Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I am eighteen years old, and have a chum who is the same age. We have gone together for nearly a year and always gotten along fine. She went away about a month ago, and while she was gone I started in going with a certain man here that she did not know. After she came back she started in trying to cut me out. She would invite him down to her house, and everything like that, and has almost quit being friends with me at all. What can I do about it? I did think a lot of this man, and don't want him to go with her. What could I do? SAD GIRL.

Ans. If I were you I would not do anything. If he wants to go with you, he will, or if he wants to go with the other girl, he will. If she was a true friend to you, she would not try tactics of this kind with friends that were yours first.

STATE PRESS COMMENT

Our New Bosses.

Candidates for political office, particularly aspirants for gubernatorial honors, are unusually shy about announcing their candidacies this year. The reason is that most of those who consider themselves available are seeking the endorsement of steersmen of certain secret societies who have united to exploit the politicians, thus reversing the customary situation wherein the politicians exploit the societies.

This organization calls itself a federation of patriotic societies, evidently using the same definition of patriotism that the profiteers did during the war, defined by Samuel Johnson in his lexicon as "the last refuge of scoundrels." Who the patriots are, is not vouchsafed to the public, but spokesmen of the Ku Klux Klan, the A. P. A. and similar societies appealing to racial or religious prejudice and bigotry, are among its avowed organizers.

It is claimed by the secret society leaders that the recent public school election in Portland was a demonstration of their power, that they have 40,000 members in the city of Portland whose votes they can deliver in a body to who-so-ever is fortunate enough to measure up to their requirements, and they pose as the real arbiters of politics. It is said that their claims are taken seriously by prospective candidates, who have cheerfully swallowed their pride and self-respect, if they had any, and humbled themselves upon the carpet before the small coterie of would-be dictators.

The election then is not to be determined by the fitness of the candidate or his politics, but by the dictum of a few who assume to do the thinking for the rank and file who subscribe to proscribe those who exercise their constitutional privilege of differing in religious belief or who happen to be of different racial origin.

Such fanatical organizations are unpatriotic to a degree and un-American. They are a recrudescence of the medieval intolerance which devastated Europe by civil war and deluged the land with the best blood of the people. Their revival in the 20th century in free America is an anachronism and a menace to democracy.

Pride ever goeth before a fall. Just as we emerged victorious from the war boasting America superior to the world, draft statistics revealed that 50 per cent of the adult population tested mentally 12 years old and under. And just as we began to think that the Oregon electorate had demonstrated its capacity for government by smashing corrupt party machines and abolishing political bosses, we find secret societies of zealots wearing grotesque regalia banding together to seize government!

However, despite the feeble-minded and the fanatics, the commonsense and good judgment of the people will prevail as it has in the past, and the effort to ride to power on prejudice and passion will collapse as it did in the old "know-nothing" days and similar occasions since. Such endorsement will react in defeat and the politician who seeks it, earn the fate in prospect.—Salem Capital Journal.

A New Era in Naval Supremacy.

Among the many direct consequences of the Washington conference, one stands out as we review it as a whole—the voluntary surrender by Great Britain of naval supremacy over the world by acceptance of equal rank with the United States. By the naval limitation treaty these two nations agree to maintain navies of equal strength, each superior to that of any other nation, each adequate for defense, but the two combined not strong enough for successful attack on the next strongest navy—that of Japan. This is the best assurance that Great Britain could give that its naval power will not be used for dictation or for conquest, but is to be used in conjunction with the navies of other nations, chiefly the United States, to police the seas and to keep peace.—Oregonian.

Bobbing It.

There's a world of difference in bobbed hair.

There is the straight, coarse hair that hangs severely over the ears and that seems to rattle when the wearer moves about and that makes you think at once of a Russian Karanina, and then there is the soft, fluffy hair that simply wont stay put and that seems to make a cloud bank frame for the face. One style softens the features, one brings out the unevenness of the rock quarry. But either style will cover the ears so modesty can be conserved at the same time. But we can see no less of individuality even were the head shaved.—Benton County Courier.

It Did Something New.

The first car load of apples was shipped out of Hood River in the autumn of 1900. That now famed apple growing valley was then unheard of. A demonstration of the strides it has made is this: Up to the present 2710 cars of 1921 Hood River apples of the commercial pack have gone to markets from London to Portland and from the continent of Europe to all important markets in the United States. In addition enough cars of apples that did not measure up for commercial pack are sufficient to increase the total shipped to more than 2000 cars.

The number of boxes in that first car 22 years ago was about 800. They included various small consignments gathered together from the small and widely scattered orchards.

The number of boxes in the commercial pack already shipped this year from the 1921 crop is 2,300,-000. The total number of boxes for 1921, including commercial pack and other grades, will reach 3,000,000, and may go to 3,500,000.

Nobody yet knows what the average price for the 1921 crop will be. It is certain to be not less than $1.60 a box and it may go to $1.65. If you multiply 3,000,000 to 3,500,000 boxes by $1.60 to $1.65 a box, you will get a pretty close idea of the proportion to which the apple industry of Hood River has grown in 22 years of actual production.—Oregon Journal.

Pay-Up Week.

Many communities over the country are observing "Pay-up Weeks" as a means of restoring business to a firmer foundation and the matter of designating a week in Astoria for the liquidating of old bills is being considered. If it is observed generally and in the spirit intended the results will be beneficial for all. The theory back of the move is that if you pay your bills, the man who gets your money can pay his and so on indefinitely. It is a good scheme and it will work if people understand it and co-operate. Incidently this is a time when co-operation is necessary if the wheels of business are to be kept turning as they should.—Astoria Budget.

A good deal of building is going on in Eugene now, much more than at this time last year. That is a good sign of increasing population and substantial faith in the future. What Eugene needs, however, most of all is more substantial progress, since that is what any community must depend upon for permanent support after it reaches a certain size. Merely to call attention to this fact, and to encourage the industries already here, the Guard has been running a series of articles on Eugene industries, that are contributing to our growth and prosperity, and it should be the endeavor of every citizen to seek to increase that list before the present year passes. —Eugene Guard.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

FRUIT GROWER GIVES ADVICE.

Editor News-Review:

Many fruit growers have asked me why so much fruit is grown that does not measure up to the given standard of quality? I am answering through the columns of the News-Review, to enable the largest number of interested growers to benefit thereby. The cause is that many fruit growers do not know the business from knowledge or experience. To grow quality fruit requires an extensive knowledge, and long years of experience. It would be impossible to give the many minor factors associated with the production of quality fruits in one short column, therefore a few generalities must suffice. The four major factors requisite to grow quality fruits are, cultivation, fertilizing, pruning and spraying. Follow the spraying program prescribed by the state board of horticulture; prune according to the character of your trees and the nature of your soil; fertilize with nitrate and lime; and cultivate early when danger of frosts are gone; if you prune heavy, cultivate deep. Always prune your trees to conform with these characteristics: Leave room for light and sunshine in tops of trees; this holds the action of the carbohydrates above the nitrate action. Remember, there is only one royal road, and that is knowledge that comes only from study and experience. Yours truly,

LOUIS H. BERGOLD.

Hard Time Party In Church Parlors

The Presbyterian Young People enjoyed a hard time party given Friday night in the church parlors. Decorations of hearts and other Valentine Day ornaments were used about the rooms. All present were gorgeously costumed. Prize winners were Marian Nichols and William Amos. Miss Nichols wore a plaid dress and her hair in braids representing a very neglected school girl. William Amos was H. Percival Toughnut professional safe cracker. He wore a derby hat, the top of which was mostly holes, and his clothes consisted of many patches. Different games were played throughout the evening one of which was newly introduced and called the Quaker dance. This caused much merriment. Late in the evening delicious refreshments were served.

Additional Jurors For February Term

Six prospective jurors have been chosen to replace those who have been excused or have declined to serve. Of the six women chosen three have rejected service and on the second drawing three more were chosen. They are Mrs. A. E. Churchill, Roseburg; Edith R. Heubert, Roseburg; and Lula Rose, Roseburg. These three women have been called for jury duty but have the right of refusal. Two men were excused and it was found that one has died. The three chosen to replace them are C. L. Davis, Canyonville; John L. Larson, Sutherlin; and Edward T. Beeson, Myrtle Creek.
