

Happy Parents Pour Out Their Thanks To Tanlac

That Tanlac is a wonderful medicine for delicate children is conclusively proven by the remarkable results accomplished in the cases of the three children shown in this picture.

Little Blanche Blair, of Providence, R. I., aged 13, gained 10 pounds; Regina McCabe, at right, age 9, of Scranton, Pa., gained 15 pounds; Little Richard Leary, Jr., of Philadelphia, who was very delicate, is now in fine, robust health. The statements made by their parents are as follows:

Mr. A. M. Blair, residing at 29 Wood street, Providence, R. I., said: "We are just so happy over the change Tanlac has made in our little girl that we can't do or say enough to show our appreciation. She had lost nearly 20 pounds in weight and looked so frail and weak that her mother and I were both almost worried sick over her condition. Since taking Tanlac, she has already gained 10 pounds, her color is better than it ever has been and she looks and acts like a different girl."

Mrs. Catherine McCabe, 414 Dickson Ave., Scranton, Pa., said: "The Tanlac left my little Regina in such a condition that I have no idea she could be with me now if it hadn't been for Tanlac. It is a mystery to me how she lived on the little she was eating and was so lifeless she never even cared to play with the dolls and toys she got at Christmas. Since taking Tanlac she is as hardy and well as any child could be and has gained 15 pounds in weight. I will always praise Tanlac for restoring our little girl's health."

Richard Leary, 2342 Palethorne St., Philadelphia, said: "There is no doubt in my mind but that Tanlac saved my little boy's life. For two years I wouldn't have been a bit surprised to have seen him drop off at any time. He had stomach trouble and many a time the gas pressed up into his chest until his heart palpitated so I thought sure he couldn't breathe but a few more gasps. But Tanlac gave him back to us strong and well and we will praise it to our dying day."

NOTE—Tanic Vegetable Pills are an essential and vitally important part of the Tanlac treatment. You cannot hope to get the most satisfactory results from Tanlac without first establishing a free and regular movement of the bowels. Tanlac Vegetable Pills are absolutely free from Calomel and are sold on a positive guarantee to give satisfaction.

Tanic is sold in Roseburg by W. F. Chapman's Pharmacy, and by leading druggists everywhere.

Wilbur Daniel Steele writes in Harper's of certain Algerian hillmen who practice surgery. "It is said that some of them are fakirs, as pure as you will find in any Christian land and that some are surgeons of an ability almost beyond the credence of an age steeped in the dogma of ether, sterile gauze, and green soap—men who will remove a cataract, graft a bone, even trepan a broken skull, doing it all without anesthetics, using instruments hammered out by the local smith and thick with rust, having recourse to the rug heap in the corner for bandages, and for antiseptic dressings to the dung pile in the court."

Hersey of horses! men do live. Some die, but the wonder is the other way, and the average of recoveries is said to be creditably high. Before we are through we shall be introduced to a man who had upward of a square inch of bone removed from his skull three years ago, and to a youth who, getting a charge of bird-shot fairly through the lower jaw, shows after four months hardly a scar. We are destined to sit at table with an old man who wields a knife with a right arm that the French doctors at Alo Tonta once condemned to immediate amputation—or else, they said, he would die. Being a Mohammedan, and so constrained by his faith from bodily dismemberment, he told them he would rather die at home in the hills. In the hills a man, who can neither read nor write the odd scraps of his materia medica jotted down in a worn three-cent notebook, took him in hand. He removed the upper half of the upper arm bone, shattered by shotgun fire, borrowed part of the femur of a jackal dog, slaughtered for the purpose, fitted the whole thing neatly together (all this while the patient looked on with a degree of interest to be imagined), and gave the old man back as sound a limb as one will find in the hills.

Not Such a Bad Mistake.
A farmer applied for $1,000 insurance on corn that had been stored in this barn. The application was made out as the farmer instructed. Through a clerical error the policy as returned read: "$1,000 on coal and other fuels when stored in building used as a private house."

PUT ANTIQUARIANS IN FLURRY

Historic Old English Building, Long Hidden Under "Improvements," Recently Brought to Light.

Lost for centuries, a building of historic and civic importance was discovered at Hereford, England, owing to the collapse of a modern chimney in the Booth Hall hotel during repairs. The building is an ancient, timber-built structure known as the Booth Hall. According to local antiquarians a license was granted in 1384 for the purchase of the site for a municipal building, and it was afterward used as a house of detention for freemen and bankrupts. When the chimney collapsed parts of the roof and the ceilings of upper bedrooms were brought down, and some fine oak beams and rafters were exposed. Closer examination showed the portions of carved and molded work. A member of the Hereford Woolhope club, a local society whose chief interest is the preservation of ancient work of the county, persuaded the owners to restore the building, and after the partitions and ceilings of the old attic bedrooms had been removed three handsome hammer-beam principals and two tie-beam principals were discovered, the hammer-beams having carved brackets, with figureheads, and the tie-beam principals with paneled king posts contained beautiful tracery panels. Curved wind-braces between the principals decorate and strengthen the structure.

BETROTHED AT ELEVEN YEARS

Anne of Austria a Mere Child When Her Marriage to King of France Was Arranged.

Anne of Austria, whose full name was Marie Anne Maurice, was the daughter of Philip III of Spain and Marguerite of Austria. Her marriage to Louis XIII, king of France, was arranged by the rulers of the two countries to bind them together. Anne was but eleven years old when she was betrothed to Louis, which plainly proves that she did not marry from choice.

The marriage ceremony took place in France. Louis was unable to meet his consort when she arrived in France, so he sent his favorite, Luynes, to meet her with a note from his majesty. At this time the dark clouds of unhappiness which were to mar their future married life were not visible, and Anne sent in answer to Louis' gallant note, a charming message in her own musical language.

The intrigues of state were far too sinister to allow much marital joy for the royal couple. Personal interests were swamped in the court interests. Anne outlived her husband, who left a son and heir to the throne of France. She was very sad at the death of Louis, who seemed to have a place in her heart, even though she had not married him from choice.

No Time for a Precedent.

A negro couple, about middle age, presented themselves to a justice of the peace the other day for the marriage ceremony. After they were duly pronounced man and wife, Mandy drew away to one side while Jack paid the justice. When they were out in the hall Mandy inquired:

"What'd you-all pay dat man fer marryin' us?"

"Jes what he said it was wuth," Jack replied.

"Well, what-all did he say it was wuth?" Mandy insisted.

"Five dollars!" Jack informed her.

"Five dollars!" exclaimed Mandy. "Man, man, dat ain't no way to do nothin'! You-all go right back dar and give dat marryin'-man another five dollars. Dis is de third time Ah been married an' Ah ain't nevah yet been married for less 'en ten dollahs, and Ah ain't gonna stat' now!"—Kansas City Star.

The Bitter End.

The expression "bitter end," as when one says, "I will follow it to the bitter end," is a nautical term, borrowed from a ship's cable. If you have ever been on a big ship you must have noticed two big pieces of wood sticking up out of the deck forward, alongside each other. They sometimes have a windlass between them, and they are used to secure the cable that goes to the anchor. These pieces of wood are called the bitts. When the ship comes to anchor and the cable is paid out, all that part of it which is abaft or behind the bitts is called the bitter end of the cable. In a storm or in poor holding ground for anchors the more cable that is paid out the better the anchor will hold, and when the captain is at all doubtful, he pays out his cable to the bitter end sooner than risk any harm to his ship.

His Last Chance.

The wedding was to take place that morning. Most people were of opinion that the bride, aged forty-five, had pursued the bridegroom, and finally cornered him. At any rate, she kept a watchful eye on him now.

On the way to the church the party came to a river, and an old man stood ready to ferry them across. Suddenly there was a loud cry. The bridegroom had fallen overboard.

"Save him! Save him!" shouted the bride.

"My dear girl," answered her father, "calm yourself; he's an excellent swimmer."

"Yes, of course he is," she replied, her voice growing louder and louder, "and—look! He's swimming hard away from us!"—London Tit-Bits.

Snow Light In "Sunny" California

OROVILLE, Cal., Jan. 16. (United Press.)—A snowball fight is good fun anywhere, but it is an especial treat if you live in California, where only about every thirty years there is a freak snowfall which gives the boys of the golden state a chance to indulge in the sport which the kids in the east enjoy yearly—along with the hardships of shovelling off the walks.

Oroville boys indulged in a snowball fight the other day. It was of a freak variety, for there was no snow on the ground, and plenty of sunshine.

A Western Pacific train arrived in Oroville after just coming down from the high Sierras. It was a freight train, and had been stalled for some time owing to a heavy snow storm.

The roofs of the box cars were covered with snow. The boys of the town were not slow to discover it, and soon the cars were covered with swarms of youngsters who were pelting each other with snowballs from car to car.

Eventually, by that instinct which seems to be inherent in the race of small boys, they began pelting pedestrians, who took it all in good fun. The fight lasted for an hour, by which time all the snow was exhausted.

Oakland Man Gets Homestead Right Restored

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 16.—By decision of the General Land Office just rendered, the homestead right of Charles Vernosky, of Oakland, Oregon, is restored. Mr. Vernosky had formerly made a homestead entry in Josephine county near Wolf Creek, but on account of error in ascertaining the boundary lines of his claim was misled, and discovered that he had located upon land which was practically of no value. He then relinquished the land back to the government, and the decision of the General Land Office directs the Register and Receiver of the local Land Office at Roseburg to allow his second homestead entry. The land which he secures by the new filing embraces 120 acres, and is located several miles west of Millwood.

Among those registered at the Hotel Empqua are the following: Z. N. Agee, Roseburg; A. D. Neer and wife, Hood River; M. S. James and wife, Medford; Dr. and Mrs. H. A. Canfield and son, Drain; F. S. Hamilton, Roseburg; R. Fate, Myrtle Creek; H. E. Hamrus, Marshfield; B. L. Hunt, Medford; and R. J. Olson, Silverton.
