ROSEBURG, OREGON, NOVEMBER 30, 1921.

THE DEMANDS OF THE CHARITIES.

Many people, when asked to subscribe to such a public cause as the Red Cross, will make the objection that they are "sick and tired of drives." During the war, they say, there was one long procession of solicitors asking money for public causes, and since the war, it has been about the same. These people should consider how comparatively little people do in a personal way for the benefit of others. Our fathers and mothers who lived in country towns used constantly to go out to watch with sick people, sitting up all night after a tiresome day's labor. There were but few nurses then, and most of the labor of caring for the sick was done by this volunteer help. People lived closer to the suffering and the poor in those days, and when anyone needed assistance everyone knew it, and took hold to help. The spirit of hospitality was more prevalent in those times. Families would give a home for months and years to unfortunate relatives, freely supplying them with food and clothing. In country towns still people gather to the home of some sick man, and saw and split his woodpile or get in his crops. And they do these things gladly, and find pleasure in serving others. And yet there are folks living in towns and cities who get grouchy because a few times a year some solicitor comes around for some charity, which takes the place of all this intimate and personal service that people used to offer so freely. People in these times are giving less than the old times used to. The trouble with many of us is that we are concentrating our thoughts on our own advancement and pleasure, so that appeals for a kind and generous spirit may not find us ready to do our part, or to enjoy the satisfaction that is to be found in giving.

Every member of the Oregon delegation in congress has pledged support to the project which has for its purpose the improvement of the harbor at Reedsport. It is desired by the people of the lower Umpqua that a sufficient sum be appropriated by congress to properly deepen the channel at the mouth of the river, thus affording a greater ocean commerce for this important section. It is a matter that should be given the fullest support by every citizen of the county who has the best interest of the lower Umpqua in mind. A deep water harbor is one of the biggest and best assets a county can secure.

How to successfully conduct public schools without sufficient funds is going to be an issue of no small importance for the local school board to wrestle with for the last half of the present term. It certainly does not show a very progressive spirit to throttle our institutions of learning by defeating the small requirements of the board. It is a step backward and a mighty poor advertisement for a progressive community.

This has been a troublesome day for the users of electric current—but think of the boys who have been trying to furnish the juice. They have had their troubles—and in no small numbers.

Looks like more wind and rain. Let 'er come—we need the moisture for early spring planting, and the wind to clear up the atmosphere.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

The executive committee of the Douglas County Farm Bureau held their regular monthly meeting Saturday night at the office of the county agent. It was definitely decided to plan for a farmers' week the 10th to 14th of January. County Agent Haslett is to arrange with the college for speakers for that event.

A committee was appointed to re-draft the constitution and by-laws so that they will conform with the needs of the organization.

Owing to the increasing demand for the use of the Farm Bureau motion picture machine, it has become necessary to make certain rules for use of the same. The contract between the Farm Bureau and Mr. Elia Miller of the DeLoe Lighting system is that Mr. Miller is to furnish the juice and run the picture machine for Farm Bureau work for the year free of charge as he is allowed to use some films for advertising the DeLoe light in connection with the Farm Bureau films.

This contract does not permit the Farm Bureau to authorize the use of Mr. Miller's light and plant for other purposes. As several Parent-Teacher associations wish the use of the machine for educational work, we have made the following agreement with Mr. Miller: Any organization wishing the use of the machine may have same by paying $1 for use of it and by paying 10 cents per mile to Mr. Miller for his expenses on car and light plant while operating the machine. Make arrangements with Mr. Miller at least ten days in advance as it is necessary to secure a date.

The $1 charge for use of machine is to go toward upkeep of same. Films may be secured from the University of Oregon or the Oregon Agricultural college. Most of these films are free, the user paying transportation charges each way. No admission can be charged where these films are used as they are for the public benefit and are a part of the extension service work of the above institutions.

FRED A. GOFF,
Pres. Douglas Co. Farm Bureau.

GOOD EVENING FOLKS—

Ye ed, this a. m. rec'd a communication signed "Nemo," which sounds to us like the name of some new-fangled cigarette. The writer of the letter was evidently of the female species and she took exception to an article appearing in this column recently regarding the findings of a Chicago professor. The little squib had to do with the discovery that all women are not perfect and "Nemo" reprimanded us for our part in the affair. "Fie upon you," was one of the nasty phrases used in the letter. Ye ed, went over in the corner and sobbed bitterly and now that we've collected our thoughts we're going to try and finish up the day's work.

ANOTHER PROBLEM.

There should be a penitentiary sentence given to every automobile manufacturer who turns out a car that would make more than 25 miles an hour. Under the present system, the light-headed run the car at 40 miles, the idiotic at 50 miles and the damphules at 60-plus—and then some.—Kissimmee (Fla.) Gazette.

But in that case how would the world get rid of its "light-headed," its "idiotic," and its "damphules?"

ADVICE TO LOVELORN AND OTHERS

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I am quite an elderly lady. Have never been married, but used to go with a man. He was very jealous. We quarreled and he got married and later was postmaster. I loved him very much. I met him about a month ago and he smiled the same sweet smile he did years ago. The old love returned. I feel as though I can never be happy without him. Would it be all right to kiss him just once for old times sake if his wife did not know about it?

Ans. No, it certainly would not be right or fair for you to do anything of the kind. Forget all about it and do not start any trouble. It is foolish for you to say that you cannot be happy without him. You have gotten along very well for several years, and you are probably just imagining that the old love has returned.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: This summer I paid a long visit to an old friend of mine who is married. I do not like her husband at all, and he made himself very objectionable to me while I was there. I do not care to send him anything for Christmas.

How to Be Healthy

The Crusade of the Double-Barred Cross
Practical Talks on Disease Prevention

Prepared by the
OREGON TUBERCULOSIS ASSOCIATION

(Practically every adult person is infected with tuberculosis. This infection need not be a source of danger. To keep the latent infection from becoming disease, good resistance must be kept at its best. This series of articles shows you how to keep healthy.)

PREVENTION OF TUBERCULOSIS

DR. GEORGE THOMAS PALMER,

President Illinois Tuberculosis Association, Springfield, Ill.

THE prevention of tuberculosis consists first, in the avoidance of infection by the germ of the disease and second, in the prevention of active tuberculosis disease after infection may have been acquired. Thousands of persons acquire tuberculosis infection without succumbing to the disease. In fact, if one lives properly, it is possible for him to carry tuberculosis infection throughout his entire life without developing tuberculosis disease or consumption. The man with tuberculosis infection, however, is always in more or less danger and consequently every effort should be made to avoid initial infection.

To avoid first infection and to prevent the development of later disease there must be team work on the part of the individual and the community. However careful the individual may be, he is not safe in a community where health regulation is disregarded, and on the other hand, the entire community is endangered by the carelessness of the infected person.

The first problem of preventing infection must be solved not only by sane public regulation and control of all consumptives who may spread the disease, but by the regulation of all of those things which directly or indirectly affect the general public health. To prevent his own infection the individual must exercise care in his contact with known consumptives, must insist upon good hygienic conditions in all places where he works or plays, or joins with others in his recreation. The individual child must be rigidly protected from contact with any consumptive or possible consumptive.

To avoid tuberculosis disease or consumption on the part of the individual who is already infected and at present about eighty per cent of persons acquire tuberculosis infection at one time or another—the chief problem is that of maintaining individual health at its highest point. While the infected individual may round out a long life without evidence of the disease, it is also true that he may develop active disease at any time through the lowering of his physical strength or resistance. Hence, he must live a safe, sane, normal life with the right kind of food, with ample fresh air, with moderation in all his habits, including those of work and play and with avoidance of any unnecessary strain. He must also exact of his community those civic conditions necessary to good community health, including good housing, efficient general health administration, clean streets, proper ventilation of public places, safe milk supply and a reasonable measure of public recreation.

It has been stated that if every man, woman and child would utilize our present knowledge of prevention, tuberculosis would be wiped out in a few generations.

The gratifying reduction in tuberculosis during past years has not been due to epoch-making scientific discoveries, nor even to records of the activities of sanatoria and doctors and nurses, but rather to national, state and local campaigns of popular education through which people have been taught to live sane and wholesome lives. In spite of the success which has attended the educational efforts of the past, it must be recognized that the vast majority of the people of the United States have not yet acquired the truth about this disease—the truth which will make them free from the greatest scourge with which mankind has ever been afflicted.

New Ruling Is Expected Soon

R. M. Jennings, manager of the Douglas County Light and Water company, returned last night from Portland and Salem where he has been attending to business matters. Heads of the various public utilities about the state met before the Public Service commission with a request for a new ruling regarding line extensions. At the present time there are no provisions regarding extensions of power lines and some trouble has resulted where subscribers desired to connect up to the power lines, the charge for the extensions being assessed against them. The heads of the utilities placed their proposal before the commission, which, in turn, submitted its proposal. Several revisions and changes were suggested and the commission took the proposed ruling under advisement and will soon make public a ruling governing this phase of the service of the utilities.

No Way to Stop Chemical Warfare

By WEBB MILLER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
PARIS, Nov. 30.—"The whole question of disarmament has been radically changed and rendered uncertain by the progress in the use of chemicals in warfare."

Such is the opinion of Doctor Albert Ranc, an authority on chemicals and a student of the use of chemicals in war.

Dr. Ranc points out that at present there is no known method of determining or limiting the ability of a nation to do harm to its neighbors or enemies by means of chemicals or poison gas. Even though its warships were scrapped and cannons and ammunition destroyed, a nation can have in its laboratories and chemical factories the means of making a terrible war with liquid fire, poison gas and deadly chemicals distributed by airplanes such as are used in ordinary commercial work.

"The Great War has demonstrated the existence of a vast unknown factor of which the power cannot be measured. How can nations conceive disarmament effectively when one of the important factors is unmeasurable? Nobody can now know the limits of the influence of chemistry and aviation on the future warfare."

As an instance of the speed with which chemical manufacture can be developed, Ranc cites the manufacture of the terrific explosive yperite in France. In March, 1918, the total production in France was about 580 pounds, but seven months later the factories were producing over 1,000,000 pounds.

The French scientist believes it is nearly impossible to effectively guard against any nation developing the means of chemical warfare in peace time.

He declares that the chance discovery of some chemist in an obscure University might possibly modify the whole art of war-making.
