DRUG EVIL IS SERIOUS PROBLEM

Physicians Called Together by Governor Consider Handling of Drug Addicts.

SLUMS ARE FAVORED

Statistics Show That Habitual Users of Drugs Prefer the Slums of the Cities and Majority Are Consequently in Portland.

SALEM, Jan. 10.—Oregon's narcotic problem is a most serious one and demands immediate attention. Thus far members of the state board of health and the state board of pharmacy assembled here today on invitation of Governor Olcott to consider ways and means for meeting the drug problem, are agreed. As to the proper solution of the problem, however, members of the two boards are divided into almost as many channels as there are members on the two boards.

A report on the narcotic evil in Oregon prepared by Dr. Frederick A. Strickler, secretary of the state board of health, and Frank S. Ward, secretary of the board of pharmacy, at the request of Governor Olcott and submitted at today's meeting, divides the state's narcotic problem into three classes: Peddlers, curable addicts and incurable addicts.

As a solution of the "peddler" problem the report suggests more active police service, long prison sentences and large fines.

Curable addicts, the report recommends, should be committed for a period of at least 18 months to an institution for treatment. Such an institution, the report points out, is absolutely essential to the successful solution of the drug evil, but it should not be a costly undertaking, because if properly handled it should be made self supporting.

For the incurable drug addict, the report recommends a source of supply of drugs under strict supervision where the addict can receive his necessary supply at cost. A survey of the situation in this state, the report points out, shows that there are approximately 1350 drug addicts in Portland, with probably an additional 150 addicts outside of Portland. Drug addicts, it is pointed out, favor the slum districts of large cities and railroad centers. While complete cures are held to be entirely possible, relapses are frequent because of an inherent defect of character in the average drug addict.

While it is agreed that the state must move in solving the problem, the report points out that the problem is a national one and an international one. The British government must be persuaded to suppress the wholesale production of opium in the British possessions and an international agreement must be reached to prohibit the importation of the drug except for medicinal purposes.

Dr. George Houck, of Roseburg, a member of the state board of health, found himself in a hopeless minority when he started the day's discussion with the statement that all drug addicts are mentally deficient. Any treatment which failed to take into consideration this phase of the problem is doomed to failure, he declared. While a large percentage of drug addicts are curable, many are doomed to become permanent state charges, he declared.

Both Dr. F. M. Brooks and Dr. C. J. Smith, of Portland, members of the board of health, took issue with Dr. Houck's statement relative to the mental deficiency of drug addicts. Many of the nation's most brilliant men and women have been drug users, according to Dr. Brooks, while Dr. Smith insisted that the use of narcotics did not necessarily stamp a person as insane or even feeble minded.

TOMMY WARNER MEETS A GIRL

"What did you do about your dress?" Tommy asked as he pulled me into the seat beside him in his roadster.

"Oh, I hope it will be there, Tommy. I hope it will be there! A girl at the house said she would pick it out for me."

"Good work. But I hope it will teach you not to try to double up again."

"Look here, Tommy Warner. What do you think I should do under the circumstances? My money was all gone."

"You could borrow more from me, couldn't you," Tommy grinned.

"Just the same I am not going to borrow from any man if I can help it," I insisted, stoutly clinging to Aunt Virginia's ideas. Then I added: "If I have to borrow it will probably be from John Storm. But, Tommy," I smiled, "I wouldn't mind your taking me to dinner occasionally to help out my exchequer."

Tommy laughed loudly.

"What's funny about that," I demanded.

"I am laughing to think how quickly you are catching on, Virginia. Every girl I have ever met, in Los Angeles, has either been misunderstood by her husband or is hungry."

"Cynic."

"No, truthful Tommy."

"I think I've found just the thing you want," was Miss Brown's greeting as we drove up to the Elite.

In her enthusiasm she had come running out to the car.

"The thing I want, Virginia," put in Tommy, "is not clothes but a continuation of the smile on Miss Brown's face."

"Hush up while I present you conventionally to Miss Angela Brown. Miss Brown, this is Mr. Warner, a very good friend of mine."

"And yours too, if you wish it, Miss Brown," smiled Tommy.

"Great Scott! Mr. Warner, do you always work as fast as this?"

"Yes, when necessary. I'm an assistant moving picture director, you know. Do you live at the apartment where Virgie does, Miss Brown?"

"No, I only work there. Come, Miss Winston. We haven't much time."

"You can't squeeze me that easily. Have you a telephone where you live?"

CURZON THE HAUGHTY

LONDON, Jan. 11. (United Press.)—Marquis Curzon of Kedleston, British Foreign Minister, celebrates his 63rd birthday today, and received the congratulations of the Diplomatic corps. Curzon was trained to statecraft almost from the cradle and is probably England's greatest expert on foreign affairs, especially as regards the east. Of haughty and pompous bearing, he is not particularly popular from the personal standpoint but is widely respected and trusted. His outward manner was aptly hit off by an old schoolfellow many years ago in an irreverent couplet, which is still famous:

"My name is George Nathaniel Curzon.
I am a most superior person.
My hair is sleek, smooth is my cheek,
I dine at Bloomsbury once a week."
(Bloomsbury Palace, the home of the dukes of Marlborough, being the last word in princely mansions.)

I looked at Tommy in surprise. He had never said any of these things to me. He had the grace to color a little.

"Don't worry, Miss Winston. I understand your friend. His talk is just the brand of conversation they pass out in Los Angeles. It doesn't mean anything on the part of the man and the girl takes it for what it is worth."

"Just to prove that you are wrong, Miss Brown I am coming to see you."

"Not until I invite you."

"Make it soon then. If you don't I will have you followed till I get your address. Then, with flowers in my right hand and a box of candy in my left, I will invite myself."

Miss Brown smiled but did not reply. Tommy looked satisfied with the situation.

To my relief the frock was almost a duplicate of my other one. But even that bit of luck delighted me no more than the bill which was only $39.50. The red tape ever with my references given, and a fourth of the amount paid with the promise to pay a fourth every month for the next three, we left.

Tommy insisted that Miss Brown should squeeze in between us on the roadster seat and he kept up the same bantering conversation all the way back to our apartment where he dropped her and my package. Then in his own words "we burned up the road" to the studio.

"Say, Virgie, I'll take you to dinner tomorrow night, provided you get Miss Brown to go with us."

"No sircs, Tommy. If you fell with such a crash as that, you ask her. I have money enough to buy my own dinners for a while."

"Don't be a goose. I'll get another man if you say so," urged the clever Tommy.

"All right!" I agreed. "And if you can't get another man, I'll come anyway. I didn't mean to be so cattish. You've been so good to me."

"I like your friend, Virgie. She is the first girl in Los Angeles who refused me her address when I asked for it."

"Tommy, your lady friends are very unconventional."

"Meow! Meow!" he cat-called as he drove away.

Past Matrons Club

Holds Meeting

The Past Matrons Club of the Eastern Star Lodge met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Guy Flint with Mrs. Della Houston, Past Grand Matron, as guest of honor.

The regular business meeting was held and it was voted to donate $5 to the tuberculosis fund and $5 to the library fund. The ladies also decided to give a dinner for their husbands and for the past patrons and their wives in the near future.

New officers were elected and the retiring officers gave their annual reports. This club has been organized for one year and they have done very good work in charity as well as progressive work. At present there are 19 members. The officers elected for the ensuing year are the following:

Mrs. Guy Flint, president; Mrs. Leona Abraham, vice president; Mrs. J. C. Royers, secretary; and Miss Frances Howell, treasurer.

Art Exhibits to Be at Auto Show

One of the main attractions of the automobile show, will be the art and science exhibit of the city schools. Superintendent M. S. Hanna has arranged for exhibits from the art, domestic science and manual training departments of the school of the city and has appointed committees to arrange the display and take charge of the showing. The schools have been given the club rooms on the second floor of the armory and are preparing now to decorate the rooms and get them in readiness for the exhibit.

In addition to this the two troops of Boy Scouts are arranging for a display of their exhibits in the hallway leading into the balcony. The boys have some interesting exhibits prepared and will have them attractively arranged.

Mrs. J. B. Taylor and daughter, Gertrude, arrived here this morning from Portland to spend a short time visiting at the H. C. Parslow home. They are enroute to California where they will visit for several weeks.
