

OBITUARY

Lulu M. Shipplehouse passed away at the home of her mother at 527 E. Harrison street, Portland, Oregon, February 5, 1922, at the age of 24 years, 5 months and 12 days.

Lula Drollinger was born August 29, 1857, at Roseburg, Oregon, and was married to Henry Shipplehouse July 21, 1915, at Portland, where she has resided until her death. She is survived by her father, Wayne Drollinger and family of Roseburg, Oregon, her mother, Mrs. Frank Gilbert and family of Portland, and her husband, Henry Shipplehouse, also of Portland.

While the hearts of her parents and friends are left lonely and sad, yet in the midst of their great sorrow they have occasion for great joy for their loved one has passed to rest—to glory—to be with Christ, which is for better. The Master came and plucked it and transplanted it into the Paradise above, of a sweet disposition, a lovely character, the influence of which will live in the world for many years. "Of such is the Kingdom and heaven."

LOOKING GLASS HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The literary society met last Friday evening. George Russell played several selections on the Victrola. The subject debated was "Resolved, that the United States government should make a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of tobacco. The speakers on the affirmative side were Miss Rotta Meredith, Miss Ethel McCormack and A. H. Marsh; on the negative side were T. W. Morgan, Ernest Voornies and O. G. Rogers. The affirmative was victorious. The high school will entertain the society the next meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Hodges left for California, where they will remain for the winter.

A surprise party was given on Mrs. Arthur Marsh last Tuesday evening by some of her many friends. The evening was spent in music, singing and playing pit. At a late hour refreshments were served. Everyone enjoyed a good time. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. George Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Meredith, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Russell, Prof. Whitte, Mrs. Smith, Misses Mary Elizabeth Marsh, Rotta Meredith, Ethel McCormack, Alice Dostie, Myra, Ivor Erickson, Roy Erickson, Ray Erickson, George Russell Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Marsh.

Miss Bernice Jackson returned to her home last Monday from Riddle, where she had been visiting with her sister, Mrs. A. W. Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. George Russell gave a dance in their apple house Saturday evening. The house was beautifully decorated with fir boughs and red streamers. All the people came dressed as school children, the ladies bringing lunches in tin pails and pasteboard boxes. They danced until 12 o'clock.

Fullerton Societies Meet Friday Eve.

Friday evening at 7:30 the Fullerton Junior association held its meeting while the P. T. A. met in another room. The Juniors enjoyed the following program: Song by a group of girls; readings by Evelyn Hauser, Katie Finley and Gladys Finley; a talk on "Beautifying the West Side" by Mr. McElhinny. Mrs. Runyan and Mrs. Guthrie were supervisors. The next meeting will be in March. Mr. Foster itutner and Mrs. Louis Kohlhaugen will assist the Juniors.

The outstanding feature of the meeting of the P. T. A. was an interesting talk by Mr. McElhinny on the work of the Rotary Club and the possibilities of beautifying the West Side.

Reports were given by the following committees: Book, sewer, playground, park and entertainment. The entertainment committee is asking the cooperation of all the P. T. A.'s in the city in giving an entertainment for the benefit of the public library. A committee for this purpose met Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Starlight Idea by Gene Gibson. The Thrilling and Dramatic Story of Virginia Fairber's Ambition!

COMPARING NOTES "Oh, I am sorry you recognized him, Kitty!" I exclaimed when she told me of her meeting with Julian Thornelyko, the man who had wronged her.

"It wouldn't have made any difference. He would get me just the same." Kitty spoke with a solemnity that frightened me. I couldn't understand.

"What do you mean by that, Kitty?" "That I might just as well go back. There is no use of my trying to escape him. I feel doomed."

"Why don't you confide in John Storm and ask his help?" "Oh, Virgie, I couldn't. He never would understand as you do."

"Perhaps he would understand better, Kitty. He has had lots more worldly experience than I. He is a man. He must know a man's nature better than I, and you say he is sympathetic itself."

"Tell him for me, Virgie," she pleaded. "Oh, my dear, the story would lose half its value if another told John for you. It is your story and if I am not mistaken, it is you in whom John Storm is interested. You should tell him. It is not that I want to avoid something disagreeable, Kitty, but because I think you will be much more effective than anyone else could be."

"Well, I will try. What time are we going to leave in the morning?" "Whenever you are ready."

"I think—" Kitty added up to me shyly and, with her cheek against mine, whispered: "I think I would like to go to his church."

I suppressed an exclamation and managed to say calmly: "All right. We will get up early and drive directly to his church: Is John Storm going back to Riverside tonight?"

"He has already gone. He went by train. But what happened to you, my dear, today? I have been so full of my own troubles that I have hardly thought about you. You will forgive, won't you?"

"There is nothing to forgive. I guess the day went along as usual." I felt my voice grow flat and toneless as I spoke.

"You are not telling me all," Kitty responded quickly, recognizing unspoken words in the tone of my voice. But, sympathetic as she was, I could not tell her that Theodore Stratton had told me he loved me and then, because he had found that Maud Saxon was growing jealous, he had become cold and almost a stranger all within the six hours we had been working.

The next day broke radiantly in a perfect burst of color all over the sky. I had not slept well, and I was sure that Kitty suffered likewise.

I arose first and Kitty soon followed. "Morning, Virgie! I'll give you the bathroom while I fix a little breakfast for us." It was then that I realized that I was very hungry and had had no dinner the night before.

I looked at Kitty and decided that she, too, had a lean and hungry look. "I'm hungry, Kitty. I didn't have my dinner last night."

"Neither did I, Virgie. There are plenty of eggs, strawberries and real cream. We'll have a regular feast. Get into your tub quickly."

After a cold bath I would not feel unhappy. Again I felt how dependent one's mind, one's heart and one's spirit—the things one calls one's soul—is upon the material body. And I thought more about it as I saw Kitty begin to perk up as she ate her strawberries and drank her second cup of coffee, while I buttered a third piece of toast for her from off the electric stove placed between us on the table.

TWO HOURS APART, BUT CRIME TOTAL DIFFERS.

(By International News Service.) NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Because New York is full of crime and Philadelphia is quiet and peaceful it costs 210 per cent more to operate a baggage delivery truck here than it does in the Quaker City, according to Samuel W. F. Draper, president of the New York Transfer company. In New York, two hours distant from Philadelphia, every truck must have a chauffeur and a helper, while in Philadelphia "you can leave a wagon on the streets with some security."

GIRLS IN "KNICKERS" BARRED FROM DANCES.

DISSOLUTION NOTICE Having sold my interest in the Liberty Garage at Sutherlin, Oregon, to Kenneth Lake, I hereby notify all parties owing the firm to come in and settle their bills as soon as possible. Parties having bills against the firm should present them at once.

What the gods refuse to do, a young girl will. When Cupid throws his arrows in to the ash can with a disgusted grimace, leave it to the girl in the starched frock to take up the good work where the little fellow left off.

Of such thoughts, fancifully woven and brightly colored, Universal made "Don't Get Personal," the Marie Prevost picture playing at the Astoria theatre tonight for the last time.

Marie Prevost is an expert at portraying the flapper, to start with. Maybe that is partly because she is right at that age herself and can't go wrong in depicting it. And, being a beautiful girl as well as a clever comedienne, she can hardly help being charming and alluring.

As a queen in exile from her petty kingdom, "somewhere in Europe," Constantine simply makes an appealing and winsome little heroine in "Such a Little Queen," which is the current feature at the Madison theatre tonight. When her throne, throne and revolution disrupts her life, the country, she flees to America, with her dog and her bird and her very head encased crown, but no other practical assets, save that wonderful personal quality which Hollywood termed "what damned charm."

Of course, the darkest hours of her exile precede a very fine dawn, and all ends well with the little queen returned again to her old throne.

The final scenes for Dorothy Dandridge's "Eyes Without Faces" were filmed at Redwood, Cal. In the east of this picture, which is a western of the most up-to-date type, are such well known players as Jack Mower, Frank Campbell, Fred Hunt, Will H. Waller, Howard Hanson, George Fisher, Clarence Burton, and Fred Hunter.

FILM SMILES and so forth By Hi Speed. SOME FILM TITLES TELL MORE THAN THE STORY.

NO wonder the price of footwear stays high—so much leather is used in constructing film titles. Among the current lot we have "Leather Pushers," "High Heels" and "Shoes," along with Constance Talmadge reappearing in "Mrs. Leming's Boots."

Solnick News photographed a rabbit drive at Pasco, Wash. The result should be a good run on the screen.

From the number of importations it would seem that the Germans intend to pay the American indemnity in films.

"Should a Wife Work?" is a new way of referring to the unemployment situation.

Ralph Ince knew the moving picture business "when." He has been a part of it for fourteen years.

"The Love of Pharaoh" is a new film. Now for a serial, "The Wives of Solomon."
