Committee on Booklet Meets

The committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce to arrange for a new booklet held its first meeting this afternoon at 4:30. The committee is composed of W. C. Standing, George Neuner, Dexter H. Ben Hur and W. A. Hogard. The booklet will be larger and more complete than the last one put out. It will be put out in the same form as the last booklet with authoritative articles from men and women in the various lines in industry which the booklet deals.

The committee is endeavoring to make a booklet of new illustrations and pictures which will be taken from the booklet to make it more attractive to the eye. The committee will also plan this afternoon for financing the booklet and will also work in gathering the material.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN AND OTHERS

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I am engaged to marry a man that is five years younger than I am. I love him and believe that he loves me, but cannot get the idea out of my head that we are too far apart in ages. If it was just the other way, I would not worry, but there might be trouble if I am so much older than he. People look queer when they find out our ages, although I do not look as old as he does. He is 26 and I am 31. What would be your advice on this subject?

Ans. I do not think the difference in your ages should be considered. Love is not a matter of age, and when the difference is not too great, for instance a young girl marrying a very old man, it should not be considered.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I have been going with a certain man here for two years, and was engaged to him. Everybody knew it, and thought we were going to be married soon. We have quarreled, and I am going to Portland to live. What shall I tell the people. They are constantly asking me all about it, and I certainly do not want to tell them that we have quarreled, and all about it. What shall I do?

Ans. Tell them nothing at all, and let them speculate as much as they please. If they ask you about it, just be pleasant, and say that you are going to Portland to live, and nothing else. Your love affair does not concern any one but yourself.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I am going to have four girl friends to dinner within a few days. The dinner is to be served at 6 o'clock. Shall I ask them to spend the afternoon, or should I ask them to spend the evening. Which is correct?

Ans. Consult your own preferences, and convenience, and do accordingly. Either one is correct.

WRESTLING MATCHES WANTED

MEDFORD, Dec. 30.—Steps are underway to secure a wrestling match at an early date between Ralph Hand of Cottage Grove, and Ben Ruben of Chicago, the latter being a redhot contender for the middleweight championship of the world. He met Walter Miller at Portland recently, and while Miller was given the decision, it was freely expressed that he was lucky as he could not flop the Chicagoan. Ruben and Ted Thye will meet at an early date at Portland. Miller won from Hand at Gold Hill last fall. It is the plan of the Gold Hill promoters to hold a number of matches this winter and spring, and expect when the smoke has cleared away Hand will be nearer the top of his class than at present.

NEW IMMIGRATION LAWS ARE NEEDED

Next Congress Will Be Faced
With Task of Revising Laws
Regarding Immigrants

INCREASES ARE NOTED

In Spite of Regulations, Millions of Immigrants Have Been Coming Into the United States At a Rapid Rate.

(By Arthur Elit Hungerford.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—One of the most important duties of the new Congress is the enactment of immigration legislation. The present emergency three per cent law will expire June 30, 1922. Unless some action is taken, immigration will revert to the law of 1917 and the number of immigrants will undoubtedly be greatly increased, seriously affecting industrial conditions of this country.

The present emergency law is rigidly restricting immigration this year but men who have made a study of conditions declare that more equitable, practical and permanent legislation is needed before it expires. These men, who include such authorities as Senator Thomas Sterling of South Dakota, Dr. Sidney L. Gulick, secretary of the National Committee for Constructive Immigration Legislation, and Professor Jeremiah W. Jenks of the University of New York, a well-known economist, whose volume on "Immigration" is regarded as having the highest value, are working on a new law embodying a constructive immigration policy.

Senator Sterling has prepared a bill which is said by various authorities to be of unusual merit. It will probably serve as the basis for the next step in immigration legislation. Striking facts, standing out in connection with immigration during the 12 years from 1909 to 1920 inclusive, show the great need for action. According to Dr. Gulick, during that time there was an increase of 4,485,387 foreign born persons in the United States, being the net increase after deducting the number of foreign born who left during those same years. The largest net increase in a single year was 817,169 persons in 1910. The year 1913 came second with 815,393 persons and 1914 third with 769,276.

A terrific slump came in 1915 when the first effects of the war were felt. The number dropped to 50,070 but during 1916 and 1917 the number showed an increase. 216,498 persons being the figures for the latter. In 1918, however, when America had been in the war for a year and war preparations were in full blast, the figures were only 16,585, which was the low-water mark.

An increase of approximately 2,000 was shown over these figures in 1919; and in 1920 the number was 123,514.

In connection with these figures it should be remembered that net increases have been given, not the number of immigrants. For instance, in 1914, there came to this country 1,218,489 immigrants, the greatest number of arrivals on record. In addition there were 184,601 "non-immigrants" or visitors, making a grand total of 1,403,091.

Now against this great total, 303,338 immigrants left America. In addition, were 330,470 so-called "non-immigrants" who left for a short absence from the country—many of them probably went back to their homes for a short visit—making a total of 633,805 persons who left America. The net increase in this year was 769,276.

In connection with these figures are several interesting facts:

First, the increase of all males exceeded that of all females by some 426,000.

Second, northwest Europeans increased by 1,560,000, while other Europeans, including 587,502 Hebrews, increased by some 2,702,000.

Third, the increase of 246,999 Mexicans and of 73,702 Africans is surprising.

Fourth, Japanese males decreased by 16,073 and Chinese males by 16,988. In both cases the females increased, 35,482 and 2,002 respectively. These figures include the Hawaiian Islands in each case.

Fifth, immigrants (departures), whose race is not specified are surprisingly numerous, being 72,526.

These facts and figures show the need for new legislation and for a permanent policy. For 50 years Congress has been developing step by step a policy for the regulation of immigration. It has been increasingly a selective policy—a policy for the exclusion of the seriously diseased, flagrantly immoral, dangerously radical, and, only recently, wholly illiterate individuals. Aside from these restrictions, the law of 1917 allows free immigration, except that for 40 years Asiatic labor has been fairly effectively excluded.

In spite of increasing restrictions (which have been only imperfectly administered), immigration grew to vast proportions during the decade before the war, especially from the countries of north, east and south Europe. Because of the unusual industrial conditions existing at this time, the passage of permanent, constructive immigration legislation is now regarded by most students of the subject as imperative.

The Buick Drag-Link is Forged From One Piece of Metal

Upon the Buick Drag-Link rests the safety of each passenger. It is the connecting bar between the steering wheel assembly and the steering buckle upon the front wheel. Through this bar the driver is able to turn or guide the car in any direction. It is a single unit steel bar, instead of the usual bar with two welded end sections. This construction positively eliminates any points of weakness along the entire length of the bar and is another evidence of the care with which Buick cars are built throughout.

Young People Enjoy Social

The Loyal Daughters class of the Christian church, taught by Mrs. C. E. Rusko, had a most delightful New Year's social last night. The social was held in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Rusko on South Main street. About 50 young people were there, as the class entertained the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. The evening was spent in playing games, and every one was kept busy from the time of their arrival until the midnight hour. One of the features of the evening was a grab bag. Every one had brought a present to put in the bag, and everyone received a present. Refreshments were served.
