I, Ira B. Riddle, County Clerk of Douglas County, State of Oregon, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct statement of the financial condition of Douglas County, Oregon, for the six months ending December 31, 1921, as shown by the books and reports in my office, care and custody of me, as I verily believe.

WITNESS my hand and official seal this 24th day of January, 1922.

IRA B. RIDDLE, County Clerk, Douglas County, Oregon.

Masher "Dates" Matron

ALBEM, Jan. 30.—Fred Manfredini, a Salem roofing worker, felt the urge for companionship Saturday night and elected to get him a date. According to the police, he approached a woman who was sitting near the corner of State and High streets. He made a proposal. "Meet me at the corner near the city hall in half an hour," the woman suggested.

Thirty minutes later Manfredini was at the corner and was subsequently arrested by Officer Minto on a disorderly conduct charge.

The woman to whom Manfredini made overtures was Mrs. Elsie Elsmann, local police matron.

Manfredini was released on $20 bail. He is cited to appear in the police court this afternoon.

EVERGREEN GRANGE NOTES.

A noteworthy fringe event was held Saturday night at the Evergreen Grange hall, Jan. 28. One that will long be remembered by everyone one of the patrons and visitors present.

After the usual routine of business was over, the brothers began to don their kitchen aprons and get busy. The sisters were told to go "way back and sit down." Then good things began to arrive, two big turkeys, pies, cakes, salads, and too many other things to mention. Such a feast fully convinced us that the brothers were first class cooks.

Several members from South Deer Creek Grange were present and several others invited from the community. A jolly good social hour was spent and all returned home feeling that the evening was a success from every angle.

KITTY'S GUIDANCE

Kitty numbed over the next few scenes which were mostly between Theodore Stratton and Maud Sanson or Theodore Stratton and somebody else and concerned Maud Sanson's trying to make him jealous and so bring him back to her. Then she hurriedly glanced over some scenes of mine with the juvenile which were supposed to make Stratton think that I was just a baby vamp. This was to be brought about by Maud Sanson's stories to Stratton.

"Who is the juvenile?" asked Kitty interestedly.

"I don't know. I didn't meet him," I answered, not realising how important that might be.

"Well, you've got to be careful of that young man who hogs the camera. He certainly would do so, Virginia. If it were anybody but you."

"Why, Kitty, you speak so cryptically."

"For heaven's sake, Virgie, don't get high-brow. I'm speaking sensibly. That juvenile has got a fat part in those scenes and only the interest of Theodore Stratton and his commands to his director will keep you facing the camera."

"You see the story that Maud Sanson tells has to do with what you say to him, and he will be always edging around so his face will be toward the camera. Don't let him do it under any circumstances."

"Goodness! There are a lot of things to learn."

"You said something, kid, you said something," murmured Kitty thumbing the pages quickly.

Again she stopped and looked at me in surprise. "And do you mean to tell me that you think that your part in this is a small one? Why, you run away with everything in this scene."

"Do you know how to swim?"

"No."

"Then you had better learn immediately."

"Why?"

"Well, you will have to get overboard in that evening dress of yours."

"It doesn't say so in the script."

"I know it. But no director in the world would let a chance like this go by."

"Why, Virgie, if Maud Sanson stands for all this she is as tired of Theodore Stratton as he is of her."

"And though the script says nothing about your going overboard while Stratton is carrying Maud Sanson ashore in his manly arms from off that wrecked yacht, there is no director in the business who would not have you floating in the water in your clinging white dress, your hair trailing out on the waves back of you."

Sutherland News

ALBEM, Ore., Jan. 30.—A deal has just been closed whereby William D. Duke and his son, George, have taken over the Young interest in the one-story brick block at the corner of Central avenue and State street, Sutherland, the consideration being approximately $10,000. The building has a frontage of 50 feet on Central avenue and 100 feet on State street, and contains two storerooms, one occupied by the Sutherland meat market, the other by McCreery Bros. hardware.

Dr. R. J. Hall, who has conducted the Sutherland Sanitarium the past two years, expects to leave in about ten days for Dayton, Oregon, where he will locate permanently.

Jack Root is nursing two badly lacerated fingers as the result of getting them caught in the gearing of a machine at the Oregon Growers' plant one day recently.

Katherine Scheff, M. D., who has been residing in Sutherland the past two or three months, looking after her two children who are attending the local academy, returned to Portland today, where she expects to reside permanently.

F. M. Jones is building a residence on South Calapool street, which he will occupy with his sister, Mrs. Greenough.

Mayor E. H. Rathwell stated today that he expects the new city water works system will be completed and in shape to supply pure well water to citizens within a few days.
