POWER OF AN ATTRACTIVE CITY.

Instead of spending more of their energy on direct solicitation of new industries, many business men's organizations work principally to make their home place a desirable city to live and do business in. They believe that if they have good schools, good attreets, good stores, parks and playgrounds, good railroad facilities, etc., the city will be so attractive to live in that it will draw to folks don't print in the paper. Instead of spending more of their energy on direct solicitastreets, good stores, parks and playgrounds, good railroad facilities, etc., the city will be so attractive to live in that it will draw population by its momentum. Many people feel these factors are the principal element in growth. Business men have their own personal lives to lead, and they like to settle in communities where they and their families have advantages. They will go out of their way to locate in a town where modern facilities of living are developed. Advantages of this kind are an exponent of the state of mind of a city. They show that a place is progressive, disposed to take advantage of opportunities. A man feels in settling in such a place that he is identifying himself with something that is growing, and will gain by making himself part of a developing community.

The people of Roseburg can feel that whatever effort they put into community improvement, helps develop the city along industrial and business lines. Business men are three times as likely to settle in a place that has good schools, for instance, as in one where the educational facilities are poor. The physical exteriors of a town help in the same way. If a city looks seedy with littery streets and run-down buildings, a business man would say that it was a dead town and he would shy away from it. But if the clean up spirit and the attempt at beautification are in evidence, the town makes a favorable impression. Business drifts into it almost without effort.

THE COMMUNITY CHEST IDEA.

Many people have become sick of "drives" for philanthropic enterprises. Yet every community has a certain number of public service projects that must be supported. The useful charities that have relieved suffering, and given struggling young people a chance in life, can not be permitted to go down. There are many appeals from people who need help. If folks in comfortable circumstances have any heart at all, they must listen to these calls, welcome the solicitors who serve in behalf of them, and contribute in fair proportion to their means. A good many cities, realizing ! that a constant succession of money raising campaigns irritates the public, have planned the community chest idea, in which one drive shall be made for all public causes, with the idea of raising an amount equal to what each society could get by separate canvasses. It is easier to get canvassers and to cover a town systematically where the job is being done for all community causes for the year. Also people will give more freely if they feel that they are not going to be bothered by constant solicitation. Some causes of course could not be included in a general community canvass. Each church would have to solicit among its adherents only. Some charities should gain sufficient support out of small groups of people. But when it comes to the general needs of a community for philanthropic and improvement causes, there is an advantage in having one drive each year cover the needs of the place, and assure adequate support to all such movements. The But when one declares she walked public would appreciate having the thing done in one job. Also it is better efficiency to do the thing in one effort, rather than keep sending people over the same ground.

Blame for injury depends on how much chance the victim had to make himself safe.

"The first time a mule kicks me," said a wise man, "it's the mule's fault. If it happens again, it's my fault."

A good many people are staying within kicking distance of tea or coffee, who have had a chance to know better.

They have learned that tea or coffee at night keeps them awake. They know it whips up the nerves. They know what medical opinion has so often said about the effect of the drug element in tea and coffee upon the nervous system-and how indigestion, headaches, high blood pressure and various ills so often follow the use of tea or coffee.

Knowing this, they fail to keep out of the way. Where does the blame belong, then, when the final break-down comes?

There's safety in Postum, and charm, too. Postum has a full. rich flavor much like that of the better grades of coffee, and it is free from any harmful element whatsoever.

Whether or not you've had your warning from tea or coffee, why not step over on the safe side? Why not do what so many others have done-try Postum for ten days, learn how delightful and satisfying it is - and learn how much improvement there can be for you?

You can get Postum wherever good food and drink are sold or served, and it only takes a word from you to your grocer or restaurant waiter, to make this move to the safe side, at
