SECRETARY FALL MAKES REPORT

Department of the Interior Compiles Statistics Showing Great Wealth.

RESOURCES UNTAPPED

Hundred and Fifty Billion Dollars Wealth Contained in Land Still Within the Public Domain, Is Secretary's Report.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—An impressive report estimated at a value of one hundred and fifty billion dollars of resources is contained in the report of the secretary of the interior, which was made public today.

Coal and oil form the bulk of this wealth, the total coal deposits being estimated at 110,000,000 tons, and the oil deposits at 1,320,000,000 barrels, with an additional 50,000,000 barrels of shale oil.

From the development of these resources the federal government would realize by way of royalties, rentals, etc., a total of $12,307,500,000, divided as follows:

Coal in public ownership: Bituminous 10,000,000,000 tons at ten cents royalty, $1,000,000,000. Sub-bituminous 30,000,000,000 tons at eight cents royalty, $2,400,000,000.

Lignite 50,000,000,000 tons at five cents royalty, $2,500,000,000.

Note—Coal upon railroad land, private grants, private lands in the public land states but not developed not estimated above.

Oil in public ownership (crude) 700,000,000 barrels at $2, $1,400,000,000 at 12 1/2 cents royalty $175,000,000.

Shale oil 50,000,000,000 barrels at $2, $100,000,000,000 at five cents royalty $5,000,000,000.

Phosphate 3,500,000,000 tons at $4, $14,000,000,000 at two per cent royalty $280,000,000.

Potash 20,000,000 tons at $75, $1,500,000,000 at two per cent royalty $30,000,000.

Waterpower, 13,000,000 horsepower at ten cents per horsepower per year, $1,300,000.

Indian reservations: Oil 600,000,000 barrels at $3, $1,800,000,000. Phosphate 1,000,000,000 tons at $4, $4,000,000,000.

Alaska: Coal 20,000,000,000 tons, all grades at five cents royalty, $1,000,000,000.

Oil 25,000,000 barrels at $1, $25,000,000 at ten per cent royalty, $2,500,000.

Waterpower, 2,500,000 horsepower at ten cents per horsepower per year, $250,000.

Surface value of public lands outside of national forests: Desert and semi-arid lands 110,000,000 acres at $1, $110,000,000.

Grazing lands 75,000,000 acres at $2, $150,000,000.

Grazing and forage lands 15,000,000 acres at $4, $60,000,000.

National forests: Grazing lands 110,000,000 acres at $4, $440,000,000.

Timber 500,000,000.

Other resources $145,000,000.

"History is now repeating itself," says Secretary Fall, "and after a period of unlimited expenditure in war measures and in preparing for war, in the creation of a navy, etc., it has been found necessary to curtail such expenditures to the very utmost. I am justified in calling attention to the fact that the department of the interior—the home department—is fully equipped and prepared to do its part in the development of those great natural resources which must be so developed if the tax burden upon this and future generations is to be borne at all."

Secretary Fall devotes a considerable part of his report to reclamation projects and in this connection he urges that "an affirmative strong policy be announced by the executive."

"The necessary advances can be made from year to year without becoming an excessive burden upon the taxpayers," the secretary says, "and as has already been proven by experience, one year's crop upon one acre of reclaimed irrigated ground will be of a value largely in excess of the total amount expended in rendering such acre productive. Under the present system, or any proposed legislation, of course the cost of such project will be repaid and meanwhile the added wealth yielded will lighten the tax burdens upon all the taxpayers of the country."

Referring to pending bills providing for further reclamation activities, Mr. Fall says that if they are enacted additional opportunities for labor will be offered the unemployed and at the same time homes made for those who desire them.

"This department," he adds, "is thoroughly organized with sufficient force and is ready to carry on any work which such an enlightened policy as suggested might be assigned to it in reclamation or other development of our national resources."

Discussing the situation, the interior secretary declares the resources of that territory, "and of the wealth to be drawn therefrom in the future are almost incalculable."

"There are 21,000,000 acres of lands in forests in that territory," he says, "and many millions of acres upon the public domain upon which settlers may depend for mining timber, lumber for houses, etc. There are millions of acres of land fitted or agriculture and the agricultural resources are such that a large population can be supported in Alaska without the importation of foodstuffs from the United States or other countries.

"Alaska's resources have not been developed for various reasons, among others the lack of transportation and largely because of the fact that these resources are administered through some thirty-eight bureaus and various departments of this government. In my opinion authority to administer the laws relative to Alaska's natural resources must be vested in some one department of this government that the activities charged with the administration of such laws may be properly coordinated."

"Transportation is necessary of course and the government has assisted insofar as the construction of a railroad from Seward to Fairbanks is concerned, which road will be ready for operation within a few months. Vast deposits of valued metalliferous minerals and great coal mines are known to exist and must be made accessible to the railroad and to coast transportation."

"While no extensive oil development has as yet been made it is well known to this department that indications of valuable oil deposits exist from Point Barrow to the Seward peninsula."

Grazing Figures Given in Report

During the season of 1921 the Umpqua forest grazed, under paid permits, a total of 2,245 head of cattle and horses belonging to 56 owners and averaging 40 head to the owner, and 7,656 sheep belonging to seven owners and averaging 1,095 head to the permit, according to a report filed today by Forest Supervisor W. F. Ramsdell. About 90 percent of the cattle and horses came from Douglas county while only about 20 percent of the sheep belong on Douglas county farms. These figures show an increase of 634 head in the cattle and horses grazed this season over the 1920 season and an increase of 1,691 head in sheep over 1920. This increase is brought about largely by the willingness on the part of stockmen to utilize more timber feed and through better salting methods resulting in more uniform consumption of forage, Mr. Ramsdell says.

Formerly the practice of stockmen was to salt large herds of cattle in one place. The cattle would not wander far from this spot and consequently only a small amount of range was utilized. Now the stockmen place salt at frequent spots about the range and the cattle scatter over a larger territory and use more feed.

In spite of the postponement of the payment date, there have been no trespass cases reported in the Umpqua forest, Mr. Ramsdell says. Ordinarily payments are required when permits are issued but because of the poor condition of the market congress allowed owners until Dec. 1 to pay for their grazing permits. All of the owners grazing cattle in the forest have paid promptly, Mr. Ramsdell says. Failure to pay would have resulted in trespass proceedings.
