from the old four-poster which my mother and other ancestors had used for centuries way back in old Virginia.

Vaguely I seemed to understand that I had entered into an entirely new world—a world where it is up to the girl every minute—a strenuous world where no one but the girl herself can decide—a world of opportunity beset by dangerous temptation—a world where the girl has to fight not only for her daily bread but for her very soul.

I wondered if Gloria and the girls who, like her, had had to fight these battles over and over had lost any of that feminine charm I had been taught to consider woman's greatest fascination.

True, Gloria had lost every intimation of helplessness, but as I thought of her in her varying moods, I felt that she was the most interesting little creature I had ever met.

I contrasted her with Naomi, my childhood friend, and the picture was so utterly at variance that I laughed aloud. This brought Gloria back into the room.

She was a picture of girlish beauty. There was no charm missing from that radiant face or slender form which was thinly covered by her null nightdress.

No girl who had lived under the protection of home and family could have had a sweeter expression. She looked as though she might have stepped out of a room that had been forever hemmed about with those who had kept every shadow of adversity and sophistication from her.

Her red brown hair had been brushed until every strand of it crinkled about her face, frame-like.

She looked at me a moment as I was busily twisting my hair about my fingers.

"Oh, your hair is naturally curly! How beautiful!" she exclaimed as she touched one of the curls that was hanging down my neck.

It is not more beautiful than yours," I answered. "In fact I like yours better; it is so nice and wavy. While mine, you see, just curls up in little ringlets."

"Virgie, you are a constant source of joy to me—you dear child. Don't you know that my hair has been permanently waved?"

"What is that?"

"Oh, it means that it has been baked and roasted for hours while I sat in misery, expecting every moment to be burned by the electric current which heated every little pad about which it was rolled. It cost me $25.00, but thank heaven it lasts six months. And you may be sure that no matter how hot the day is your hair will not come out of curl in the middle of a picture."

"Must a girl in the movies have curly hair?" I asked rather complacently as I twisted some of mine around my finger.

"Why, my dear child, don't you know that curly hair is about half the stock in trade of a girl who wants to make an impression upon a director? But what were you laughing at as I came in?"

"Was just trying to imagine what Aunt Virginia and grandfather and Eddie Montforth and all the rest would say about me."

"They would undoubtedly say, Virgie, that I was not fit company for you. And yet, I am not sure, Virgie, that I am not better than you are with all your ancestors. You don't know yet what you will do under stress of circumstances—I do. You have never been tempted—I have. And what those people—who know nothing about the temptation which circumstances may bring to some of us—have to say really matters very little to me. I know it is something they do not understand, and because they do not understand it their opinion is worthless."

I saw that I had hurt Ria—at

OUR DAILY HOROSCOPE.

October 25—If you are born on this date you are almost too good to be true. You are the guy Diogenes went gunning for with a lantern. You never tell wife a fib, don't know a full hand from a busted straight, and bring home your envelope unopened. The only thing you need is a halo and you are ready for your mansion in the skies.

When you fall for a girl, you smash yourself all over the scenery, and after that she can kick your roll any old time. You detest John Barleycorn and you are full of Christian-like simplicity. You love kids and chickens. When you become real angry you remark, spitefully, "Oh Splash!" and that lets you out. With this splendid equipment, you would make a jim dandy jelly bean, only you have an insane desire to work, which is foreign to the true bean.

Your gem is the diamond, but you will only possess one in your life, which you will buy on the plan, a dollar down and a dollar every time they catch you, and this you will slip to some girl, whose board you have decided to pay for the rest of her natural existence. You certainly are an easy mark and you delight in being trimmed.

Your colors are white and yellow and you wear soulful neckties. You are just too pure for anything and it's a shame the rest of the world puts it over on you. Your name will probably be Mike or Bill, but it ought to be Montgomery or Percival.

James Hawkins Napier, follower of Blackstone in the Reedsport section, dropped in our midst with his leather pouch yesterday eve, and after looking over the large variety of school ma'ams in attendance at the institoot, announced his candidacy for county school superintendent. His platform is "Teachers' institoot every three weeks." He has all of the younger and most of the older set in Roseburg with him, heart and soul.

This is Your Week
Come and See
What a Modern Laundry Really Is

Here and throughout the United States October 24 to 29 will be celebrated in modern laundries as Visitors' Week. We, in cooperation with 6,000 other laundries, will keep open house for our patrons and friends.

Will you help us make this observance a success in our community?

We want you to come and see for yourself what a modern laundry is really like—how clothes are washed, rinsed, dried, starched, and ironed; how every precaution is taken to give thorough cleanliness, and to safeguard the health of home and of community.

The dates are October 24 to 29—come any time that will be convenient to you.
