BOVINE TUBERCULOSIS YIELDS TO ACTIVE TESTING CAMPAIGN

Accrediting a Herd as Free From Tuberculosis Increases Its Value to the Owner and the Community.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For many years after the agitation regarding bovine tuberculosis began, there were very few people who entertained the hope that it would ultimately be eradicated. Now, after many years of effort, first unsuccessful, but now giving great promise of success, there are many who firmly believe that the time is coming when this scourge of live stock will be conquered.

Tuberculosis May Be Banished.

This change of attitude has been brought about largely through the efforts of the bureau of animal industry of the United States Department of Agriculture, co-operating with the various state officials, which have been so successful that within a period of four years, during which the work has been directed toward ultimate elimination, several thousand herds have been accredited as being free from the disease and a number of stable areas in different states contain practically no tuberculous cattle. These results have demonstrated conclusively that, if sufficient funds are made available, this menace to human health and to the success of live-stock farming may be done away with in a practical manner.

Tuberculosis of cattle is one of the few farm problems that appeals with almost equal force to city people, for the healthfulness of milk and meat is of vital importance to them. This fact ought to make it easier to get the support necessary for putting through such a country-wide program against the disease. The cattle resources of the country are of the utmost importance, and measures to reduce the risk of loss represent nothing more than common sense.

Insurance Features Appeals.

There are more than 60,000,000 head of cattle in the country worth nearly $3,000,000,000. Aside from the health aspect of the problem, the insuring of this vast amount of wealth against loss ought to appeal to all classes of people as a necessary measure for the good of the nation.

At the present time various state and federal agencies are testing about 150,000 cattle a month and eliminating those that are found to be tuberculous, but it is expected that in the near future probably 1,000,000 head will be tested monthly by the combined forces. On that basis it is easy to see that great progress will be made toward getting rid of the plague, for the evidence obtained shows that the methods now in use are practical. When the campaign began most of the stress was laid on cleaning up individual herds, and this was the only practical thing to do as not enough sentiment had been aroused to make it possible to get general support for a campaign in any locality. But the advantage gained by cattle breeders who were able to advertise tuberculous-free herds was so great that skeptics were convinced, and now many localities have taken up all herds within their boundaries. In fact, at the present time this method of cleaning up circumscribed areas is the predominant one.

Nine counties in the United States have now completed one or more official tuberculosis tests of the cattle within those areas, and about 50 counties are now either engaged in this work or are getting ready to take it up. In some of the counties the supervisors appropriate funds to employ inspectors who help the state and federal officials. In others the farm bureaus have taken the job in hand.

Hillsdale County a Model.

One of the best examples of what a county can do in getting rid of this destructive disease is found in Hillsdale county, Mich. On October 24 a campaign was launched with the idea of cleaning out all the diseased cattle. A force of 30 county, state, and fed-conditions for the first half are covered in reports received by the bureau of Markets and Statistics, United States Department of Agriculture, from its agricultural statisticians in the various states.

Some corn still remains in the field in the different sections of the state which will be "hogged" and used for silage later in the season, the corn has been well established and will be a considerable help to the large crop much of which will be used for silage. It is expected that the total crop will be a record one.

Very little corn is being planted for winter wheat and rye. A good crop of snow is proving beneficial to the wheat crop throughout the western and northwestern states. Unusually freezing and thawing conditions in the eastern and central states have done much to increase the damage to the wheat crop. In Kansas, but the condition is very poor in the western states. More moisture is needed in Nebraska. Recent rains have broken the long drought which had been in force for several weeks, but due to the previous unseasonable conditions the abandonment of the crop is being quite generally reported. Recent rains have broken the long drought which had been in force for several weeks, but due to the previous unseasonable conditions the abandonment of the crop is being quite generally reported.

condition of the rye crop is generally reported as favorable in the leading production areas. Considerable damage to the rye crop is reported in Nebraska.

The plucking and ginning of cotton crop is practically completed. Due to the favorable weather-conditions was completed earlier than usual and fields have been unusually clean, resulting in an unusually clean and good yield. Non-cotton production has been established in a number of counties in Texas where pink bollworm infestation had been discovered.
