FOREST ROAD MUST BE VIEWED

Filing of Petition and Bond Forces Court to Follow Out Regular Procedure.

PROJECT IS CERTAIN

Statement of Judge Quine That County Has No Funds With Which To Make Survey Will Not Halt Improvements.

The county court has no other recourse but to go ahead with the viewing and surveying of the Rock Creek Forest Boundary road, District Attorney Neuner informed the court today. Saturday County Judge Quine stated that the court had no money with which to pay viewers and surveyors as the action of the taxpayers league in cutting the budget had eliminated the greater part of this fund.

A petition and bond, however, with R. T. Blakely as principal and A. J. Lilburn and A. C. Marsters as surety has been filed with the court. This makes it imperative that the court go ahead and have the road viewed and surveyed and after this is done there is little doubt but that the project will be adopted.

The law provides that where a petition accompanied by a bond is filed the court must have the desired road viewed and surveyed. If the route proves impractical then the bondsmen pay the cost of the viewing and surveying but if the route is adopted as a project the cost is borne by the county.

Even though the funds for viewing and surveying are low the court must abide by the regular procedure, the district attorney states. The viewers and surveyors will probably be on the job for a week or more and the cost to the county will be quite heavy.

Because of the small amount left in the fund for viewing it is possible that the court will cut the amount paid the viewers and adopt a new schedule for this class of work.

Douglas Hotel Extends Rooms

The wooden section of the Douglas Hotel, formerly the McClellan house, is being fitted up and furnished and will be opened about the first of next month. A contract for installing modern plumbing in the 23 rooms on the second and third floors has been let to D. V. Rast and company, and the plumbers are now at work installing and connecting the new fixtures. Furniture has been ordered and should arrive soon. The rooms will be put in first class condition and will be kept up in the same highly satisfactory manner as the remainder of the hotel is now kept. Manager Percy Webb states that business has been very good and that the hotel has been crowded practically every night. Very frequently he has been forced to turn away a large number of people. During the spring and summer it is expected that even with the added accommodations there will not be sufficient room.

WINTER IS SPLENDID TIME FOR REPAIRING

Note Defects on Thashing Machine When Storing.

Implement Should Be Put in Thorough Working Order Before Start of Working Season—Make Adjustments Later.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Overhauling the thrashing machine during the winter means dollars in time and grain saved next year. Proper repairs should be made and the whole machine put into thorough working order before the beginning of the working season. While certain adjustments must be made during operation, it is possible by putting up the machine properly at the close of the season to have all parts in such condition that the necessary operating adjustments can be made readily, accurately and with little delay.

Many times defective parts are overlooked or neglected, in the hope that they will last through the season, when they should be replaced during the season of disuse. When they fail in the midst of the working season, serious losses often result before the repairs can be made. During or just before the thrashing season new parts are difficult to get promptly because of the unusual rush of orders from the many who have put the matter off until the last minute.

Simplicity of Line Marks New Frocks

Betty Compson,

Film Star,

Shows This Season's

Vogue of

Bateau Neckline

TWO notable elements apparent in the season's frocks is the decided uniformity in the matter of the design and the popular Bateau neckline. For this simplicity the French are no doubt responsible.

At present the lines are longer, to be sure, but they are simply and quietly lengthened, with every attention given to the proportion and the blending of one line with another, until there results that harmony which is always satisfying and which, authoritatively handled, is becoming to whatever figure happens to wear it.

In accord with this, the usually simple design of the frock worn here by Betty Compson, who is starring in William deMille's Paramount picture, "The Little Minister," by J. M. Barrie. This is of mauve colored crepe, trimmed effectively with terra-cotta, blue and brown beads.

As will be seen by the right hand sketch the frock shown here may be made from the same pattern by an inventive seamstress. It is one of the most popular models of the season, and it has nothing but straight lines to entice the wearer. This is made of emerald green silk duvetyn with the sleeves, long side panels and neck still made of emerald green silk crepe.

Another style which may easily be cut from the same pattern, with the possible exception of the widened skirt, is the one sketched on the left. This is made of velvet. This has the drawn-in bodice, made possible by a very slight fitting. Then it tops the straight hanging skirt, which is fuller than we are accustomed to see, and which is simply gathered over a hidden belt. The finishing touch is most effective of all, and is achieved with rows of gray tassels and bands of gray wool trimming, simulating caracul fur. The sleeves are tightly fitted and lend a decidedly new air. Worn with either of the frocks mentioned is the plaid woolly scarf with tam to match, which is appealing to all types.

MANY THINGS USED AS MONEY

Cattle, Shells and Whales' Teeth Among a Few That Are Reckoned as Currency.

When hunting was the chief occupation of man the skins of animals were the earliest means of currency, and this medium of exchange is still used by the North American Indians.

Leather money was the natural successor to skins, and was used freely in Rome and Carthage, as well as being circulated in Russia as late as the reign of Peter the Great.

As civilization advanced sheep and cattle came to be regarded as the most negotiable form of wealth, and many of our words in common use are historic reminders of the fact.

For example, "pecuniary" reminds us of the Latin "pecunia," meaning money, and "pecus," signifying cattle; whereas the word "fee," a sum of money paid as wages, is derived from the Saxon "feoh," a word used to express both cattle and money.

By an old German code of laws sheep and cattle were counted by the head, and were called "capitale," showing the source of our commercial word, "capital," for wealth, the law term "chattel" (in "goods and chattels"), for effects, and our common name for oxen—"cattle."

At the present time oxen form the principal wealth and circulating medium among the Zulus and Kaffirs.

Laboratory for Tribal Study.

Northern Rhodesia still is the happy hunting ground for the human geographer; where he may study the effects of a plateau region upon remote tribes that have been little affected by the encroachments of the white man. Here nearly a million natives inhabit an area greater than Texas where fewer than 3,000 Europeans have established themselves.—National Geographic Magazine.

GOT EVIDENCE FROM GRAVE

Chinese Tomb Two Hundred Years Old Opened to Prove Contention as to Ownership.

As a means of adjusting a difference between Chinese litigants who appeared in the mixed court at Shanghai recently, the court directed that a grave mound 200 years old should be opened.

The dispute concerned the ownership of a small tract of ground. In the action, Sung Chai-Dong alleged that Yih Woo-Zoong invaded the premises under controversy and erected a bamboo fence around certain graves thereon, asserting that the place was his ancestral burying ground.

The plaintiff claimed the property as his own by ancestral grant.

When the grave mounds were opened, there were brought to light the tablets of a Chinese and his wife who had lived and died under the reign of the Emperor K'ang Hsi.

When the tablets were brought to court it was found that the characters on them were of peculiar form and the writing read from left to right instead of from top to bottom, but the inkling was clear and the plaques were well preserved.

After the reading of the tablets, the court announced the graves as those of the defendant's family and Sung's suit was dismissed.
